We perceive by a late number of the Planet that in the proprietorship of that Journal a change has taken place. Mr. Miller having sold out to Messrs. Stephenson and Stuart. Mr. Miller has for a long time been connected with the Press at Chatham, and has always displayed considerable energy and enterprise in his profession.

We perceive that the new proprietors have made a step in the right direction by adopting the cash system, we hope all others will follow their example.

We have been requested to draw attention to the sale of Real Estate, on account of the "Essex Building Society," advertised to come off on the 5th August next, and to state that the same will be disposed of without fail on that day.

Parties desirous of purchasing real estate could not do better than to avail themselves of the opportunity that will then be offered for investment.

Wreck of the "Arabian."

PASSENGERS ALL SAFE.

Early on Wednesday morning during a furious gale from the east, the steamer Arabian on her upward trip from Murray Bay went ashore on Madame Island. She had anchored in the stream but the storm drove her from her anchorage she drifted ashore, stern first, on a level rocky bottom; her keel and engine guards being carried away. The passengers were somewhat alarmed, but seeing the position of the steamer and that she was well provided with life-preservers, their fears were allayed. The passengers slept ashore under canvas on Wednesday night. The steamer Lady Head went to their assistance on Thursday evening, and brought them to Quebec on Friday morning. The passengers have presented Capt. Murdoch of the Arabian, with a complimentary address.

The "Chronicle" gives the following additional particulars in regard to the effects of the gale:—

The pilot of the brig "Radical" reports two vessels ashore off Kamouraska; one of them the "Currency" is on the upper end of Crow Island, and the other, same one knows, is on the inside of Grosse Isle. He also reports a vessel ashore at Patrick's Hole name unknown. Accounts by telegraph from L'Islet, received in Quebec on Thursday forenoon, say that the brigantine "St. Ann," Hoffman, is wrecked on Goose Island with the crew, it is feared, have all perish d. She is laden with materials from some wreck, viz: rigging, chains and anchors. The tug steamer "Napoleon III," left Quebec on Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, to go to the assistance of the barque "Currency," ashore on Crow Island. Ship "Brittania," of Bath, before reported ashore near Saugeeny, was floated on the 18th inst and was taken to Quebec during the week.

Jean Baptiste Dorval, the Pilot of the Montreal, was arrested on Saturday, at Three Rivers.

The Notorious Townsend.

From statements appearing in the Hamilton Spectator and other journals, it appears that the identification of the prisoner confined in the Cayuga gaol, upon charges of murder, &c., as the notorious Townsend, is still a difficult matter. Our opinion is that if the prisoner be not Townsend himself, he could ere this establish that negative fact by some proof. But we learn that all the proof he has thought fit to adduce as to his nonidentity as Townsend is the evidence of two friends of Townsend living in Chatham, and happening to be in Cleveland in his favor. We will ask how did those parties come there, and what knowledge had he of their existence or whereabouts, previously? He has published a couple of letters over his signature, and two or three other persons have also written in his defence, and say he is not the man. All the letters we have read do not convince us that he is an innocent man. On the contrary, we are strongly inclined to think that Townsend is in the right place and where he ought to have been long ago. Men in desperate positions will resort to many feasible and specious devices to plead their innocence. The man in custody seems to be skilled in subterfuge and quibbling when common honesty and fair testimony are only required on his part to establish his innocence. Under all the circumstances it is well to give him that chance to vindicate himself which he seems to desire and to make himself appear as McHenry instead of Townsend, which we very much doubt he will fail to accomplish. —Weekly Dispatch.

Verdict.

We, Duncan Macpherson, Foreman, William Benning, Benjamin Cole, Thomas Andrews, Micheal White, Oliver Robitaille, John Jones, jun'r, William Hull, Henry Wilson, Francis Doyle, Chas. Alain, Gustavus Temple, and Charles Roger, Jurors empanelled to enquire and ascertain the cause of the death of James McLaren, Christina Alexandria Robb, an unknown female child about 4 years of age, an unknown woman aged about 40, Louis Dupois of Sorel, Margaret Macpherson, wife of John Macbeth, Jessie Spence, Simon Hall, Edward Christian, and about one hundred and forty others or thereabout, and the circumstances which led to such death, beg to represent—

1st. That these persons having been passengers on board of the steamer, called the Montreal, then plying between the ports of Quebec and Montreal, on the 29th of June last, as a passenger vessel, were, to save themselves from death by fire, in consequence of the conflagration of the steamer, shortly after she left the port of Quebec, and when in a part of the River St. Lawrence about a mile above the Island Caprouge, either in part or of necessity, forced to leap into the river, after the vessel had got aground upon a ledge of rock, and were thereby drowned.

2nd.—That the steamboat Montreal, before mentioned, was not equipped in the manner required by the law in that behalf, viz: 1st, not found on board, as a boat attached to, and belonging to her, for passengers, a life boat made of metal, fire proof, and in all respects a good, substantial, safe sea boat, capable of sustaining inside and outside fifty persons, with life lines attached to the gunwale, at suitable distances, well furnished with oars, nor any life preservers of suitable material, or floats—well adapted for preserving life, for each and every passenger on board, in any convenient or accessable place in before mentioned steamer Montreal, on the day of which she was destroyed by fire, and that, Joseph Hall, the owner of the vessel, John Wilson, Junior, or the Younger, and all employed on board of the before-mentioned steamer Montreal at the time of her destruction by fire on the evening of the 29th of June last are chargeable with the crime of manslaughter.

3rd.—That a dangerous fire having broken out on the 26th day of June 1857, on board of the steamer "Montreal," she being then filled with immigrants and other passengers, to the number of nearly four hundred souls, before the said steamer Montreal had passed several places where she might safely and prudently have been run ashore, as regards preservation of the lives of the passengers, and that no exertion was made, worthy of the name, nor any extraordinary anxiety manifested for the safety of the passengers, by John Charles Baldwin, the master, Jean Baptiste Dorval, the first pilot, and and Louis Roberge, the mate, of the before mentioned steamer Montreal, after the destruction of the vessel was inevitable, and the passengers had been seized with panic, they each and all of them are chargeable with the crime of manslaughter.

4th.—The Jury strongly recommend that it may hereafter be made imperative on the owners of all steamboats to have the encasement of boilers constructed of iron instead of wood, as at present; and that the law regarding the inspection of boilers, machinery, fire escapes and hulls be rigidly enforced, and the enactments of the law, relative to boats and life preservers, on board of every passenger and ferry steamer, be strictly carried out.

5th.—The Jury censure in the strongest terms the conduct of John Wilson, senior, the controlling agent of the Montreal, for refusing to allow his boats to be inspected by officers whose duty is was, satisfied that his refusal to do so has in a great measure, contributed to the disaster, which has resulted in the loss of over than two hundred and fifty three lives.

And the Jury, now summing up the whole, conclude upon their oaths, and now say:—That John Wilson, the younger, John Charles Rudolf, Jean Baptiste Dorval, and Louis Roberge, before mentioned, in manner and form aforesaid, feloniously, wilfully and unlawfully did kill and slay against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her Crown and dignity, the persons herein-before mentioned.

William Benning	Benjamin Cole,
Thomas Andrews,	Michael White,
Oliver Robitaille,	John Jones, Jr.
William Hull,	H. W. Wilson,

On the rendition of the verdict the Coroner immediately issued his warrant for the apprehension of the parties presented by the Jury, with the exception of Capt. Rudolf, who was already in custody. The mate, Louis Roberge, was arrested shortly afterwards, and committed to gaol.

Terrible Tragedy.

Jealousy, murder, arson, and probable suicide.

(From the Cincinnati Gazette.)

At an early hour yesterday morning, the city was startled by the announcement that Mr. Nicholas T. Horton, an old, well known, and influential citizen, of the firm of Nicholas T. Horton & Co., manufacturers of enamelled grates and marbleized iron, had been brutally murdered at his private residence, on Ohio Avenue, Vine Street Hill, in the suburbs of the city. The news spread, and by 9 o'clock hundreds of our citizens were anxiously questioning each other, and marvelling, if the account of the bloody tragedy, as popularly given, could be true. A number of them soon repaired to the house of Mr. Horton, and there beheld a scene well calculated to freeze their blood, and bend a sanguinary tale they were, at first, prepared to believe.

After Mr. Horton had been awakened a little after 4 o'clock by a heavy smoke pouring into his chamber, and supposing the house to be on fire, he rose and opened the door and went into the hall, where he was encountered by a German serving man, for some time in his employ, named Joseph Loefner, who struck him in the abdomen with a butchers knife, causing a deep and ghastly wound, that proved fatal a few minutes after, and then ran out of the house.

Mrs. Horton's mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Ann Smith, also wakened by the smoke, came into the hall and beheld Mr. H. bleeding profusely, and heard him exclaim, "Mother, I'm stabbed." Mrs. Smith, terribly alarmed, ran to the window and cried "murder and fire," and Mr. H. fell in a dying state to the floor.

The neighbours soon rushed into the house, and found Mr. H. not quite dead, and the family bordering upon a state of phrenzy. They then looked about for the guilty party, and soon perceived Joseph Loefner near the gun house, on the premises, whom they pursued, when he lay down. They came up to him and found him bleeding profusely from both his wrists and from a deep gash in the throat. They asked him if he had murdered Horton, and if he had wounded himself, and he expressed assent, but could not speak.

It was learned a short time after, in a manner that will be understood from the depositions below, that previous to murdering Mr. Horton, he had strangled his own wife, residing at No. 49 Vine street, and then set fire to Mr. H.'s house, with the expectation of wreaking revenge upon its proprietor for an imagined wrong. Having accomplished his fell purpose, he had an idea of destroy himself by opening the principal veins near his wrists, and cutting his throat with a knife.

Loefner and his wife had both been employed as domestics in the house of Mr. Horton, the former for nearly two and the latter for three or four years. They often quarrelled, and Loefner was in the habit of abusing her, which resulted in him disagreeing with his family of Mr. H., who often reprimanded him for his conduct. Loefner had married his wife, formerly Francisca Koehler, about nine months before. Franciska had not recently lived in Mr. H.'s family, but had been there since the confinement of Mrs. H., in the beginning of last week. The husband had abused her on Monday, and appeared more than usually malignant. Many have supposed that the German had contracted a hatred for Mr. H. because of the censures of that gentleman. But it seems that the chief cause of that insane hatred which impelled Loefner to slay his wife and his employer was jealousy. He has by signs confessed this since the tragedy. He, no doubt, though without reason, so far as we can learn, suspected his wife of im proper intimacy with Horton.

Mrs. Loefner was much liked by Mr. Horton's family, and, kindly treated, became a faithful and estimable domestic. This conduct on their part may have been, and probably was, strangely insconstrued by Loefner.

The manner of the murder of Mrs. Loefner by her husband is wrapped in mystery, although it appears she was either strangled or smothered. No one knew of the fatal act until the door of the room occupied by Mrs. L. was forced, and her body half nude, and her face discoloured and livid, was discovered upon her bed. That the unfortunate woman suffered on that fearful night from her demon husband, no one can tell; but the loneliness of the hour, her inability to obtain aid, the terror she must have endured, the horrid manner of her death, and the mystery that surrounds it, call up a picture no tragedy upon the stage could easily surpass. The imagination needs not to be exercised very long to give only the circumstances to a thinking mind, and that room glows with a horror such as Mrs. Radcliffe and Lewis and Poe would have fel daintily upon, and furnished in the most opicurean terrors to minds as morbid as their own. This strangling of his wife by Loefner in the dreary night, and in so mysterious a manner, is, to our mind, one of the most tragic features of this most tragic tragedy.

Loefner is apparently about forty years of age, has a dark and vicious eye, with nothing remarkable in his face, judging under the unfavourable circumstances of yesterday. His reputation is that of a violent tempered and vicious man, often addicted to excess in drinking. He has been carried by his anger to most ridiculous excesses, in a number of instances.

Mrs. Loefner seems to have been about twenty-five years of age; a buxom, fresh, good-looking German woman, her face indicating a mild and affectionate disposition.—She was, as we have said, greatly liked by Mr. H.'s family on account of her gentleness, kindness and considerate conduct to all who came in contact with her. No one but her husband seems to have regarded her otherwise than favourably.

The reporter of the Advertiser, at a late hour, visited the Commercial Hospital, and learned that the murderer had confessed to the attending physician and to others a short time previous, by writing upon a slate, that he had committed the murders of which he was charged.

He said he "was inspired by jealousy.—He had seen Mr. Horton in bed with his (the murderer's) wife, and had then threatened to kill him. He did kill him, and was glad of it. The night he killed his wife (Monday) he called to see her at their room, when she offered him a piece of bread and butter. He suspected it was poisoned, and told her she must eat of it first. She refused. He told her she must or he would kill her. She persisted in her refusal, and he did kill her." He also made a similar statement to a priest, called at his request, to receive his confession.

Persons living adjacent to the room occupied by Mrs. Loefner state that they have heard L. charge her with infidelity, and that she denied it earnestly and persistently.

The coroner's inquest, this little back room, at No. 623 Vine street, presented a shocking picture when entered by the officers yesterday morning. There lay a beautiful young woman upon the bed, cold in death; some of the furniture broken and everything in the greatest confusion, drawers turned over, nearly all the bed-clothing scattered around the floor, evincing that she had struggled hard for her life, but was cruelly and inhumanly murdered by a jealous, dissipated and crazed husband.

Mrs. Loefner was about 25 years old, very prepossessing in appearance, finely formed, and is spoken of as exceedingly intelligent for one occupying the position of a domestic. She was reared in this city, and contributed to the support of her aged parent, who resided on Hamilton road.—Loefner has resided here about six months, and for the most of this time has been engaged in gardening. He is about 30 years old, dark hair, black goatee—has a vicious expression of countenance, sullen, and morose looking.

The London Times of Saturday, says: "The unfavourable character of the monthly statement of the Bank of France, published with the renewed fall in the Paris Bourse, caused English funds to open at a decline of one-eighth. Some purchases took place on the part of the public, and led to an improvement, which was partially maintained in the Stock Exchange.

Sweden.—The Swedish Chambers have voted considerable sums to be applied to the construction of forts, &c., for the national means of defence.

England.—At Oxford Lord Monient is the oppoment of Thackery. The Advertiser says, there will be an election in the city of London, Baron R. heshild having pledged himself to resign in the event of the failure of the bill for removal of the Jewish disabilities.

France.—The Moniteur publishes an article on the election, saying that during eight years, the number of dissentsients, instead of increasing has diminished. France, which has now judged them five times, had not changed her opinions. The article however, does not conclude without a general warning to the press, saying a limit must now be brought to discussion, which can now have no other object than the useless agitation of public feeling.

The Persians were strengthening the fortification of Herat, though by the treaty of peace, that were bound to evacuate the place.

DEATH OF THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.—We regret to announce the death of George Spencer Churchill, fifth Du e of Marlborough, which took place yesterday morning at Woodstock. The Marquis of Blandford, whose name is so well known in association with ecclesiastical questions, succeeds to the title and estates. The fact was announced yesterday by Mr. Deasy, the chairman to committee on the Cambridge election, of which the Marquis of Blandford was a member, and also in the House of Commons at the early sitting. The accession of the Marquis of Blandford to the peerage creates a vacancy in the representation of Woodstock. The late duke was Lord Lieutenant of Oxfordshire, and high steward of Oxford and Woodstock. He was born Dec. 27, 1793; he succeeded, his father on March the 5th, 1840; married Jan. 13, 1819, his cousin, eldest daughter of the Earl of Galloway, and by her had three sons. Losing his first wife, the duke married a second time in 1846, and a third time in 1851. By the second marriage two children were born, and by the present duchess, who survives him, he leaves a son.

The Quebec Chronicle says they understand that Mr. Justice Duval, on Saturday, refused to admit to bail Capt. Rudolph, of the steamer Montreal, now in goal on a charge of manslaughter, Mr. Wilson Jun., the owner of the steamer, has not yet been apprehended.

SAD OCCURRENCE.—An accident occurred a few days since, at the Irvine Steam Saw Mills on the Town Line between East and West Flamboro, which resulted in a severe injury to an Italian, who had recently been employed in the Mill. He was standing in frot of a Planing Machine, which runs at the rate of 2,000 revolutions in the minute, when one of the knives broke, and flying off, struck him on the side of the cheek, cutting away the flesh from the lower jaw across to the mouth, and breaking the jaw bone in pieces. Some of his teeth were knocked out, and a piece cut off his tongue.—For awhile he lay prostrate, and by appearance dead, but after a time he rallied, and is now expected to survive. He was understood to be a sigle man but as he was unable to speak a word of English, it was impossible to ascertain any particulars respecting him. Subsequently he was removed to Hamilton Hospital, to undergo surgical operations.—Globe.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It counteracts the surface to the interior, through the cuticles, tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influences

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. ANGRY ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world prove its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,
Gout,	Sore Throats,
Lumbago,	Sores of all kinds,
Mercurial Eruptions,	Spring
Piles,	Stiff Joints,
Rheumatism,	Tetter,

Cabbage Worms.

J. Farrar, one of the most practical farmers in the state of New York, says that cabbage worms may be destroyed in the following easy and simple manner: Break off a large leaf from the bottom of the cabbage, and place it on the top, upper side down. Do this in the evening, and in the morning you will find nearly all or quite all the worms on this leaf. Take off the leaf and kill them or feed them to the chickens, and place the leaf back, if there be any more to eatch.

CLEANLINESS IMPORTANT TO PIGS.—A gentleman put six pigs to fatten, and treated them with one exception, all exactly the same, and fed them on similar food, given in equal quantities to each, for seven weeks. Three of these pigs were left to shift for themselves, so far as cleanliness went, and the other three were carefully carried, brushed and washed. The latter consumed, in the seven weeks, less food by five bushels than the other three, and yet when killed, weighed more by two stones and four pounds on the average.

METHOD OF CURING BAD TUB BUTTER.—A quantity of tub butter was brought to market in the West Indies, which, on opening, was found to be very bad, and almost stinking. A native of Pennsylvania undertook to cure it, which he did in the following manner: He started the tubs of butter in a large quantity of hot water, which soon melted the butter; he then skimmed it off as clean as possible, and worked it over again in a churn, and with the addition of salt and fine sugar, the butter was made sweet and good again.

Vinegar.

The juice of one bushel of sugar-beets, worth twenty-five cents, and which any farmer can raise with little cost, will make from five to six gallons of vinegar, equal to the best made of alder wine. First wash and grate the beets, press the juice in a cheese-press, or in any other way which a little ingenuity can suggest, and put the liquor into a barrel; cover the bung with gauze and set it in the sun, and in fifteen or twenty days it will be fit for use. By this method the very best of vinegar can be obtained without any great trouble, and I hope all who like good vinegar will try it.

HAVE YOU A CHOICE GRAPE-CUTTING THAT YOU WANT TO GROW?—Then go to the woods, dig some roots of a wild grape-vine, cut them into pieces of about six inches long; cut your choice grape-vine or cutting into pieces of only one, or at most, two buds; insert the lower end by the common cleft grafting method, into the peice of wild vine-root; plant it in the earth, leaving the bud of the cutting just level with the top of the ground. Every one so made will grow, and in two years become bearing plants.

ROOTS.—Have you made your arrangements to plant a good large patch of carrots? If not do it now. It is not too late. If you have not stable manure suitable for this purpose, get some super-phosphate of lime and apply to them. It is a most effectual and economical manure for this crop. We have raised good crops the last three years with its use and without stable manure. Do not forget to have a good patch appropriated to rhutabagas. They will not hurt your stock next winter, Any time before the first of July will do to sow these.

TO SECURE LATERAL BRANCHES.—When a tree has been stripped of some of its branches, you may wish to restore them. If so, take this mode, which has been used with success. Cut out large peices of bark on the side on which you wish the new limbs to grow; do not cut out the bark quite to the wood; in due time the space will be covered with a thin, tender bark; into this tender bark you may insert buds, just as in a small twig in a nursery; thus the bud will grow to a branch, and the symmetry of the tree may be improved, and the fruit may be changed, too.

A GREEN ROSE.—At an exhibition of flowers which took place at Manheim, Germany, a prize was awarded for a very extraordinary floral curiosity—the most notable item in the exhibition—a green rose. The petals of the flower were green, and had somewhat the form of leaves.

In the tops and tubers of potatoes, 416 lbs. to the acre of mineral matter is drawn from the earth, so that if the whole is taken away from the land, it is one of the most exhausting crops,

CULTIVATION OF LUPINS.—Those who have travelled in Prussia know that the eastern districts of that kingdom consist of large tracts of sandy soil, requiring an immense quantity of manure to make them yield but very scanty crops. Since 1852, the introduction of the cultivation of lupins has transformed these desert wastes into green and fertile fields, yielding abundance of forage, and consequently of manure. The lupin will thrive in any soil without manure, its roots penetrate three feet into the ground, and its leaves remain green until the seed arrives at its full maturity. A hectare (12½ acres) will yield nearly 24 hectolitres (68 bushels) of seed, and about 6,000 kilogrammes of straw. Sheep like this kind of forage very much, and experience shows that it is a preservative against the rot.

TO REMOVE FLY SPOTS.—Dip a camel's hair brush into spirits of wine, and apply it to remove fly spots.

TO KEEP CIDER SWEET.—I have tried several ways of keeping cider, and have found the following to succeed:—I let my cider work until it has fermented a little, and then pour in a tea cup full of mustard seed in each barrel.

CHINESE SUGAR CANE SEED.—About two hundred and fifty bushels of the Chinese Sugar Cane have been distributed by the Patent office this season. It is thought by many that this cane is destined to be cultivated as extensively in the United States as Indian corn, yielding as it does, at the same time, sugar for man, and provinder and grain for beast.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over seventy of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. The student, on the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student in its studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may desire to remain longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition to the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West. Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other pens are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Business Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Summer Flowers.

The long long night and the dreary day
Has passed like a dream of youth away:
The pear-frost too, and the flaky snow,
Give place to the summer's sunny glow;
Again we see in this land of ours
The sweet little race of gentle flowers.

Gems of love, come away, come away,
While the bright sunbeams and the shadows play;
The pearly dews will drop on your breast,
And charm each blade to its evening rest,
While zephyrs glide through your lovely bowers,
To wake up the race of gentle flowers.

The way of the soft south wind is told
In the bend of the rose and marigold;
And the waving lilittle feels the sigh,
As the light breeze sweetly dances by;
While the rainbow rides in the sunny showers
That fall in the lap of gentle flowers.

The maidens gather your blossoms now,
And they plait your locos round their brow;
Your pearl will be in their golden hair,
Like the breath of an angel ling'ring there;
But kindly say that a change is ours,
That she must pass like the gentle flowers.

Ye tell of the years now long away,
When ours was the joyous summer day;
Ye light up the look of many an eye
That blooms in the bliss of eternity:
Yet, while the spots of passing hours
Withers our cheek like the gentle flowers.

Beauty.

Every mind has its own definition of beauty, as well as its own peculiar tastes as regards the style most de-irable, as most to be admired.—And there is sufficient diversity to please all, and an abundance also. There is beauty everywhere. We see it in the gorgeous rainbow, and in the glorious sunset; in the magnificent elm, the graceful drooping willow, and in the varied and delicate arrangement of colors seen in the sweet summer flowers

Man saw beauty in the noble animal that labors patiently for his convenience, and contributes to his pleasures as an equestrian, or in his comfort in the pleasant drive, or in the humbler one that he trains for the chase, for a guard or a companion.—Woman discerns beauty in her household pets, her canaries, her kitten or in the elegant variety of shrub or plant which her love of the beautiful prompts her to cultivate.

But their is a higher manifestation of this attribute in those whom the great designer of beauty has fashioned after his own likeness: in man, his noblest work, in woman, his "best gift to man."—Thus the beauty of the human face and figure has been in all ages of the world admired, sometimes adored. Poets have sung its praises, and grave and gay, statesmen and philosophers, wise men and fools have worshipped at its shrine. Men and women, too, have yielded reason and judgment to the influence of its fascinations to find it too often illusory or fading as the morning flower.

The beauty that consists only in symmetry of feature, and in delicate tints of coloring, may please the eye, but it cannot long retain the affections. It is but the beauty of a statue, and fades much sooner. Like the elegant but scentless dahlia, that lives its little season then withers and is cast away.

The beauty that is born of intellect is of a more elevated character, and when united with the physical, imparts to it a life and in fact that it could not otherwise possess, but does not render it complete unless there be also moral qualifications. Without these it may be but a mask to cover a depraved heart. Who has not seen the fine intellectual brow disfigured by hateful passions, the brilliant eyes flashing with pride, the beautiful lips curled with a sorrowful smile, or parted to give utterance to coarseness or profanity, or to language expressive of malice, envy and self-love, thus manifesting a total absence of that charity which is a greater beautifier than gold or gems, and for the want of which no outward beauty can atone.

The sweetest and most enduring charm is moral beauty. Its possessor may not boast of a form and features of faultless proportions, a brow white as Parian marble, beautiful eyes, rosetinted cheeks, and a finely chiselled mouth; but if the eyes are a medium through which we may discern the beauty of the soul within, if the brow beam with the impress of truth, the cheek glows with the blush of modesty, and the lips drop words of kindness fresh from the heart; then, though the features be not symmetrical they may possess attractions of ever varying interest. We may look upon them often, but the charm will not tire.

It is much to be regretted that comparatively few estimate this the highest order of beauty at its true value. Too many are superficial: they do not look beneath the surface. A beautiful face, a winning smile and an agreeable manner often enthrals them, and without attempting to ascertain whether the mind has a corresponding value, they yield a blind homage, and pursue the object of idolatry with an earnestness so intense that instead of obtaining possession of a coveted treasure, they are themselves taken captive before they are aware; when with disenchanted vision they see that though the casket is superb, the gems within are all counterfeit. Then perchance they learn, when it is too late to retrieve the past, the worth of the true moral beauty, which needs no disguise, but like jewels of pure gold, the more it is worn the brighter it becomes.

There is a yet higher degree of beauty produced by the union of the three classes above referred to. But this combination is extremely rare. Few possess physical beauty, not all are endowed with the intellectual. But to the moral all may by culture attain to a greater or less degree.

God has implanted in our natures beautiful moral sentiments, and has given us accompanying souls to aid in their cultivation, and the more we cultivate them the more nearly we shall assimilate to the likeness of those who gave them, and the more we shall possess of true moral beauty. This not only gives polish to the manner, but softens each lineament of the face, and so purifies and refines the heart that, mirror-like, it reflects back the image of its Creator; and if it does not impart to the countenance actual beauty it at least makes us forget its absence. Who would not rather be thus endowed than to possess the beauty of a picture, and have nothing else to boast of.

I do not wish to underrate physical beauty. I think it not only attractive but desirable when it can be possessed without destroying everything that is lovely in the Character. To be admired and flattered from childhood cannot promote the growth of pure and gentle affections; but on the contrary, foster pride, every selfish propensity.—But if an individual who is physically beautiful has moral stamina and sufficient of that rare commodity, common sense, to pass the fearful ordeal unscathed, he may develope real excellence and combine in one person the highest perfection that earth affords—physical, intellectual and moral beauty.

But let those who are conscious of possessing the first, remember there is no merit in being handsome; that beauty is the gift of God, and we should prize it, not as food for vanity, but as a means for gratifying our love, for the beautiful, of rendering us more attractive to those we love, and adoration to the great fountain-head the uncreated beauty.

And if we lack that symmetry of form and feature that men call beauty, let us make up the deficiency by mental and moral culture. Thus may we possess attractions that will never cease to charm. Like the rose that yields a delicious fragrance when its transitory existance is ended.—But not like the rose shall it die; but shall live on through the ages of eternity, ever growing more and more like its great designer, ever progressing in resplendent immortal beauty.

KATE ROSEWOOD.

The Power of Kindness.

If there is any one trait of character to be admired—if there is one which commends itself to the minds of the young more than another, I think it is the kindness of a generous and unselfish heart. Who hath fully determined the power of kindness? Who hath been able to define its limits? We often see its immediate effects, but the secret influence of kindly words and the power therein contained no man hath been able to trace, nor yet indeed to comprehend. Their influence is never lost. Even though years elapse, the kind look and gentle word which we bestow upon some unfortunate, and, perhaps, erring individual is still powerful for good. What force and tyranny fail to accomplish, gentleness and kindness will most assuredly effect.

How many a hardened criminal, upon whose heart the penalties of law have failed to effect a reform, has been melted to tears of sorrowful repentance by the low, earnest and gentle tones of some philanthropic friend. How many miserable inebriates have been reclaimed and saved from the drunkards grave by the calm and friendly warning of some true reformer. And there are many who have strayed from the paths of virtue and rectitude, and are now pursuing the downward course, upon whom the world looks with scorn and neglect, who might easily be influenced, by the efforts of the good Samaritan, to forsake their wicked career and become respectable and useful members of society. Oh! the power of kindness, hast thou ever felt it, fellow-mortal, in thy journey thus far through this "vale of tears?" Hast ever, after having indulged in some harsh reflection or remark concerning thy friend, felt the influence of the kind yet reproachful glance of his eye! Hast thou, my friend, ever felt its influence, its sweet and holy influence, when standing at the bedside of a dying friend whom thou hast sometime injured, you receive from his lips the assurance of forgiveness? Hast thou, O! son, ever appreciated the loving kindness and tender watchfulness of a parent's love? Then thou hast in some measure expe ienced the effects of kindness.

Would you burn still farther the glowing heavenly power? Then go to thine enemy, and with the conciliating language of a friend, seek his friendship, and grant him thy forgiveness. "A soft answer turneth away wrath." Would'st thou know the happiness of a kind, unselfish and forgiving spirit?—Then go from daily thy better and nobler feelings towards the poor, the despised and forsaken children of grief. Endeavor to practice and live up to the spirit of the golden rule in all your intercourse with your fellow-men. Thus will you experience in this life the peace and happiness which flows from the consciousness of doing good, and the approving eye of the Father of the fatherless.

In the United States are six thousand brokers and six thousand barbers but the census does not tell which class do the most shaving. A lawyer on his passage from Europe observed a shark, and asked a sailor what it was, who replied, 'Here we call 'em sea lawyers.

Mind Your own Business.

J. H. T.

"Mind your own Business," said Aunt Tabbie, "don't meddle with other people's business."

Now Aunt Tabbie is a fine old lady, everybody says so; and if age signifies wisdom, she can lay large claim to superiority. Although Aunt Tabbie has lived many years, yet it has been but a short time since she became fully satisfied that it was best for all to mind their own business; but she now confidently affirms, to use her own expression, that "it is the all-important truth one can, shall or will learn." Experience, that hard school-master, taught Aunt Tabbie that fact.

It was a bright, joyous spring day; the warm sunshine fell upon the hills and the valies, upon the woods and the bright green fields; the little birds sang songs of thanksgiving, and all things seem to send forth whispers of contentment on the balmy flower scented breeze. But Aunt Tabbie could not be contented. Instead of feasting her eyes upon the beauties of Nature, she was peering from a pleasant window, on the sunny side of the house, at an outside trap door, leading into the cellar of a house near by. That door was the cause of Aunt Tabbie's discontent. The occupants of the house had gone to a distant town to make a visit for a few days, and they happened to leave that door open, or partly open, (it was leaning upon a stick,) and as Aunt Tabbie saw it from her window she became possessed of a desire to see the inside of her neighbor's cellar: not that she wished to take anything therefrom, but simply to gratify an idle curiosity—to learn what things were in that cellar, and how arranged. The longer she looked the stronger became that inclination, as a bad habit becomes stronger the oftener it is indulged in; and she finally put on her bonnet and walked forth.

On reaching the house of her absent neighbor, she cast a few quick glances about, to see that there were no eyes upon her, and then quickly descended the stairs into the cellar. She had hardly reached the bottom of the stairs ere the stick with which the door was held up dropped beneath its burden, and the door fell. Poor Aunt Tabbie! All her own efforts to find egress were unavailable. It would be four days before the occupants of the house would return, and she must suffer solitary confinement all that time. There was a bunch of hemlock in a corner, gathered for the purpose of making brooms, which she used for a bed by night. There was some brown bread upon the shelf and numerous pans of milk, so he felt fortified against famine.

The family of Aunt Tabbie became alarmed at her absence, and the neighboring woods were searched, but, of course, to no avail. No one thought of searching the neighbor's house.

At length the day came for the occupants of the house to arrive. They came. Aunt Tabbie heard their steps and gave a signal of distress by knocking upon the floor. The family were at first inclined to think the raps a "spiritual manifestation," but soon found out the true condition of things, and Aunt Tabbie was soon ushered into the light of day once more.

Thus it was that Aunt Tabbie learned her lesson. Those four days of solitude and reflection taught her a fact she had not learned in years.

Now would it not do you and I good, kind reader, to be quartered in a dark corner where we could reflect for a few days in solitude? For fear we might get into this dark place, let's mind our own business.—There is a darkness worse than dark cellars and dark corners—it is a darkness of the mind; so sure as we borrow needless trouble by taking the affairs of others upon ourselves thereby neglecting our own habits and tendencies, that darkness will come upon us. Are you and I perfect? Do we never step aside from the paths of rectitude? Is there not enough of hatred, and jealousy, and envy in our ownselves to require our utmost vigilance. Let us look for the good in all, and impute evil to none. Don't forget that a great maxim, though a short one, is "Mind your own business."

Friendship.

What is life worth without friendship?—We all need it, all desire to possess it, and are miserable without it. If there be aught that deifies not, 'tis deep rooted friendship, immortal as the soul. We all need a dear confiding friend, on whose faithful bosom we can lay our weary head and confide the story of our present joys and sorrows, and the hopes of our future.

When we are weary of the strife and turmoil of busy life, it is sweet to hold communion with a loving and kindred spirit. One who can weep with us in sorrow, and rejoice with us in joy; a whole souled, true-hearted, sympathizing friend. Not the summer friends that round us gather, and lay their offering on friendship's holy shrine, while prosperity surrounds us. Ah! no; no holy tie of friendship binds their hearts to ours. They are like the summer flowers that bloom in their exquisite fragrance and beauty as long as the warm sun sheds its congenial rays, and the refreshing summer flowers below them with new life and beauty. But when the sun no longer sheds its life-giving ray, and the refreshing showers cease to fall, and the cold bleak winds of winter sweep rudely past, they bow their heads and are seen no more.

So with the friends of a day; their offering is willingly laid upon the shrine of friendship while the height of prosperity shines with brightness, but when misfortune, with its dark shadow, is cast across our path, then where are the friends of a day. They like the flowers, are withered by the blast, and, in their weakness, they bow their heads and are seen no more.

True friendship never dies; like the evergreen tree, that grows the brighter by exposure to the fierce winds of winter, so when trouble, anxiety, and perplexities surround us, the true and sympathising, friend is found ready to deny himself anything to contribute to the happiness of him he loves. He is willing to subject himself to cruel and unjust treatment, if he can, by so doing, confer a favor on the one he holds dear. No sacrifice is too great for him to make.

Friendship, when formed in youth, is lasting after long years of separation: friends look back to the days they spent in each others society with pleasurable emotions, and feel as if their youthful days had again returned; but as if suddenly awakened from a pleasant dream, they find themselves surrounded by the stern realities of life.

Death may mark a dear and faithful friend as his victim, and rudely snatch him from our side, and tear him from our bosom, as he breaks a link in the chain of early love and plucks a bright and blooming flower from the wreath of early friendship. Those soft and gentle beams or that mild and loving eye may be for ever dimmed and darkened; the sunny smile that played around those lips of the loved ones, may be for ever chilled. That form that was to us so dear, may be laid low in the cold embrace of dreamless rest, in the deep dark grave. But why mourn for the one we love? What though our wreath of friendship be broken if he his gone to a happier home in "The better land," where sorrow cometh not, and hopes are not rudely blasted. Why mourn, then, for the one we love, if he be happier than when he dwelt by our side? Time cannot efface the image true friendship hath engraven on the tablet of our hearts. The thought of that dear friend, in all his holy peace and happiness, should lead us to strive to join him in the land where parting is no more.

An Affectionate Goose.

An intelligent correspondent resident in Greenock favors us—Gateshead, Observer—with the following curious communication "A short time since I had occasion to visit Camdetown, distant about seventy miles from this place; and on my return by the steamer, and when opposite to Carrideale —on the cost of Cantyre, Argyleshire, opposite Arron—and a mile from the shore a boat came off to us with passengers. At this moment my attention was drawn to a goose which was braving the swell and the following the boat; and I was told that this bird was picked up on the shore by the owner of the boat, some years since almost lifeless; that he took it home, and having placed it in a warm situation and supplied it with proper food; it recovered, and—tange to say—that ever since it followes wherever he goes. As soon as he enters his boat, it takes to the water, and never quits his element till he returns to the shore. The boat is frequently manned without its preserver, but the sagacious bird never follows it unless he forms one of the crew. I was further told that when he left home, at any time for a great distance, he was obliged to have it fastened up; and that in one instance, he went to Cambeltown on business a distance of twenty miles and while in a house there he heard the well known call decoy ling outside: and on opening the door, found his old friend had travelled all that distance in search of him.

From England, we learn by late accounts that the fine screw propelled two decker Agamemnon 91, is the spy quited ship to aid the United States steam frigate Niagara in laying down the telegraph cable between Ireland and Newfoundland. Each will receive on board 1,300 miles of the twisted wire.

Miscellany.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—General debility, low spirits, and nervous irritation are the inevitable consequences of indigestion. Renovate the stomach, clear the bowels, and regulate the secretions with these wonder-working Pills, and the strength returns the depression ceases, the nerves become calm. This is not theory, but practical truth founded on long years of experience, volumes of testimony, and the concurrent admission of all medical men who have ever witnessed the effects of the remedy. In this country, dyspepsia has heartofore been so common a compaint, that it might almost be termed a "national institution." If, however dyspeptics, generally, are wise enough to resort to this remedy, the disease will soon become a rarity.

LENTH OF MILES—The mile varies in lenth in different countries. For example the English mile is 1,760 yards; the Russian 1,100; the Italian 1,476; the Irish and Scotch 2,200; the Polish 4,400; the Spanish 5,028; the German 5,866; the Swedeen and Panish 7,223; and the Hungarian 8,380. the French measures by the mean league, which is 3,666 yards.

Dean Swift said, with much truth, "It is use as for us to attempt reason a man out of a thing he has never been reasoned into."

Some graceless scamp says: it is woman and not her wrongs that should be redressed." That fellow ought to suffer the torment of being invited out to tea.

A Railway Train Loose.

From the Jamesville (Wis.) Gazette.

During the storm of Saturday night two passenger cars and a baggage car standing on the track of the Madison Railroad at Footville, started off at full speed (propelled by the wind) toward Alton. An attempt was made to stop them, but failed, as they had got fully under way. On, on they went with, lightening speed uncontrolled by human hands, and the faithful engineer—without steam or lights—no engine to reverse, no brakesman or conductor aboard, but on they went careering over the iron way; startling not a few of the people living near the track, who could hear the rattle of the rails, and as the flashes of the lightening momentarily lit up the heavens, see, or thought they could, a train of cars rushing along amid the darkness and the storm. Some thought it was a spirit train, or the like, as it was, a propituous time for such an event—Frightened and astonished at the strange apparition, and with will impotent and fitful dreams. They watched the morning dawn, when their minds were quieted by the appearance of a locomotive containing the engineer, conductor &c., in search of the runaway train. It being down the grade the principal part of the way the train had continued its flight to Alton, where it at last found a safe and sound and none the worse for the little bit of a spree it had been indulging in all alone in the darkness and the storm.

On Sunday evening last at Hoboken, when the ferry bridge was crowded with hundreds of people ready to go to New York by the half-past 8 o'clock boat, the chains suddenly gave way, and without a moment's warning, whole shoals of people were thrown into the water. It was a fearful termination of the day's pleasure. The shrieks of the unfortunate victims were heart-rending. The boats in the neighborhood were got in instant readiness with praiseworthy exertion, and to the boatmen must be awarded a large share of praise for the many lives saved from an untimely end. The engine was reversing at the moment of the accident, and consequently sent a strong gust towards the sunken bridge. So powerful was the force of thesurf thus created that it washed the people clear up out of danger. It was most miraculous indeed that but one life was lost, that of Mrs Bridget Reilly, whose body was recovered about 10 P. M.

A gentleman, says the New York Herald, from Kansas, on Friday, states that at a public meeting on Thursday, it was determined to resist the United States troops if an attempt was made to collect the taxes. A gentleman had met Governor Walker ten miles from Lawrence with seven companies of infantry, and he said that he would arrange matters peaceably if possible, but that he would use force if necessary. The free State men were hurrying to Lawience, and General Lane had been sent for.

A letter from Hanging Rock, Ohio, in The Cultivator, Columbus, July 15, says the army-worm has invaded that part of the State, destroying whatever comes in its way of grain or grass. The remedy used against the advance of the destroyers is to plow a furrow against the line of march, which soon fills with worms, which are then destroyed by dragging a piece of timber along the furrow.

The Ship that conveyed Wolfe to Quebec.—The British bark William and Ann, of London, bound from Savannah to Bristol, England, which put into New York on the 11th inst., is said to have been for merly a British frigate, and the same vessel which conveyed General Wolfe to Quebec. She is now one hundred years old, and retains her original timbers (white oak) perfectly sound. Her planking which is sixty eight years old, is nearly as perfect as when first put on. This relic of a past age is being recaulked and coppered on the large Balance Dock.

Pr. fessor Alexander, of Baltimore, has been appointed Commissioner on the part of the United States by the Secretary of the Treasury, under the joint resolution of last Congress, to provide for ascertaining the relative value of the coinage of United States and Great Britain, and the fixing the relative value of the military coins of the two countries.

Alive in the Coffin.—At intervals we learn from our exchanges that indecent, if not unfeeling, haste has been manifested in the burial of the dead. A remarkable case in point has lately occurred in Hamilton Co., Ohio, where one Wat Eadman, a wealthy man, was taken violently ill on the morning of the 15th ult., and died, apparently, on the afternoon of the day. The very next morning the body was cofined and jolted in a market wagon to a church, where a funeral sermon was preached. The choir was about singing the last hymn, when they were interrupted by loud sounds and kicks going on inside the coffin. Great consternation prevailed among the congregation, and a stampede was made for the door. The clergyman came down from his pulpit ordered the pallbearers to open the coffin was speedily done, when it was found that the supposed deceased was only alive and kicking, but was struggling manfully to free himself from his—to him—mysterious confinement. The blood was flowing freely from his mouth and nose, but in a very few minutes he was able to speak.—Tidal.

An Elopement Scene.—A youthful couple—a young man and a lass of fifteen summers—at Amboy, Illinois, eloped, and placed themselves on board the cars on the Illinois Central Railroad. While seated, and conversing silly upon the "silken bonds of matrimony," which they supposed they were about to wear, the mother of the lady unexpectedly appeared to them, having "got wind" as to how matters were going. Ma tried to persuade her daughter to leave the youth, but her two plump and rosy arms that insecensible short, love, held the loving couple together, and the united strength of mamma and several of the passengers could not separate the a. The old lady finally resorted to blows, and gave her daughter a severe boxing on the ears, a rap on the head and a dig in the back. But this was to no purpose The couple were finally taken in charge by the police and their matrimonial intentions frustrated.

The Quebec Chronicle understan t that Mr Justice Duval, on Saturday, refused to admit to bail Captain Rudolph, of the iate steamer Montreal, now in jail on a charge of manslaughter. Mr. Wilson, jr., the owner of the steamer has not yet been apprehended.

A United States paper says—"The inventor of the patent metal burial case was the first to a copy one of them; and now Mr. Shell of Calcutta, has been the first to bury in the article. The coincidence is remarkable.

Another Triumph to the Canadian Line.

The Indian made her last passage from Quebec to Liverpool in the short space of nine days and eleven hours, being, we understand, the second best passage from west to east across the Atlantic on record. Mr. B. B. Hughes of this city was a passenger, and, in a letter received yesterday, gives the log of the Indian on this voyage as follows:—

Sailed from Quebec, on Saturday, 4th July, at ten, a.m., and on the successive days made the following distances:—

1st day, ending 10 a. m., July		5	295	miles.
2nd	-	-	6	168 -
3rd	-	-	7	276 -
4th	-	-	8	250 -
5th	-	-	9	240 -
6th	-	-	10	280 -
7th	-	-	11	290 -
8th	-	-	12	311 -
9th	-	-	13	273 -
½	9 p. m., July		13	194 -
Total distance run				2633 miles.

The distance by the chart is 2,606 miles, so that it appears that the Indian deviated from the direct course only so far as to add fifty miles to the length of the voyage.

A Remedy for the Weevil.—Several farmers in the Township of Brook have successfully preserved their wheat from the ravages of the midge or weevil. In instances where the following plan has been adopted the crops remain uninjured, while those adjoining are extremely affected. We give the statement just as it has been made us, leaving it in the hands of our agricultural friends to determine its fidelity. It is simply this: To burn sulpher so that the wind will carry the fumes through the growing crops. It is stated that the fumes do not injure the wheat in that they do, almost immediately, destroy the midge. This method is not an expensive one, and its importance is such as to insure for it a fair trial.—London Herald.

The Indian Revolt.

By the North American, which arrived at Quebec on Sunday, we have full particulars of the Indian outbreak. The revolt has assumed a most serious aspect, not fewer than 30,000 native troops being in a state of mutiny. Twenty-eight regiments of infantry and four of cavalry in the Bengal district are concerned in the outbreak. Of these several regiments were disarmed and disbanded; others were simply deprived of their arms, and allowed to remain in their quarters; but the larger proportion had broken out into open revolt, murdered their officers, and dispersed over the country. At Lucknow, the 71st and 48th, with a portion of the 7th Cavalry and the 13th native Infantry, broke out into rebellion, and were promptly attacked by Sir Henry Lawrence. Many were killed; the main body however, spent to have made good their retreat, probably towards Delhi. In the Punjaub, ten regiments have been disarmed or disbanded; one of which, the 55th Native Infantry, broke out into open mutiny, but was attacked and dispersed by European and Irregulars from Peshawur. At Neemtich, in Rajpootna, an outbreak had taken place. The accounts are contradictory, but we fear the destruction of property, if not also the loss of life, has been very serious. At Meeseerabad, the Bengal troops constituting by far the larger part of the garrison, mutinied on the evening of May 28th. A detachment of the Bombay 1st Light Cavalry, 250 strong, attacked and charged them repeatedly, with a view to capture their guns, but was beaten in the unequal encounter.

Delhi appears to be the point of concentration for the rebelling troops; and at the latest accounts it was still in their possession. Indeed, they had felt themselves strong enough to offer battle to the European troops outside the city, though all the heights around were in possession of the latter. After a sharp engagement the rebels were driven inside the town, with the loss of 26 guns. A rumour prevailed at Bombay and Madras has stood firm to their allegiance—so firmly, indeed as to warrant the tranference of several European Regiments from thence to the Bengal district.—Even in the Punjaub, of which the most serious fears were entertained, the attempt at mutiny seems to have been promptly put down.

The real causes of the outbreak are wrapped in as much mystery as ever. Speculative suggestions alone are offered in solution. Lord Ellenborough declared in the House of Lords, on the 23rd inst., that "looking at the character some of the revolted regiments had long borne, there must have been a combination of mis management and misconduct to have affected so great a change in the character of the soldiers composing them. He believed it would be fatal to the whole native army in India to obliterate the glories achived by such regiments." The Times says it is no local disturbance, arising from any definate grievance, real or imagined. "It is the rising of a whole army against the supreme Power. What have been the real causes, the hidden springs, of this general movement, we do not know, and perhaps can never know; yet it is not difficult to form a shrewd guess as to much that remains unseen. The inaction of a vast army, conscious of its superi rity in numbers, and unconscious of its inferiority in skill and courage to Europeans, is no doubt a powerful and abiding cause of danger.—The fear of proselytism may have had something to do with the outbreak; although it is probable that this has rather been the in-

The Hudson's Bay Company.

(From the Leeds (England) Mercury)

The reasons why the troops were—we hope we must not say, are—to be sent a round of 2,900 miles have been given by Sir George Simpson to the Governor General, and by his Excellency sent to the Canadian Legislature. The principal is that "The Hudson's Bay Company upon which devolve the duty and expense of transporting the troops, and who, it may be assumed, possesses the very best information connected with their Territory, have decided on adopting the route by Hudson's Bay as the only practicable one. In the year 1846, when troops were sent to Red River, the same route was adopted after very careful consideration."

This reasoning might have been good in 1846 when there were no railroads in Canada, no ship canal to Lake Superior, and no steam ships on that Lake; but will not serve in 1857, when the city of Superior, 230 miles from the set ement, can be reached by steam in seventy hours from Collingwood or eighty from Detroit, at a cost of about £2 for each soldier, or probably less, including his provisions.

Sir Geo. Simpson speaks of sixty-six portages in those 256 miles (or 300 from Fort William,) but does not mention that the troops would have to go 700 miles from York, with thirty-six portages, by the other route. Seeing that 100,000 men, women, and children, have crossed the plains to Oregon and California since 1849, and that 10,000 Mormons annually cross to Utah (the former nearly 2,000, and the lat. 1,600 miles,) travelling over a country with little worse difficulties, it would be a slur on our soldiers and officers to say that they would be baffled by 250 or 300 miles from Lake Superior, to the Red River. In 1841, Sir George Simpson himself took thirty-eight days from Montreal by the Ottawa and lakes in canoes to Red River, when with more no portages or steamers. Why does he not now take it, with its 2,900 miles of a round, and forty-five days delay, instead of going by steam through Superior, and thence to Red River? He shows his sense by choosing the right, though he would transport the soldiers by the long road.

Condition of Ireland.

Between the reports from the Encumbered Estates Court and the official returns of agricultural produce, the public are enabled to obtain very complete information respecting the state of Ireland. The subject is indeed not surrounded with the interest attached to it in former days of disturbance and calamity, but it is still not a little important. Highly satisfactory is it also to learn that the improvement in the physical condition and material prosperity which has lately become so marked a feature in all parts of Ireland, proceeds without interruption.—All accounts concur in describing the abundance of employment, the advance in the wages of labor in the price of farm stock, and in the increase of property. Estates have been sold within the last few days at twenty-five years' purchase, which had changed hands only three or four years ago at fifteen or even twelve years' purchase. At the sale of the Saldier properties on Tuesday, in the Encumbered Estates Court, one lot which was purchased in May, 1852, for £8,500, was sold for £13,000, and another purchased in March, 1854, for £5,300, fetched £12,200, showing an increase of not less than 130 per cent. in about three years. English purchasers, we may add, were the successful competitors for the property in both instances.

Respecting another phase of Irish life, the condition and number of the people, some valuable details are furnished in the "Tables of Agricultural Statistics," just compiled and published by Mr. Donnelly, the Registrar General. From this return we learn that both processes which commenced after the terrible years of famine, and have since either caused or accomplished the development of Irish prosperity, still continue in operation. While property increases in value, population diminishes in number. The total inhabitants in Ireland on the 30th of March, 1851 the great Census Day, 6,552,000; by the 1st of January, 1854, the muster roll is estimated to have decreased to 6,185,000; on January 1, 1856, it was 6,077,000. During the course of last year, therefore, the Irish population lost 108,000 of its numbers. The decrease still continues. It is due entirely to emigration, and Mr. Donnelly reports that in the first four months of 1857, 6,386 more emigrants have sailed from Irish ports than during the corresponding period of 1856. Up to the beginning of the current year, however, the flow of emigration was annually relaxing for a considerable period. The number of emigrants who quitted Ireland in 1852, was 190,000; in 1853 it was 170,000; in 1854, 140,000; in 1855, 91,000; and last year, 79,000. The number computed to have died over deaths in the island is about 61,000 a year, the addition thus made to the human family in Ireland still falls considerably short of supplying the chasm caused by emigration. In the first four months of 1857 no fewer than 33,000 persons emigrated from the Sister Isle, establishing already a rate of 99,000 for the year, with the autumn months still to come, when harvest work is done, before the winter storms set in, and when the number of departures to other parts of the world always attain its maximum. A marked change is displayed in the proportion between the sexes in the later as compared with the earlier years of the period comprised in these tables. On the average of five years since 1851, it is reported that 101 males emigrated to 100 females, while last year the proportion was 113 males to 100 females. The fair influence from this change is, that fewer families now pass into exile, the emigrants consisting to a larger extent than formerly of young men who venture abroad to seek their fortunes. More than two-thirds of the whole number (68·7 per cent) were between the ages of sixteen and thirty-five years—showing, as Mr. Donnelly remarks, "that the majority of those who left Ireland last year was from among the young and vigorous portion of the inhabitants."

It is pleasant to find that the formalities necessary for the compilation of these tables have been accompanished with so little difficulty. After the fierce controversy on the subject of agricultural statistics in Parliament last year, we should have felt no surprise to learn that the collection of statistical returns in Ireland was a matter of something like impossibility. If English farmers—as Lord Derby and other great landlords assured us—would be alarmed or enraged at being required to fill up a complex return of their business and belongings, what should be expected from the less educated Irishman? But, so far from encountering any serious obstacles of this sort, Mr. Donnelly is able to state that his enumerators, of whom 4,000 were employed have "met with little or no difficulty in the collection of agricultural statistics in every part of the United Kingdom, can hardly be resisted on the score of any difficulty in its execution.

The Late Douglas Jerrold.

Douglas Jerrold was buried on the 15th ult. Dickens and Thackeray, Albert Smith and Tom Taylor, Buckstone and Mathews, Sir Joseph Paxton and Monkton Milnes, John Foster and Hepworth Dixon, accompanied his coffin to the grave. The Athenæum says of him:

"His place among the wits of our own time will be clear enough. He had less frolic than Theodore Hook, less elaborate humor than Sydney Smith, less quibble and quaintness than Thomas Hood. But he surpassed all these in intellectual flash and strength.—His wit was all steel points—and his talk like the squadron front of battle—in evolutions. Not one pun, we have heard, is to be found in his writings. His wit stood nearer to poetic fancy than to broad humor. The exquisite confusion of his tipsy gentleman, who, after scraping the door for an hour with his latch-key, leans back and exclaims, 'By all sons wonderful has stolen—stolen—the key-hole!' comes as near farce as any of his illustrations. His celebrated definition of Dogmatism as 'Puppyism come to maturity' looks like a happy pun—but is something far more deep and philosophic. Between this, however, and such fancies as his description of Australia—'A land so fat that if you tickle it with a straw it laughs with a harvest'—the distance is not great.—In his earlier time, before age and success had mellowed him to his best, he was sometimes accused of ill-nature, a charge which he vehemently resented, and which seemed to the last Canadian, in a rhapsody not easily to be beaten; only fancy the original member of the Canadian establishment, seizing Minerva, Erichon, Polyphemus and a Donkey all in one grasp and flinging them at her devoted head! alas! what a distruction, would this genius cause to the world, if his brains only had play room.

Any reasonable being, who has read the last four numbers of the Canadian, would certainly come to the conclusion that the editor had gone mad, we can therefore only pity him, and hope that when the Dog days will have passed, his reason will again return.

In a short time the electors of the County of Essex will be called upon to decide whether a loan of £30,000 shall be effected for the purpose of improving County Roads. It is proposed to borrow money at 20 years, and by an excellent provision in the Municipal Law, all debts to be created against the County have to be approved of, by the electors, who have the right to vote for or against any By-Law that may be submitted to them. In this instance a By-Law to authorize the Municipal Council of this County to borrow £30,000 will be submitted to the people for their approval on the 28th of August inst.

The object to be attained by this loan, is to place the Town Lines in a thorough state of repair, and to cut out those that have not heretofore been opened and place them in thorough repair also.

The necessity for an improvement of this discription, no one can deny, the only objection that can be brought to bear against it at all, is the increase of taxation; we must inquire then, whether the improvements to be effected, will be proportionate with the increased rate of taxation, that will be necessarily imposed.

There will have to be a rate of one penny and ½ of a penny in the pound raised to pay the interest upon and for the creation of a sinking fund to liquidate the principal at the end of the 20 years.

This rate would only be sufficient to do the ordinary improvements which are required upon the roads every year and that very indifferently. Now will it not be of far greater benefit to the County, to expend at one time the £30,000, and place the roads in first rate order at once? we say most decidedly, yes, and so will all reasonable thinking persons; for in the increased value of property, and the number of new settlers that would be induced to come into the County. when they find that we have good roads, which now would pass through with the expression, that (no farmer can prosper where the roads are bad) would more than compensate for the yearly increase of taxation.

The Directors of the Great Western Railroad have very liberally placed their magnificent new boat the Union, at the disposal of the ladies connected with "All Saint's Church," Windsor, for a grand pleasure excursion. The day is not yet fixed as the furniture for the boat has not yet arrived, but it will probably take place at the commencement of next week; and from the prepara tions in progress, we are sure it will afford a great treat to all who take part in it. There will be abundance of Ice Creams and other refreshments, and Lucker's Band has been engaged. Tickets fifty cents, Children half-price, will be for sale at Mr. Mile's store, Sandwich.

SANDWICH, AUGUST, 6, 1857.

Original matter! we suppose must be our text this week, for having a very original subject to deal with, we cannot do better than take the bull by the horns, if it is only to prevent him, from doing himself some bodily injury; for if the vicious animal were permitted to run at large, unrestrained, there can be no doubt, but that his own safety and that of the public would be greatly endangered.

This extraordinary animal auxious to make himself heard, and no doubt determined to terrify all creation, gave a pretty good specimen of his bellowing in the last Canadian, in a rhapsody not easily to be beaten; only fancy the original member of the Canadian establishment, seizing Minerva, Erichon, Polyphemus and a Donkey all in one grasp and flinging them at her devoted head! alas! what a distruction, would this genius cause to the world, if his brains only had play room.

In politics we should judge from the style of the leader, that they strongly inclined to the conservative party, although professing to be liberal.

To the Editor of the Maple Leaf.

Sir,

I take the liberty through the medium of your valuable journal of enquiring, who is the Path Master, for the Town of Sandwich? as there appears to be some doubts who really is. The Reeve Mr. Woodbridge seems to take such a lively interest in the repairing of the streets, (particularly in one) that a person would believe, he was Path Master. Then there is a Mr. David Bissonet, (with two or three small boys, who I suppose receive men's wages,) superintending and working on the streets! some say he is Roadmaster; and again I heard, that Mr. Cyrus Dobson was appointed to that high situation, but he never makes his appearance perhaps he has resigned in favor of Mr. Woodbridge, or that it is such a lucrative appointment, that he can afford to hire Mr. Bissonet and make a good thing out of it.

There seems to be no end of humbugging and chizelling going on, in this small Town particularly as regards to statute labor. Last year the statute labor was trifled away, and no doubt the committee as they called themselves made a good penny by it.

By informing the public who is the Path Master for the Town of Sandwich, you will greatly oblige,

Yours, &c.,

A Rate Payer.

Sandwich, August 4th, 1857.

With reference to the communication, of "a rate payer," as to who the Path Master of the Town of Sandwich is, we can only say that it was reported, that Mr. Cyrus Dobson had received the appointment, but we have no doubt that his own occupations, take up the whole of his time, which of course would prevent him from attending to the expenditure of the Statute Labour, as well as he should do. If some person had been appointed who has more leisure time, or perhaps who needs the remuneration more, there would be greater attention paid to the streets, than at present.

The work that is being done upon Mill Street no doubt is well expended, but we must say, that in many other parts of the Town, there are holes required to be filled and small repairs done, that should have been attended too before the street hinted at by "a rate payer." Such for instance as the side walk opposite Teakle's Inn, which is in a most shameful state, and the only wonder is that some person has not been injured by falling into the hole, that is in the centre of the path. Then there is Detroit Street, which is quite impassible to people on foot. Either of the above could be repaired for a mere trifle. There are many other places, which should be repaired, with the funds arising from Statute Labour, before any large job. We hope the Path Master will attend to these at once, if it is only for the credit of the place.

The children of St. John's Church Sunday School had their annual tea party on Wednesday last. They assembled to the number of seventy, in Mr. Bullock's orchard which was kindly lent for the occasion, and seemed to enjoy the good things provided for them, and a merry game of play after wards. In the course of the afternoon a large and very beautiful bible, the spontaneous gift of the children, was presented to the Rev. Mr. Dewar, The following address, was read by Miss Jessy Bullock on behalf of the donors:

Revd, and very dear Pastor,

Please to accept this bible from the Children of your Sunday School at Sandwich as a slight testimonial of the love and affection we have for you as our Pastor and Teacher.

We, Rev. Sir, have received many presents from you, and much kindness and attention, for which we wish to express our gratitude; and may that God, whom you have taught us to adore, bless you and your family. And may this present long remain with you, as a memento of the esteem we your children have for you." Mr. Dewar briefly expressed the gratification which he derived from this unexpected gift, and remarked that the uniform good behavior and diligence of the children had always rendered the care of the Sunday School one of the most pleasing and satisfactory portions of his ministerial duties.

The Steamship Indian.

We have already stated that the steamship Indian in her last voyage eastward, made the quickest passage on record from Quebec to Liverpool. On her arrival at the latter port, the following address was presented by the passengers to Captain Jones:—

After a very short and pleasant passage from Quebec to Liverpool, the passengers on board the good ship Indian, screw steamer of the Montreal Ocean Steamship Company, cannot separate without recording their greatful sense of the goodness of Divine Providence in their very prosperous voyage.

They would desire, also, to express their warm thanks to you, Captain Jones, for your cheerful and cordial kindness and attention to them; and their high appreciation of the able seamanship, and close attention to duty, by which with God's blessing. the shortest voyage ever made from Quebec to Liverpool has been accomplished.

It is worthy of note, Captain Jones, that, under your command the Indian has just achieved the remarkable feat of a voyage from Liverpool to Quebec, discharging and receiving cargo, and the return to Liverpool, all in the short space of twenty-seven days.

The officers and crew under your command have well followed the example of their chief; and, what with the attention of the stewards and stewardess, and the bountiful and luxurious fare set before them every day, the passengers have every reason to remember, with gratification and thankfulness, their voyage in the Indian, from the 4th to the 14th of July, 1857.

Most heartily do they wish, for you, and for all under your command, every happiness and success in your voyage through life, and a happy arrival in the haven of eternal bliss.

To the Montreal Ocean Steamship Company, the passengers desire a long and uninterrupted continuance of the success which has hitherto attended their enterprise, so closely connected as it is with the prosperity of Canada.

The Reinforcements for India.

The danger of the crisis in the northwestern provinces of India seems at length to be appreciated by the Queen's Government. It has been resolved to act with vigor, and that resolution will no doubt be fortified by the intelligence which, for some time to come, we shall receive of each successive mail. We would communicate in a few words the general nature of the precautions already taken. A steam squadron is to be sent to India. As the exigencies of the service have already absorbed the number of seamen actually voted, it is intended to apply to Parliament for an additional vote of 2,000 seamen—an application, which will, no doubt, at once receive the sanction of the Legislature. We should gladly hear that this squadron, or a portion of it, was to be used for the conveyance of troops. The advantage of a steam squadron in the Indian Seas is, of course, immense. It must not be forgotten that the presence of one European regiment in Upper India would outweigh that of a steam frigate in the Bay of Bengal. The primary value of these steamships for this emergency is as transports. They cannot bring their guns to bear upon the mutineers, who will most assuredly not select the seacoast as the scene of their operations. One fact, however, we may speak of with certainty. A considerable force of artillery is to be despatched by the most rapid conveyance at hand; and in this arm, as it appears from the reports forwarded to us, the Bengal establishment is unfortunately, deficient. With regard to the regiments actually ordered to the scene of hostilities—independently of the regiments which have been moved from the other presidencies, and from the Persian Gulf, upon the disturbed districts—the force which had been comprised in the Chinese operations has been intercepted at Point de Galle by summons from Lord Canning; and this measure has received the entire approval and confirmation of the authorities. In order to fill up the vacuum in the China service caused by the withdrawal of these troops, it is proposed to despatch a battalion of marines to Hong Kong with the least possible delay. This is precisely the class of force best adapted to the conduct of operations in that quarter. The service required is essentially one of an amphibious character, to be best performed by a force which can act either by land or water, as occasion may require. It is an affair of rivers and creeks, and of an extende sea-board—precisely, in fact, the service for which the marines are especially adapted by their peculiar training. Here, again, is another example of the great value of this most admirable corps, which will, no doubt, rise every day higher in public estimation as the conditions of modern warfare are better known and appreciated.

It is most fortunate that, as this Indian difficulty has fallen upon us so unexpected a manner, affairs in China should be going so well. By the advices just received it appears that the Cantonese are so hampered for want of provisions that a mere blockade of their river would be sufficient to bring them to terms. It would be needless to add that the affair will receive a very different solution—short, forcible and decisive, but yet not such a one as will entail the necessity of any very extraordinary exertions on the part of this country. The Persian war is at an end. Matters seem quiet at the Cape, and it is of the highest importance that they should remain so. The Cape colony now contains about 10,000 troops, whereof certainly 5,000 should be available for Indian service. These are no raw recruits, but veteran soldiers, inured to a hot climate and the exigencies of a campaign. If this force could be transported at once to Calcutta it would at once enormously to the strength of the Government. So far, we could not have commenced the task of the re-conquest of Upper India under better auspices. Let there not exist any self-deception as to the real nature of the contest up on which we have just entered. The result is certain success if we do but use the means at our disposal with judgment and energy, but it would be difficult to exaggerate the importance of the crisis. So much of India remains still British India as is under the control or the awe of British troops, but not a square league more. Let us at least act upon this conviction as the surest earnest of a speedy success. For a long time past it has been whispered among men who had experience of Indian affairs that sooner or later India would revolt from our rule, and, perhaps, be lost to us for ever.—The first part of the prophecy is fulfilled, or in course of fulfilment. It rests with ourselves to avert the latter and more formidable evil.

[Passed 28th January, A. D. 1854.

I. WHEREAS by an Act passed during the last Session of the Provincial Parliament, entitled, "An Act to repeal certain Duties of Excise, so far as regards Upper Canada, and to vest certain powers in the Municipal authorities of that part of the Province," it is amongst other things enacted, that the Municipal Council of any county or city in Upper Canada shall have full power and authority to make By Laws for regulating and governing Hawkers and Pedlars, and for requiring any such person to take out a License from such officer of the Manipality as shall be designated in such By Laws.

II. Be it enacted, by the Warden and Councillors of the Municipal Corporation of the County of Essex, in Council assembled, by virtue of and under "The Municipal Corporations Act of 1849." That no Hawkers and pedlars, and other trading persons, going from place to place, or travelling, in any way whatever for such purpose, or who have not become householders by permanent residence in any town or place within the said County of Essex, shall carry to sell, or expose or offer for sale any goods, wares or merchandize, without first taking out a License for such purpose.

III. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the Licenses hereinbefore mentioned shall be granted by J. H. Wilkinson, the County Clerk, upon a certificate from the County Treasurer, that such person has paid the amount of such License into his hands. And for every person applying for the same, the sum of £7 10s for double horse conveyances; the sum of £5 for single-horse conveyances; and the sum of £2 for foot-pedlars and Hawkers; and for any persons pedlaring or hawking in any other conveyance than above enumerated, the sum of ten pounds.

IV. Be it further enacted, by the autority aforesaid, That any person or persons who shall sell or carry to sell, or expose or offer to sell, any goods wares or merchandize without first having obtained a License therefor, shall be subject to a penalty of not less than one pound nor more than five pounds for every contravention of this By-Law, to be levied by warrant under the hand and seal of any Justice of the Peace of the County of Essex; and in default of sufficient distress, the party so convicted to be imprisoned in the common Gaol of the County of Essex for a period not exceeding twenty days.

V. Be it enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that all moneys received for Licenses, and all penalties and fees levied and collected under this By Law, shall be paid into the Treasury of the County of Essex, which shall form part of the general funds of the County.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT.

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influences

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. ASCRY ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world prove its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost marvellous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism Stiffness of the joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the hospitals for this purpose, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,

A BAD HABIT.—It has been said, to "break a horse of the habit of breaking his halter, you must break his neck;" and some person, desirous of saving time by performing the three feats at once, has recommended that the horse be tied on the bank of a stream, in such a position that when he breaks his halter he may turn a somerset into the water. But on the contrary, a horse can be broken of the trick, and that without endangering his life or limbs. The remedy is simply to tie the hore, with a good stout halter, to the end of a stout limb of a tree near the ground. A horse does not break his halter by a steady pull, but by jerking at it, and as the limb will spring whenever he jerks, it will prevent his snapping it. Tie the horse in various places, (to limbs) because if he is kept tied in one place he soon gives up pulling at the halter there, but when tied to a post he soon resumes his old tricks.—True Flag.

The best way to break the animal of the above habit is not to halter him, but let him remain loose in the stall, merely tieing a rope across the entrance of the stall.

Egyptian, or Mummy Corn.

Perhaps the most wonderful and interesting specimen of the earth in the Horticultural Exhibition recently closed, was some Egyptian Corn, raised in the garden of Gen. Wm. H. Sumner, of Jamaica Plains, and kindly sent by him for exhibition, thus giving thousands an opportunity of seeing one of the greatest curiosities within our knowledge. The seed from which this corn was raised, was taken from the folds of cloth wrapped around a mummy three or four thousand years ago, and wonderful as it may seem, after being entombed for so many centuries, like a resurrection from the dead, it springs up in new life and vigor. It is undoubtedly the kind of grain for which Joseph's brethern went into the land of Egypt—the same "corn" of which the Bible speaks. It is luxuriant in its growth, and the heads resemble wheat, but are very much larger, formed in inverted conical clusters as large as the closed hand; the kernels are large, and very sweet to the taste and the stock and leaves are similar to our Indian Corn. There seems to be no reason why it may not become a valuable addition to our cereal productions, and thanks are due to the gentlemen who are multiplying it, and bringing it into notice.—N. Y. Evening Post.

TALL WHEAT.—Mr. W. F. Kelley, of Meridian, informs us that he measured some wheat stalks in his field, that were six feet three and a half inches in length. Mr. Kelley thinks that it is "tall wheat," and so do we.—Lansing Rep.

The family fireside is a nursery of virtue. How many vices are suppressed and temptations to evil overcome that there may be no bad example! How many exertions made to so act and live as to inculcate a good one!

THE TANSY AND ITS VALUE.—M. De Morogues announces that this plant—dried—is excellent sheep food, and that, when fresh it makes capital litter for domestic animals Its peculiar balsamic odor most effectually drives away fleas. A lapdog sleeping on a bed of fresh tansy, is immediately freed from these vermin. It should be renewed when the leaves are quite dry. This seems a better application of the plant than following the example of our grandmother and making it into cakes.

Peaches.

There are various ways of putting up this delicate fruit. We will give several receipts, and the housekeeper can try all, or select the one she likes best.

1. Make a syrup, using half a pound of sugar for every pound of fruit. Pare and halve your peaches. Boil them five or ten minutes in the syrup. Fill the cans or jars, and seal up while hot.

2. Pare and cut the peaches in halves.—As they are cut up, place them in a convenient vessel in layers, putting as much sugar as is regarded desirable between each layer. Cover the vessel containing the fruit, and set it into a boiler of water. Let the water boil until the fruit is heated through; be sure that the fruit at the centre is heated, as well as that at the sides. Then fill the cans first heating them by rinsing with boiling water, and seal without delay. It is better to heat a quantity of the peaches together and then transfer to the cans, than to heat after the fruit is put into them. The large month of these vessels allows this to be done without injury to the fruit.

3. Stew your peaches, whole or cut, with sugar, as for the tea-table. Fill the cans and seal up hot.

PEARS.—Same as peaches No. 3. If hard, boil in water until softened, before the sugar is added.

QUINCES AND PEARS.—Take good preserving pears, peel and quarter them, and boil in a small quantity of water until tender. Take about one-fourth the quantity of quinces, and do them in the same day. Then put both together, with as much sugar as will sweeten to the taste, into a preserving kettle, and let them boil for three or four minutes While boiling hot, pour into the cans or jars and seal.

TOMATOES.—Take off the skin; put them in a preserving kettle, or other convenient vessel without salt, and boil them a quarter of an hour. Fill the cans or jars, and seal up hot.

Some persons, in putting up berries, especially strawberries, prefer covering them in the cans with a light syrup, instead of sweetening at the time of using them. It is quite desirable to do so; the fruit is improved by it. To make the syrup, add one pound of crushed sugar to one pint of water, and boil two minutes.

Persons who have used any kind of fruit can, and have succeeded in keeping the fruit, are advised to follow their own recipes, and not regard the printed directions.

APPLES.—Take firm, well-flavoured apples, such as pipins, &c. Pare, quarter, and boil until tender, but not so long as to break in pieces. Then add as much sugar as will sweeten to the taste, and let the whole boil up once or twice. Fill the cans or jars, and seal as above. Few articles for winter desert or the tea-table, will be found more delicate. Try a few cans.

FRIGHTENED OUT OF HIS SKIN.—A young man went out hunting for deer in the woods near Lanark C. W., recently, and as a an experiment, he clothed himself in a deer skin, and took a stand where those animals were known to pass quite often. While thus intent upon securing some game, another hunter came near making game of him: for happening to see what he supposed to be a fine deer through the thicket, the new-comer took deliberate aim at it and fired. Fortunately the ball missed the counterfeit deer, but it succeeded in "frightening him out of his skin.

A Joker, learning that an absconding debtor intended to settle in California, said he was glad to hear that he ment to "settle somewhere.

A patent has been taken out in Boston for cleaning fish by giving them snuff; when they sneeze, there scales come off.

A country paper lately got up an account of a fire, headed:—"Destructive fire—Eleven Buildings, Ten Horses and One Cow in Ruins."

When a man dies, men ask what property he leaves—angels ask what good deed he has sent before him.

Young ladies are like arrows—they are all in a quiver till the beaux come, and can't get off without them.

INDUSTRY.—An hour's industry will do more to beget cheerfulness, suppress illhumour and retrieve your affairs, than a month's moaning.

A GOOD DANCE.—In Ashantee, no less than 1500 persons stand up at once to the dance, the King in the midst beating time on the tom-toms, and kills anybody who spoils the figure.

At a Sunday School examination the teacher asked a boy whether he could forgive those who wronged him?

"Could you," said the teacher, "forgive a boy for example, who has insulted or struck at you?" "Ye-e-s-sir," replied lad very slowly. "I think—I—could, if he was biger than I am."

A GOOD'UN.—Home Jounal says:—A friend tell's us the following, which he considers a good 'un:—

Being in a mechanic's shop the other day an urchin came in, his dress covered with mud. His father observing his dirty plight said to him—

"William my son, how come you to muddy your dress so?"

The boy stopped a moment, then looking his father in the eye, very observingly asked—

"Father, what am I made of?"

"Dust. The Bible says, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

"Well father, if I am dust, how can I help being muddy when it rains on me?"

"William, go down stairs and get some wood; start!"

WOOD AND IRON SAILING VESSELS.—Two yachts, the one of wood and the other of iron, are now being constructed at Boston by the most experienced builders, to test the relative merits of wood and iron for speed in sailing vessels. They are of the same size and model and will shortly be pulled to test their sailing capacities.

MORMON NEWSPAPERS.—Besides their papers published in Utah, the Mormons have one in New York one in SanFrucisco, one in England, one in Wales, and one in each of the countries of Denmark, Switzerland and Australia.

In human happiness everything is relative; what constitutes the joy of one man is the torment of another.

It is a double shame to a man to have inherited distinction from his ancestry if he bequeaths disgrace to his posterity.

A man being sympathized with on account of his wife's running away, said, "don't pity me till she comes back again."

A woman said in a police court the other day, that before marriage, he rhusband pretended to be much struck with her, but now she was every day struck by him.

JOHN EGAN, Esq, M. P. P. for the County of Pontiac, died at Quebec, on Friday afternoon last.

Eugene Sue is seriously ill at Savoy.—Among Ticknor & Field's announcements we notice a new novel by C. a'los Reade called "White Lines;" a new poem by Alexander Smith Leigh Ants's complete poetical works, collected by himself; Whitter's poems entire, and Charles Kingsley's Miscellaneous Writings.

The London Quarterly says most long livers are very short of statute. Rather paradoxical, that! We had thought that tall men live longest.

If a young man has black eyes and a lump on his nose, how long will it take him to win the heart of his lady fair, supposing him to be addicted to stattering?

Men kiss the hands of women after kissing their lips on probably the same principle that children, unwilling to leave the tempting fruit, eat the rind of the apple after devouring the apple itself.

A jeweller advertises that he has a number of precious stone to dispose of, adding that they sparkle like the tears of a young widow.

A fashionable duchess in Paris recently issued invitations for an evening party, with the words, sans crinoline written on her cards.

A person being asked why he had given his daughter in marriage to a man with whom he was at enmity, answered:—"I did it out of pure revenge."

The new marriage law which has just been passed in Australia, recognizes the marriage of a boy of fourteen with a girl of twelve as valid.

"What are wages here?" asked a labourer of a boy.

"Don't know, Sir"

"What does your father get on a Saturday night?"

"Get! said the boy, "why he gets as tight as a brick."

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimit ed - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's New Method, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING,

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such by arbitrary and infallible rules, improper forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It tends to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required for the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by some of the best Penmen in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular and successful at our best Commercial men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fine view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the United States.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Faculty having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for many of his graduates.

A Plain Man's Philosophy.

BY CHARLES MACKAY.

I've a guinea I can spend,
I've a wife, and I've a friend;
And a troop of little children at my knee,
John Brown.
I've a cottage of my own,
With the ivy overgrown.
And a garden with a view of the sea, John Brown;
I can sit at my door
By my shady sycamore,
Large of heart, though of very small estate,
John Brown;
So come and drain a glass
In my arbor as you pass,
And I'll tell you what I love and what I hate, John Brown.

I love the song of birds,
And the children's early words,
And a loving woman's voice, low and sweet, John Brown,
And I hate a false pretence,
And the want of common sense,
And arrogance, and fawning, and deceit, John Brown;
I love the meadow flowers,
And the brier in the bowers,
And I love an open face without guile, John Brown;
And I hate a selfish knave,
And a proud, contented slave
And a lout who'd rather borrow than he'd toil, John Brown.

I love a simple song
That awakes emotions strong,
And the word of hope that raises him who faints, John Brown;
And I hate the constant whine
Of the foolish who repine,
And turn their good to evil by complaints, John Brown;
But ever when I hate,
If I seek my yard in gate,
And survey the world around me, and above, John Brown,
The hatred flies my mind,
And I sigh for human kind,
And excuse the faults of those I cannot love, John Brown.

So, if you like my ways,
And the comfort of my days,
I will tell you how I live so unvexed, John Brown;
I never scorn my health,
Nor sell my soul for wealth,
Nor destroy one day the pleasures of the next, John Brown;
I've parted with my pride,
And I take the sunny side,
For I've found it worse than folly to be sad, John Brown;
I keep a conscience clear,
I've a hundred pounds a year,
And I manage to exist and to be glad, John Brown.

I Come From Ashbrooke.

Dear me! how many years back is that! Twenty years ago it must be now—long before I ever thought of going to sea—before I let rambling notions get into my head—when I used to walk up the street singing, and thinking of the time when I should come to have a forge of my own.

It was a pretty sight to look down Ashbrooke, especially on a fine summer's day, when the sun was out. Why, I've been told painters would come from miles off, purposely to put it down on paper, and you'd see them at turnings of the road, and under trees working away like bees. And no wonder; for I have seen pictures enough in my day, but none to go near that. I've often wished I could handle a brush like some of those people—just enough, you know, to make a little picture of it for myself, to bring about with me, and hang up over my hammock. For that matter, I am looking at it this moment, standing, as it might be, at the corner of the road, looking down the slope. There was the old church, just here on the right, with a slanting roof running to the ground, almost. You might walk round it for a month and not see a bare stone, the moss grew so thick all over it. It was very pleasant of Sundays, standing by and seeing the village folk trooping out of the porch, and hearing the organ-music playing away inside! Then, going down the hill a little further on, you met, queer, old-fashioned houses, with great shingle roofs. Beyond that, again, was a puzzling bit of building, like the half of a church window, standing up quite still by itself.—They used to say there had once been an abbey or nunnery in these parts, full of clergymen and clergywomen, in the old papist times, of course; and there were little bits of it sticking up all over the place.—Then more old houses (How the moss did grow, to be sure!), until you passed by the Joyful Heart Inn, where every traveller pulled up to refresh himself and his nag.—Many is the pleasant hour I've spent in the Joyful Heart, sitting in the cool porch with the ivy hanging down overhead, or by the great fireplace in the sanded kitchen

There was a sort of open place in front of the Joyful Heart, with a market-cross in the middle, and a spring where the young women used to come for water, and stand talking there, telling each other the news.—The painters used to put them down too—spring and all; and I don't wonder at their fancying them. For, when I was sitting that way in the porch, looking out at them, the red petticoats, and the queer jars, and the old cross, and the sun going down behind, made a kind of picture very pretty to look at. I've seen the same of it many a time in some of those places about the Spanish main, when the foreign women stood round about and carried their jars in the same fashion. Only there was no Joyful Heart. I always missed the Joyful Heart in such places. Neither was there the Great Forge just over the way, facing the Joyful Heart. I must put in a word here about the Forge, though I have been a long time coming round to the point

I never saw such a forge as that—never! It must have been another bit of the old Abbey—the great gate, most likely, for it was nothing but a huge, wide, archway.—Very handsomely worked, though, and covered with moss like the rest. There was a little stone hutch at the top, that looked like a belfry. The bell was gone long ago, of course, but the rings were there, and the staunchions, all soundly made—good work as I could have turned out myself. Some one had run up a bit of building at the back, which kept out the wind and made all snug, and there you had as handsome a forge as I ever came across.

It was kept by a young man of the name of Whichelo—Will Whichelo. But he had another name besides that, and I think a better one. If you were to go asking through the village for one Will Whichelo, why, you would come back about as wise as you went; unless, indeed, you chanced upon the minister or schoolmaster. No: but because he was always seen hard at his work, swinging his hammer with good-will and stopping back at every stroke to get a better sweep—because he laid his whole soul to the business—the Ashbrooke folk christened him Ding Dong Will. He was always singing at his work. Many a nice young woman of the village would have been glad if Ding Dong Will had looked her way.—But he never took heed of any of them, or was more than civil and gentle with them.

"Look ye," he would say, leaning on his great hammer, "are they the creatures for handling cold iron, or lifting the sledge?—No, no!" and would take up his favorite stave of Hammer and anvil! hammer and anvil! lads, yoho!

I was but a youngster at that time, but had a great hankering after the iron business. I would be nothing else, I told my father, who wanted to send me up to London to learn accounts. I was always dropping down there, and would stay half the day, leaning against the arch and watching the forging. Coming along of a night, I used to get quite cheerful when I saw the blaze of the furnace, and the chinking of the iron was the finest music for me I ever heard—finer than the organ tunes even.—Sometimes of a stay Will would come gallopping in, and pull up sharp at the forge; he had cast a shoe on the road, and Ding Dong Will would come out and take the horse's measure. Then the village folk would get standing round, in twos and threes, all of them eyeing over the horse and the rider, too. Then he would get upon his nag once more, and the little crowd would open, and he ride away harder than he came, Ding Dong Will, with his hammer over his shoulder, looking after him till he got to the turn of the hill.

At last, my father came round and gave up making me a clerk—it would never have done—and Ding Dong Will, who had a liking for me, agreed to take me at the Forge.—I soon got to use the big sledge fairly enough—nothing, of course, to Ding Dong Will; and so we worked away from morning till night, like two Jolly Millers.—There was fine music at the Forge, when the two of us were at it.

Ding Dong Will never went to the Joyful Heart; he said he had no time to be idle; but I went pretty often—that is, when the day was done and work over—just to have a talk in the cool porch, and hear what company was in the house. For, Miss Arthur—Mary Arthur—she that used to sit in the parlor and manage the house, was never very stand-off to me. But she had a reason of her own for that, as you will see. She was niece to old Joe Fenton, the landlord, who brought her down from London to keep things going. In short, she was as good as mistress there. Folks said she kept her head a little high; but, to say truth, I never found her so. She had had her schooling up in London, and had learned manners with the best of them, so it was but nature she should be a stroke above the girls of the place. That was why they didn't like her. About her looks? Ah! she was a beauty! Such hair—it went nigh down to her feet—and her eyes—why they shot fire like a pair of stars—and she had a way of shifting the half of a church window, standing up quite still by itself.—They used to say there had once been an abbey or nunnery in these parts, full of clergymen and clergywomen, in the old papist times, of course; and there were little bits of it sticking up all over the place.—Then more old houses (How the moss did grow, to be sure!), until you passed by the Joyful Heart Inn, where every traveller pulled up to refresh himself and his nag.—Many is the pleasant hour I've spent in the Joyful Heart, sitting in the cool porch with the ivy hanging down overhead, or by the great fireplace in the sanded kitchen

He was well worth looking out at, was Ding Dong Will. I used to tell him, "Mary Arthur is making eyes at you yonder—have a care, Will." And he would laugh loud, and say, "She may find better sport elsewhere. No sweethearts for me, lad. Hand the file. Sing Hammer and anvil, yoho!"

I never saw so insensible a fellow, never. But her liking slipped out in more ways than that. Whenever I went in, she was always taking notice of me, and asking about myself. How I was getting on at the Forge! Did I like the business Did we do much? What kind was he, the other—he with the curious name? Then she would laugh, and show her white teeth.

At last, one Saturday evening I was sitting in the porch, looking at the children playing in the road when I heard a step at the back and there was Mary Arthur standing behind me "Resting after the week?" she said.

"Yes and a hard week we've had of it."

"Nothing doing at the Forge now, I suppose," says she. (He had gone down to the green with the young fellows to throw the bar.)

"No," says I; "we've let the fire out, and will rest till Monday."

She stayed silent for a minute, and then —"Why does he—Whichelo I mean—keep shut up that way at home?" She was beating her hands impatiently together.—"What does it all mean? What do you make of it?"

I stared, you may be sure, she spoke so sharply.

"Does he never go out and see the world —go to dances, or merry-makings?"

"No," said I; "never."

"Well," said she, "Isn't it odd; how do you account for it?"

"Well, it is odd," I said.

"And he so young!"

All this while she was shifting her black eyes in a restless kind of way.

"You should try," says she, "and get him to mix more with the others, for your own sake as well as his."

I was going to tell her I was at him morning, noon, and night, when the bell rang, and she tripped off.

Ding Dong Will came into the Forge that night, fairly tired and done up. "Beat them as usual?" he said, as he flung himself down on the bench.

"I knew you would," I said.

"But it was thirsty work: some drink, for Heaven's sake!"

"There's not a drop of malt in the house" I said.

"Well, go over and fetch some."

Said I, "Go yourself. I tell you what, there's a nice girl there always talking of you; and if you've anything of a man about you, you'll go over and speak her softly, and show her you're not what she takes you for. Now, there's my mind for you, Ding Dong Will."

"Stuff," says he, laughing; "let her mind her own business, and leave me to my anvil. I'll not go."

"Ah! you're afraid," said I—"that's it!"

"Afraid," says he, starting up; "you know I'm not—you know I'm not. Here, I'll go," and made straight for the door. "Stop," he said, turning round, "what did she say about taking me for a different sort of man?"

"No matter now," said I. "When you come back."

It should have been a five minutes' job, that fetching the malt. But, would you believe it? he was close upon an hour about it. I knew well she had not been losing her time. When he came in, I began "at once at him: 'Ah! I'ah!" said I, 'didn't I tell you? I knew it!"

"Nonsense," said he, with a foolish kind of laugh, "it was none of my fault. She kept me there with her talk, and I couldn't get away."

"O, poor Ding Dong Will," I said, "You had better have stayed away, after all!"

"Folly!" says he, laughing more foolishly still; "you'll see if she gets me there again. Enough about her. There!"

I saw he was uneasy in his mind, and so gave him no more trouble. But I needn't have been so delicate with him at all, for next day it was quite the other way. He never gave me peace or rest, sounding me and picking out of me what she had said of him. The man was clean gone from that hour. It's always the way with those kind of men; when they are touched, they run off like a bit of melted metal.

He got worse every day from that out—He was in and out of the Joyful Heart half his time, always on some excuse or other, and going lazily to his work, stopping every now and again to have a look at the white curtain over the way. It was a poor thing to see him. At last he came to doing nothing at all, or next to nothing; and the great hammer was laid by in a corner.

Reading One's own Obituary.

The tenure of the Major-Generalship of Massachusetts, like that of a good many other offices in that ancient Commonwealth, is for life during good behaviour. The Boston Transcript says that one of them lived so long that a wicked wag, at his request death, gave a sentiment at a public dinner:—The memory of our late Major-General—may he be eternally rewarded in heaven for his everlasting services on earth."—Judge of the surprise of the author of this toast, on learning, the next day, that the report was false, and the veteran officer still alive.

This reminds us of an occurrence that took place in the same State some years ago. In the days of old Mycall, the publisher of the Newburyport Herald, (a journal still alive and flourishing,) the Sheriff of Essex, Philip Bagley, had been asked several times to pay up his arrears of subscription. At last he one day told Mycall that he would certainly "hand over" the next morning as sure as he lived. "If you don't get your money tomorow you may be sure I am dead," said he.

The morrow came and passed, but no money. Judge of the sheriff's feelings when on the morning of the day after, he opened his Herald, and saw announced the lamented decease of Philip Bagley, Esq., High Sheriff of the county of Essex; with an obituary notice attached, giving the deceased credit for a good many excellent traits of character, but adding that he had one fault very much to be deplored: he was not punctual in paying the printer.

Bagley, without waiting for breakfast, started for the Herald office. On the way it struck him as singular that none of the many friends and acquaintances he met seemed to be surprised to see him. They must have seen their morning paper. Was it possible they cared so little about him as to have forgotten already that he was no more? Full of purterbation he rushed into the printing office to deny that he was dead in propria persona.

"Why, sheriff," exclaimed the facetious editor. "I thought you were defunct!"

"Defunct!" exclaimed the sheriff. "What put that idea into your head?"

"Who, yourself," said Mycall. "Did you not tell me—"

"Oh! ah! yes, I see!" stammered out the Sheriff. "Well there's your money! And now contradict the report in the next paper if you please."

"That's not necessary, friend Bagley," said the old joker; "it was only printed in your copy!"

The good Sheriff lived many years after this "sell," and to the day of his death always took good care to pay the printer.

Miscellany.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Those who have been taught to believe that there is no remedy for cancer but the knife, are invited to read the following statement: Reuben Withers, late of Brooklyn, and now residing at Marysville, California, was for several months treated secundum artem, by two physicians, for what they pronounced to be a cancerous tumor on the left breast. Finally they recommended excision, but the patient having heard much of the efficacy of Holloway's Ointment, in such cases, resolved to try its effects before submitting his flesh to the steel. He used it in conformity with the directions for two months, at the end of which time the lump had entirely disappeared, and up to the date of his leaving for San Francisco, in August last, an interval of fourteen weeks, no symptoms of its re-appearance could be discovered. The Pills are equally efficacious in all internal diseases.

"This is George the Fourth, sa'd an exhibitor of waxwork for the million, at threepance each, pointing to a very slim figure, with a threatrical crown on his head." "I thought he was a very stout man," very likely" replied the man shortly, not approving of the comment of his visitor; "but if you'd a been here without victuals half so long as he has you'd been twice as thin."

The following was picked up in the street a few days since accompanying a little bunch of glossy brown hair, which looked as if it had been pulled out with a finetooth comb:

Och, Biddy, me darlint,
Here's a lock of me hair,
And if there's a smart in it,
Never a bit do I care,
Any how!

I'm going off, Biddy,
To work on the track,
Ye can take it, and kapo it,
Until I get back,
If ye like:

But if you don't you can let it alone, be dad I'm not particular.

An old lady, from the country, had a dandy from the city to dine with her on a certain occasion. For the desert there was an enormous apple-pie. "La, ma'am," said the gentleman, "how do you manage to handle such a pie?" Easy enough," was the quiet reply; "we make the crust up in a wheelbarrow, wheel it under an apple-tree, and then shake the fruit down into it."

WOMAN'S HEART.—There is a period in the early life of every true woman when moral and intellectual growth seems for a time to cease. The vacant heart seeks for an occupant. The intellect, having appropriated such an aliment as was requisite to the growth of the uncrowned feminine nature, feels the necessity of more intimate companionship with the masculine mind to start it upon its second period of development. Here at this point some stand for years without making a step in advance.—Others marry and astonish, in a few brief years, by their sweet temper, their new beauty, their high accomplishments, and their noble womanhood, those whose blindness led them to suppose they were among the incurably heartless and frivolous.

'Jimmy, are your folks all well?'
'Yes, ma'am, all but Sally Ann.'
'Why, what's the matter with her?'
'O nothing particular—only she had the hoopin' cough once, and she hain't never got over it. The cough an't any account now, but she has the loop desp'rate'

Epicures are aware that the only part of the frog which is eaten is the hind legs.—The society for the protection of Animals of Berne has obtained the insertion, in a special law on the subject, of an article prohibiting the practice hitherto adopted of tearing off the hind legs of these animals before their heads are cut off.

"Setting a Man Trap," is the title given to a picture of a very pretty young lady arranging her curls at a mirror.

SANDWICH, AUGUST, 18, 1857.

BANK ROBBERY.

We learn from the Globe of Tuesday that the "preliminary investigations in this important case have been closed, except as to the hearing of Counsel. Two of the accused Kerby and McGaffey, were examined yesterday, as witnesses for the defence. They were cross examined at considerable length, and some important facts elicited. The arguments of Counsel will probably occupy the attention of the Bench another day. Mr. Read, on behalf of Cummings, was urging the insufficiency of the evidence to establish any crime against his client, when the court adjourned to 9½ o'clock this morning. Mr. Patterson Mr. Eccles, and Dr. Connor are to follow for the defence, and Mr. Gamble will reply for the prosecution. The Magistrates intimated that it might become necessary to take the opinion of the law officers of the Crown before giving judgment.

It will be seen from the proceedings already published that the Charge of Robbery has been for the present, abandoned, and that of Embezzlement substituted. There will be no occasion to look elsewhere for the robber, or robbers, if the present charge is made out. We will not anticipate the decision of the Bench, but it is scarcely possible after what has been admitted, that all the parties will be allowed to escape the ordeal of an investigation before a higher Court. There are many facts of grave importance involved in this case which would justify more than a passing comment, but we abstain until the Magistrates have decided the points now before them.

☞ We have been kindly furnished with a List of Prizes to be awarded at the Provincial Exhibition, to be held in the Town of Brantford, on the 20th and 30th of September, and 1st and 2nd of October next, as well as the accompanying address.

Parties in this neighborhood, who may be desirous of entering articles for competition at the Provincial Exhibition, may obtain the form of application and full particulars at this office.

We hope and trust that the County of Essex will be represented, and that well.—The distance this season is quite shorter every facility will be afforded for conveying articles to and from the Exhibition. Let there be a strong move, and a creditable one.

THE CROPS.

As far as we can learn, the wheat crop has been harvested, has turned out much better that many supposed it would. Although considerable injury was done by the weevil, there is yet an average crop.

THE FREE COLOURED POPULATION IN CHARLES COUNTY.—The citizens of Nanjemoy district in Charles County, Md., have held a meeting, and formed a "Mutual Self-Protection Association," the object of which is the better government, as well as the amelioration of the wretched, hilly, and thriftless condition of the free coloured population of that district. They have adopted a resolution that every free coloured person living on side life, who shall not, by the 17th of July, procure a permanent home, shall be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for the remainder of the year. It appears that the farmers of the district have suffered severely by the dishonesty of the idle and dissolute portion of the coloured population, and have combined for self-preservation in the future.—Anti Slavery Standard.

It is a great pity that a similar move could not be carried out in this neighborhood.—Ed. M. L.

On Tuesday morning, in the emigrant train, immediately on its arrival at the Windsor Station, a female was safely delivered of a son, Dr. Dewson attending the inauguration of the little stranger. Accommodation was offered to the mother until she should be able to proceed, but she did not appear to require any help, as in half an hour after the occurence she was able to cross the River Detroit for the purpose of proceeding on her journey. The lady was from the Emerald Isle and on her passage west.—Herald.

Nuthy and Woodward, two enterprising Southern gentlemen, have purchased the Cotton Mills formerly in operation in the village of Thorold, and have completed arrangements to carry on an extensive business in the cotton manufacture, importing the raw material direct from the Cotton Plantations of the South, by way of the St. Lawrence, and which is now admitted into the Province free of duty.

ENFORCEMENT OF THE FISHERY ACT.—This day at the police court, of J. K. Boswell, Esq., Ellice Dewar, charged with spearing salmon by torchlight on the River Jacques Cartier, in contravention of the Fishery Act, was on his pleading guilty, condemned in the lesser penalty of the law, £2, and costs 54s. Half of the fine, to which the informant is by law entitled, was forthwith remitted by Mr. Boswell, in consideration of the defendant's promising not to spear again.—Quebec Mercury.

NEW POST OFFICE.—Joseph Munger, of Munger's Corner, has been appointed postmaster for part of the Township of Colchester—the Post office to be called Harrow. We understand the people are indebted to Col. Prince for this convenience to the Township. Joseph Munger will make a good Post master.—Herald.

The Kingston Whig states that all the remaining right and title of the Earl of Mountenshel in the fee simple of Amherst Island, (a separate Township,) was sold at Sheriff's sale in Kingston, on Saturday last. The purchaser was A. J. Macdonell, Esq., (probably for a client) and the price the Island was knocked down for was £6,000. It is said Mortgages exist to the amount of £66,000, which added to the purchase money and costs, will make the Island cost £75,000! There were upwards of 20,000 acres in fee simple, belonging to the Earl, all in excellent cultivation and worth £8 per acre, exclusive of buildings.

Suits have been commenced against Messrs Gibson and Breslin, the last two State Treasurers of Illinois, and their agents in their sureties, for the recovery of the money missing from the Treasury. Mr. Gibson is possessed of $200,000 in his own right, and has made all his property over to his bondsmen. The money for paying the July interests on the States bonds has all been collected and sent to New York. Breslin is now found to have been extensively engaged in "wild cat" banking during his official term, and Mr. Morgan, who was actor with him, says he knew the Treasury was not all right.

The new License Law of the State of N. Y. meets with much opposition. A society of liquor dealers has been formed, comprising nearly one thousand members, with $100,000 subscribed for the purpose of attempting to procure the repeal or modification of the law.

Robbery of $16,000.

On Thursday night last, a daring and successful robbery was perpetrated in the branch office of the Bank of Upper Canada, which is situated in the western wing of the Parliament Buildings, and cash to the amount of four thousand pounds carried off. Since the late removal of the Seat of Government to Toronto, the Bank has occupied an apartment in the buildings, fitted it up as an office and placed a cashier (Mr. Cummings) in it, with funds to meet the payment of Government warrants, allowance to M.P.P.'s, salaries of the officials, and other ordinary expenses. This arrangement which was considered convenient, obviated the necessity of parties receiving cheques going to the head Bank, a considerable distance; but that arrangement has turned out a serious loss to the Bank. The officials are paid on the last day of each month, and to meet this expenditure over £4,000 were brought to the Parliament House on Thursday. The perpetrators of the robbery must have been aware of this, which has led to the suspicion that none but persons well acquainted with the fact have accomplished the deed. It is said that Mr. Cummings left the office as the usual hour on Thursday, leaving as he believed all secure. Next morning on returning, he was startled to observe the door of the safe open, the tin-box inside rifled of its valuable contents, and all the cash abstracted, save about £200 or £300 in silver and gold, which lay in a corner, and which it is probable, escaped the notice of the robbers. Upon further examination it was found the entrance was effected by breaking a portion of glass next the brass catch of the window and then raising the latter up. On looking about the window sill in $5 bills was found underneath, either dropped or thrown purposely by the thief. There are several circumstances attending this mysterious robbery, which, for the ends of Jusice, we defer now publishing particularly as an active investigation into the matter has been instituted by the Chief of Police, The cash carried off consisted wholly of U. C. bills As yet no clue has been obtained. It is not, we understand, the intention of the Directors to continue any longer this branch in the Parliament buildings, the dear experience they have had of late was only a questionable accommodation, having determined them to come to this conclusion.—Globe.

From the Toronto Leader of Thursday

The Bank Robbery.

Though but little would appear to have been doing up to yesterday for the detection of the thieves perpetrating the late robbery in the Government branch of the Bank of Upper Canada,—there has been no laxity of vigilance on the part of those undertaking the duty. And, in this respect, the services of the English detective now in our city are worthy of especial acknowledgement. In the prosecution of their enquiries, the Chief of Police and detective, speedily ascertained that the robbery, if such there had been, must have been committed by some parties knowing the premises well. Mr. McGaffery, junr. and J. T. Kerby were said to have been in the Bank Office for a long time, with Mr. Cummings, during the day before the robbery, and both parties were believed to be very intimate with Mr. Cummings.—Other facts of a very suspicious nature were also said to have been brought to light, respecting these parties, and these facts will, doubtless, transpire in the course of the investigation. The result was that warrants were subsequently issued against Messrs. Cummings, and McGaffery, and these parties were taken into custody yesterday. They have been, so far as we have been able to ascertain,—arrested on a charge of robbery and embezzlement.

Almost immediately after the robbery, suspicion, as we have said, fell upon these parties, and on Saturday morning they could have been closely watched in order to prevent their escape. Kerby and Cummings have been very intimate for a long time.—Kerby has been deeply engaged in numerous land speculations; and recently we believe, some of his property has been sold by the Sheriff. It is rumoured that Cummings had lent considerable sums of money to one or both of the other parties implicated in this affair; and should this turn out to be true, it is doubtful whether any robbery has been committed at all. It would, in fact, be much more likely that these parties found themselves unable to pay the advances made to them, without authority, by Cummings, —probably for speculative purposes and which they had expected to turn to speedy account and refund—and then made an attempt to cover up the matter under a guise of a robbery. The fact was discovered,—in the first instance, we believe by the London detective officer now in this city—that the glass in the window of the apartment used as the bank, had been cut open from the inside. The discovery of a sum of money—some $500—upon the office floor, may have been considered a necessary trick in order to bring out the appearance of a robbery.

Kerby is a Canadian, practising as an attorney in this city—a man who has been over-whelmed in speculations, and, in fact, altogether a fast man. He is, we believe, married respectably.

McGaffrey is an American, and has been somewhat extensively connected with railroad contracts. Some time ago, if we mistake not, he held a considerable amount of stock in the Northern Railway; and up to a recent period he was a director of that company. He is also a married man and a father.

Cummings is a Scotchman, of the McGill family. The family, we understand, were from Glasgow, and came to New York on the death of the father. In that city they were for some time engaged as teachers of music. He, too, is married respectably; and up to this time has borne a good character for honesty by his employers.

The investigation will, it is understood, be proceeded with this morning, by the Police Magistrate as soon as possible, as it is likely to occupy much time.

A rumour which prevailed yesterday, to the effect that a Captain Morgan had also been arrested for the robbery, does not appear to be founded on fact. Up to a late hour last night no such arrest had taken place.

Another rumor which has of late circulated extensively in the city, may here be mentioned. Instead of being £4,000, as at first thought, it is said, that the Bank defalcations will be largely in excess of that amount.

Cleverly Executed Counterfeit.

A remarkably well executed counterfeit was paid in yesterday to Mr. Henderson, corner of King and East Market Streets. It was originally a 'One' of the Quebec Bank payable at Montreal, but by a chemical process the ink had been discharged at each corner and in the body of the bill, and the figure '20' and the word 'twenty' inserted with so much neatness as almost to render detection impossible. The only peculiarity about the appearance of the bill is that the back is somewhat greasy in appearance where the alteration has been effected; and the border, in which the word "one" is printed, has been clipped off all round; but it might pass through twenty hands without exciting suspicion. It was only when Mr. Henderson paid the bill over to the bank, under the impression that it was a genuine '20" that he was made aware of its spurious character. The vignette, the letteringand the signatures are those which usually appear on the Quebec Bank one dollar bills, and do not appear to have been meddled with in any way. Bills of the same denomination, and of the same bank, altered to '5's' are in circulation, and might pass current anywhere except at a bank.

Charivari.

A charivari attended with rather serious results took place in the township of East Gwillimbury a few days ago. The facts we glean from the Newmarket Era.

A company of young men and boys assembled around the house in which the bride and bridegroom were to spend the night, and commenced making discordant sounds, when Mr. Eli Birchard, a brother of the newly married, came out and ordered the parties off (the time was 9 P.M.) The company then retreated into the road and again commenced their music; but a young man named William Cuyler, being lame, was attacked by Birchard with an axe, who made several passes at him, which Cuyler warded off with a large Cow-bell. During the fray the young man succeeded in reaching the fence, when Birchard hastily tearing off a board struck him with the end of it fair in the face—mangling the jaw in a horrible manner.—Cuyler was picked up for dead; but he shortly after revived and was carried home —bleeding profusely all the while. Dr. Pyne, of Bradford, happening to be in the neighbourhood, was immediately summoned, and succeeded in stanching the blood, but not until the young man had nearly lost his life. He is now lying in a very precarious situation. A strong feeling of indignation against Birchard prevades the whole settlement, and on Saturday night last the charivari party returned with tar and feathers, but were unable to find him. They then demolished the windows and left abundant evidence of their visit.—The next day after the first disturbance, it is said Birchard picked up the teeth he had knocked from the jaw of Cuyler, and went about the neighborhood exhibiting them."

Interesting Incident.

Married in this city, (Chicago,) on Tuesday, July 21st, by the Rev. Alexander Nesbit, of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, (Scotch), Mr. Adam Tate, of Chicago, to Miss. Jannetta Pettigrew, late of Scotland.

There is a bit of romance, sad enough in its character, connected with this announcement, which the parties will forgive us for relating. Six years ago, and these parties were young men all, who had left their plighted faith and lasses behind them when they sought contentment and fortune on our shores, united for the purpose of sending for those to whom their troth was pledged.—They were to and did come out together.—For mutual protection society they took passage in the same vessel. The perilous ocean voyage was made without accident, and the party—a merry and happy party—arrived safely at Quebec, where they took passage on the Montreal. Our readers know and have lamented the fate that overtook that ill-fated vessel and its hundreds of passengers.

When she burned, of the six trusting and generous girls, Miss Pettigrew was the only one saved. Her five companions found either fiery or watery graves. Miss P. was rescued, she knows not how or by whom. Taken up for drowned, the struggle between life and death was long and doubtful, but at last decided in favor of the former. The kind hearted people of Montreal learned her history and admired her modest worth. By them (for she had lost everything but herself) her immediate necessities were supplied, and in a few days, with their blessing and prayers, she continued her journey hither. A few of the five young men, who, besides the now happy husband, had precious freight on board that dreadful night, attended the wedding yesterday. How and the festive gathering was—how the shadow of the fearful past dimmed the brightness of the present, who, that had not felt the destroyer's touch, can tell!—Chicago Tribune.

We have St. Paul papers to the 29th inst., from which we learn that an Indian war is threatened on the frontier settlements by the Sioux Indians. It appears that the Superintendent of Indian Affairs has made the decisive demand that the Sioux Nation shall capture and surrender at Fort Ridgely Ink-pa-du-ta's band of murderers, on the ground that the articles of the treaty of 1851 guaranteed perpetual peace and friendship between the contracting parties. To this demand the Sioux—or at least a large portion of them—refuse to accede. It is reported that 10,000 Indians are in arms, defying the United States troops, and that the settlers are fiving to the forts for protection. A renewal of hostilities is considered unavoidable, though Governor Medary, of Minnesota, is doing all in his power to preserve the peace. The Secretary of War has refused the request of Governor Medary for arms and volunteers, which occasions some excitement in view of the imminence of the danger.

THE FOURTH OF JULY IN THE INDIANA STATE PRISON.—The celebration of Independence day by convicts in the penitentiary may be considered as a wonderful anomaly, but not at all inconsistent with the ideas of progress prevalent in this age. Such an event actually occurred in the State Prison of Indiana, at Jeffersonville, opposite Louisville, last Saturday. The prisoners were granted a holiday, and in the morning an address was delivered by Dr. Menes, of Green county, convicted for life, having committed murder. His speech is said to have been an exceedingly creditable production, abounding in good advice to his fellow convicts.—After dinner a dance came off in one of the large halls, and foot races were run in the yard. The celebration was closed by an oration by I. T. Crawford, of Tippecance county. It was of the regular Fourth of July style, radiant with star-spangled banner notions, and flights of rhetoric about the land of the free.

From the London Court Journal, July 11.

Queen Victoria and the Queen of Oude.

Her Majesty's reception of the Queen of Oude, with her son and grandson, has at length taken place, and nothing could be more gracious than the welcome given by our Queen. The Queen of Oude left Harley House in great state, her Indian crown being placed in the centre. It is a lofty coronet-like cap, in form something like the coronets of our peers, only higher and rounder at the top and, instead of velvet, is a mass of gold tissue ornamented with jewles. On the top of the cap are placed some extraordinary silver ornaments, which sway and jingle about with every movement, producing a sound like a number of silver bells. From the rim of the crown depends the veil, which is really two curtains of gold and colored tissue that meet over the face and then pass down each shoulder. The Queen of Oude wore a cloak of gold tissu pendant from her shoulders, which was borne by a Hindoo lady in waiting," who alone was permitted to enter the carriage with her.—The Queen's dress was a blaze of Eastern magnificence, but she had adopted European fashions sufficiently to display the finest silk stocks of which, though they were ornamented with gold anklets. Her female attendant was remarkable for the absence of gold and jewels, wearing a plain Indian dress, with large red stripes. The Queen, whose name and style is "Janabi Aleeah Mootaleah Nawab Begum Begum Saheb," was attended by a numerous suite, including Mohummud Joorut Alie Khan Bahadoor, a great grandson of Nadir Shah; a chamberlain, a physician, a secretary, a diplomatic agent, and several other officers.—The dresses of the Princess of Oude will doubtless interest most of our metropolitan readers. They each wore the same sort of high coronet cap of gold and jewels, but ornamented with a few small feathers, and without the silver ornaments peculiar to the crown of the Queen. The young Prince was magnificently decorated with jewels, the dress itself being composed of cloth of gold. The Oudians still delight in calling this prince the "heir apparent," and his name and style are "Wuliee Auhad Mirza Mohummud Hamid Allie Bahadoor." His uncle, the elder prince, is called "Mirza Sikunder Hushmut Jumad Allie Bahadoor."

A pro-Slavery paper is about to make its appearance in Manchester, England. The prospectus says it intends to represent the cotton interest, of which Great Britain is the centre, and is established by gentlemen connected with the various branches of the cotton trade, and it will also discuss the negro question and the nature of the negro, and investigate the laws of his wise and humane government, without relation to the abstract theories of Willberforce and of Exeter Hall on the one hand, or the extreme and brutal views of the Cotton planters on the other. The paper will be called the Manchester Cotton Press.

In the case of the man Van Lien, who was mysteously murdered in New York on the 28th ult, the Coroner's Jury have returned a verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown. The citizens not being satisfied with this verdict, held a public meeting to consider the whole circumstances of the case. Inflammatory speeches were delivered—judges, magistrates, and policemen were blamed for giving countenance to murderers and burglars, and an intimation that some of the corrupt officials should be handled for their neglect of duty, was received with applause. It was also resolved that a Vigilance Committee has been formed, and now New York may be said to be under the jurisdiction of Judge Lynch.

Now that the Nicaraguans have got rid of Gen. Walker and his piratical crew, they are proceeding to the formation of a State government. The special correspondence of the New York Tribune, writing from San Juan Del Norte, states that General Martinez, a Granadian, has been made Provincial President of Nicaragua, and Gen. Jarez Minister of war and Commander-in-Chief of the army for eight months, when a general election will be held.

THE FASHIONS.—At the ball given by the French Ministere des affoires Etrangeres the great court beauty proved the falsehood of those who had pronounced the form of her leg faulty above the knee; and the dress, for the first time introduced, which leaves it entirely open on one side, only fastened at intervals by a jewelled brooch, displayed the truth in all its snowy purity.—[Paris Correspondence of the Atlas.

We have intelligence from Utah to the 1st ult. The Mormons are becoming greatly excited at the expected arrival of the United States troops. They assert that they are a much and undeservedly abused people. The Mormon News in an article attempting to prove that Salt Lake Valley is 1000 miles away from any place, has no navigable waters, no runs or dews, is barren and inhospitable, and offers no inducement to a money-getting speculating world. None but Latter Day Saints can, would, or should live there.

One of our Mills 12,000 bu were offered in this way. The lot purchased a few days since proved too damp for grinding, so that those who have made up their mouths for a taste of the "staff of life," of the growth of 1857, will have to "wait for the waggon."

Arrival of the Indian.

QUEBEC, August, 10.

The Canadian mail steamship Indian, Jones, commander, passed Riviere du Loup at one o'clock yesterday afternoon, and arrived in this port at 9 P.M., with advices from London and Liverpool to 29th July. In addition to full cargo, she brings 103 cabin and 180 steerage passengers.

The Indian sailed from Liverpool at 1.30 P.M., 29th ult.; at 4 P.M., passed the Anglo-Saxon from Quebec. Experienced heavy head sea till 24 August; afterwards, foggy weather.

The Niagara, from Boston, arrived in the Mersey early on Sunday morning, 26th ult.; the Columbia, from New York, 29th July.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY EVENING.—D'Israeli brought forward a motion relative to the state of affairs in India which resulted in an address to the Queen, pledging support to Government in the Indian difficulty.

Troops are being shipped for India with every despatch.

Baron Rothschild was returned to Parliament for the city of London without opposition.

The United States frigates Niagara and Susquehanna sailed for Cork with the telegraph cable.

The yacht Charter Oak arrived from New York on the 28th with only 3 men on board.

Rumours that Napoleon was assassinated prevailed in London on the 28th, causing the funds to decline. Later accounts from Paris do not mention any such outrage.

Latest.

INDIA.

The America arrived at Trieste on the 28th of July, at 9 a.m. She left Alexandria on the 23rd of July. The Indian mails left Alexandria on the 23rd with advices from Calcutta to the 21st of June, Madras 28th June, Ceylon 1st July, Bombay 1st July, and Hong Kong 10th June.

The mutiny had continued to spread among the troops of the Bengal army. The ex king of Oude has been arrested and with his minister has been imprisoned in Fort William. The Government has obtained proof of his complicity in the conspiracy.—Up to the 17th June Gen. Barnard had repulsed several sorties from Delhi with heavy losses to the insurgents. He was waiting for reinforcements from Madras. It is positively stated that Delhi has been captured, but the intelligence is not confirmed from Bombay, and seems premature. An act has been passed by the Legislature placing the Indian press under a license system.

The native troops at Calcutta and the brigade at Barrackpore have been quietly disarmed. An uneasy feeling prevails at Madras, but the army of that presidency and that of Bombay are both without the slightest sign of disaffection.

CHINA.

The Chinese fleet has been destroyed in two severe engagements. The Chinese fought their guns with unexampled constancy. We have eighty three m n killed and wounded Major Kearny was killed in the last engagement. Commodore Keppel and the master of the Raleigh have been tried for the loss of that vessel and acquitted. All is quiet in the north. The prices of tea had advanced both at Foochoo Foo and at Shanghai.

The World Carried by a Coup de Main.

A GIGANTIC BUSINESS PLAN.

In all our newspaper experience we have never known any invention or discovery to so completely enchain public attention, and enlist universal confidence, as Holloway's world-sanctioned remedies. All nations seem to have received and adopted them. The journals of the old world, even the leading medical publications there, lent from the first their powerful aid to the inventor. Brother Jonathan followed in the wake of John Bull, and made such enormous drafts upon Professor Holloway's Central Establishment in London, that he found it necessary to come over, and set up a new manufactory in Commercial Capital of America. With this main depot for the new world, he has connected more than thirty thousand dependent agencies, in the various States and Territories of the Union. And this is but a fraction of his gigantic distributive system. He counts his agents by hundreds of thousands, and the mails groan under the weight of his correspondence. He pays the revenue of a petty prince in postage and freight, and we have yet to see the man who can point out a paper, in which Holloway's name has not been mentioned. All this vast system of production, disbursement dissemination, and publicity is under his own immediate management, and he governs it as easy as a telegraphic operator controls the fiery tongue of the lightening. Truly he is a man in whose mental organization the heighest and rarest qualites seems to have commingled. He has done more for suffering humanity in twenty years, than medical science had previously accomplished in twenty centuries.—Boston "Journal."

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influences

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. ANGRY ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world prove its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds. Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, no ointment of the kind is anywhere employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,

On Feeding Horses, Preventing Glanders and Farcy.

A distinguished veterinary surgeon, Professor Dunn, of the Edinburgh Veterinary College, calls attention to the following errors in the dieting of farm horses, which are not less common in this country than in Scotland.

1st. Much too long an interval is allowed to intervene between the times of feeding.—Horses are frequently worked six hours consecutive during which time they receive no food whatever. This practice has been found by experience to be prejudicial to their health, including debility and predisposing to diseases of the digestive system. The natural habits and digestive organs of the horse alike prove that he is not destined for long fasts; as the smallness of his stomach indicates the necessity of supplying it with comparatively small quantities of aliment at short intervals. When at liberty, he eats during 20 out of 24 hours. This natural habit may be modified, but pains should be taken not to run into the opposite extreme. A horse or mule when at work during the day on the farm, should have some nutritious food every five hours at the outside, if the purpose is not to impair his constitutional powers. When a plough team is taken up early in the morning, and expected to work till noon before receiving feeding, it is the present practice of the best Scotch farmers to give each horse a lunch of a pound or more of oatmeal or beanmeal cake between nine and ten o'clock. Some prefer to mix oat and bean or peameal, which is wet with water and "fired" or baked; the cooking enables the digestive organs to render the nutritive elements at once available for the exertions of labour. Dr. Dunn is acquainted with several farmers, "who give these cakes whenever the work is severe and the hours long, and all of them agree that their horses are now in much better health and condition, and less frequently attacked by indigestion and colic, than they were when subjected to protracted abstinence, and without an intermediate meal."

2nd. Food may be improper on account of over quantity, excess of nutritiveness, or bad quality. By taking into charge a quantity of food in the stomach at once, the immediate bad consequences may be wind colic, inflammation of the bowels and the surrounding membranes, a founder; and occasionally the swelling of food eaten dry causes a rupture of the stomach or intestines. An animal scantily fed from day to day, sometimes get loose and finds access to a bag or bin of grain, and being hungry, gorges himself almost to suffocation; or a bad servant may feed to excess, and out of all reason. We have frequently wondered why grain or water taken into the stomach of a horse should so immediately affect his feet, producing the inflammation called leaminitis—an inflamed state of the extreme vascular membrane or lamina of the hoof. Let us see if we can get at the philosophy of a common founder. A translation of a positive disease from one part of the system to another, by what doctors call metastasis, is common enough; but a horse may be foundered where there is no positive disorder in the digestive organs, and only an unnatural irritation from the presence of water or food improperly taken into the stomach. The excessive distention by which he has been subject to on the highway or elsewhere, have brought the vascular and tender parts of the hoof into a condition approximating inflammation before either water or food is swallowed. The antecedent hard service of the feet is a material fact in the case; for with out previous driving, and too often hard driving, an acute founder is seldom seen. A sudden shock is inflicted on the nervous system in the stomach, which is sound, and its force shatters first, not the stomach, but the heated, enfeebled, and partially inflamed feet, which are connected with the stomach by abundant nerves. If the feet of a horse be covered with water, this revulsion from the stomach to the lamina of the hoofs seldom occurs to an injurious degree. This brief explanation indicates the propriety of bleeding and letting a recently founded horse stand in a stream of water to cool.—Give him rest and physic. Proper feeding implies the use of neither too much or too little grain, and a due proportion of hay, corn blades, shucks, straw, pea-vines, or other forage, which had better be cut before it is consumed. If this forage is sound, bright, and was harvested at the proper time, less grain will suffice to keep a horse in good condition. Where one has neither hay, nor blades, nor straw, much care should be had lest highly nutritive food, like corn, produce eruptions on the skin, enlargements of the liver, yellow water and other maladies. If no other bulky forage can be had, horses should have browse wi h their grain to aid in distending the stomach and intestines, for bulk is an important element in healthy digestion.

Glanders and Farcy have a common origin, the vitiated state of the blood, and are regarded as only different stages of a progressive disorder. As induced by insufficient or bad food, farcy usually appears first; and may continue for some time before any symptoms of glanders present themselves.—Farcy is characterized as an unhealthy inflammation of the absorbent vessels and glands, which becomes swollen from the disposition of lymph, and soon ulcerate and discharge matter of a morbid and varying character. The poison that gave birth to it is carried by the blood to all parts of the body and under favourable circumstances, rapidly produces itself. Tubercles are formed in all the lymphatic glands and in the substance of the lungs. Ulcerations appear on the mucous membrane of the nostrils, which is attacked on account of its high vascularity. Those parts first undergo disintegration, which require for their healthy existence the largest amount of blood. Between symptoms of farcy and glanders, and the fatal termination of the disease, a very favorable time intervenes, according to the strength or feebleness of the constitution, and virulence of the malady. Whatever impairs the general health, or in any way vitiates the integrity of the system, may be regarded as a cause of glanders. It follows colds, influenza, strangles, diabetes, and perhaps all other debilitating affections incident to bad shelters, over-work, and insufficient food. Like all other diseases that mark the premature loss of vital power, farcy and glanders are easier prevented than cured. When from any cause the gland, mucous, or serous membrane of an animal become inflamed, while its general health and constitution remain unimpaired, the purulent or sequeous secretions that may ensue, as in colds or common distempers, are of a healthy nature and they serve to work off the inflammatory action which results in a speedy and perfect recovery. To maintain the stamina of life in full vigour in all animals of any value, is an object of great importance; for the principle applies to the human as well as to beasts and birds. Proper care and protection, avoiding all extremes and unnecessary exposures, and feeding regularly, that the system may never be surfeited by an excess of nutritive matter in the digestive and assimilative organs, and never weakened by a deficiency of the same, are the cardinal points in animal physiology to be kept constantly in view. All infected animals should be removed from those still undiseased, lest the exhalations from the former, and perhaps direct contact, communicate the distemper to the latter. In systems predisposed to malady, it requires the least possible poison, acting as leaven, to excite a morbid action in organs previously in an apparently sound condition. Under skillful treatment, glandered horses sometimes live and perform labour for a number of years. This, however, only proves what every close observer must have witnessed, that had the same care been taken of health before it was partially sacrificed, that was exhibited afterwards, no injury of the kind would have occurred. When medical men shall come to understand their noble mission, and the people comprehend their true interest, the prevention of maladies, not their cure, will be the grand purpose of what is now the Healing Art. Physicians ought to be better paid for their patient study and wisdom that prevents sickness, with its pains, loss of time, and other incidental expenses and misfortunes, than for the less skill of treating diseases according to the prescribed rules and theories of the profession.—Genesee Farmer.

Clenching Horse Shoe Nails.

As I once passed through this town, one of my horses' shoes became loose, and I went to the shop of a smith named Lovelace, to get it fastened. The shoe was nearly new, and had become loose in consequence of the nails having drawn out of the hoof, and although they had been clinched in the manner universally practiced. The smith remarked that all the other shoes were loose, and would soon drop off, and when I requested him to take them off and replace them; and then did I perceive the different mode, which he adopted for fixing them, which I will here detail. As fast as he drove the nails, he merely bent the points down to the hoof, without, as is customary, twisting them with the pincers; these he then drove home, clinching them against a heavy pair of pinces, which were now not very sharp; and after this had been carefully done, he twisted off each nail as close as possible to the hoof; the pincers being dull, the nail was held hold, so as to get a perfect twist round before it separated. Those twists were then beaten close to the hoof and filed smooth, but not to such a degree as to require off the twist of the nail, "Oh, oh!" said I, "I have learned a lesson in horse shoeing." "Yes," said he, "and a valuable one; if I were ever to lose a single shoe in a long day's hunt, I should have to shut up my shop; my business is to be on the lookout belonging to the hunt, and the loss of a shoe would be the probable ruin of a horse, worth perhaps a thousand pounds; but I am never fearful of such an accident." "Simply because you drive home and clinch the nails before you twist them off," said I. "Yes," replied he, "by which I secure a rivet as well as a clinch." The thing was as clear as the light of day, and I have several times endeavored to make our shoeing smiths understand it, but they cannot see the advantage it would be to themselves, and guess, therefore, it would never do in these parts; but if my brother farmers cannot see how it works with half an eye, and have not a resolution to get it put it in practice, they ought to see the shoes drop from the feet of their horses daily, as I once was accustomed to do. Now, let any one take up an old horse shoe at any of the smith's shops on the roads, and examine the clinch of the nails which have drawn out of the hoof, and he will soon perceive how the thing operates. In short, if the nails are driven home before twisting off, and the twist formed by the twist, be not afterwards removed by the rasp, I should be glad to be told how the shoe is to come off at all, unless by first cutting out the twist.—Farmer's Cabinet.

Hints to Farmers.

Toads are the best protection of cabbage against lice.

Plants, when drooping, are revived by a few grains of camphor.

Peas are considerably improved by grafting on the mountain ash.

Sulphur is valuable in preserving grapes, &c., from insects.

Lard never spoils in warm weather, if it is cooked enough in frying out.

In feeding corn, sixty pounds ground goes as far as one hundred pounds in the kernel.

Corn meal should never be ground very fine, it injures the richness of it.

Turnips of small size have double the nutritious matter that large ones have.

Rats and other vermin are kept away from grain by a sprinkling of garlic when packing the sheaves.

Money expended in drying land, by draining or otherwise, will be returned with ample interest.

To cure scratches on a horse, wash their legs with warm soap suds, and then with beef brine. Two applications will cure the worst case.

Timber, when cut in the spring, and exposed to the weather with the bark on, decays much sooner than if cut in the fall.

Wild onions may be destroyed by cultivating corn, plowing and leaving the corn in the plowed state all winter.

Celery should be carefully taken from the trenches, and packed in boxes with dirt, or left out upon the cellar bottom; let the earth be moist, and not too wet or dry. If left out in branches during the winter and covered, it often is destroyed by the frost, and unfit for use.

TO PRESERVE GOOSEBERRIES.—Heat to boiling point, in a preserving kettle, with sugar,—say from half a pound to three-quarters, for each pound of fruit and serve up hot.

Same Course for Ladies - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT

embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING.

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and unphilosophic methods, mystery and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript exercises, modified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by blending the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most complicated Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business men, and is designed for such persons as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering upon Business.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its branches, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Analytical Chirographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cincinnati, Louisville and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Clarkythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Commercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for any of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

'Tis Long Ago.

'Tis long ago since last we met—
Since last I held thy hand—
And vowed thou wert in form and grace,
The noblest in the land!
For I could see in all thy ways,
Love's hallowed beauty shine;
And thou hadst no sweet hope unshared
By this warm heart of mine,

Now time has written on my brow
The lines that tell of age;
For life is but the book of Time,
Each altered look a page!
There's less of gladness in my heart,
Its giddy thoughts have flown;
Like leaves from some old forest tree,
By tempests bent and blown!

Thy looks have changed—upon thy cheeks
I see the work of years;
The roses now but dimly bloom,
Like blushes dim through tears!
Thy words have not the mellow flow
They had in days of old,
When still as stars we listened to
The dreams love fondly told!

Ah! those were far the happiest days
We spent, when life was young;
When all the glories of the earth
Like crowns about us hung.
Those pleasures have not wholly gone—
E'en now we sometimes feast
On what we should have loved the most,
Yet blindly loved the least.

I Come From Ashbrooke.

Well, this went on, it might be for a month, and folks in the village began to talk and wink, and say, what would come next, now that Ding Dong Will was caught at last. I tried to keep things going as well as I could, but it was of very little use. The business fell off; and I never will forget the sinking feel I got when the riders began to go straight on through the village—past the old Forge—and pull up at a new place, lately opened, beyond the church! After all they only did what was natural, and went where they would be best attended to. By-and-by I saw a change coming on Ding Dong Will—very odd change. With all his foolishness, he had been in great spirits —always laughing—without much meaning to be sure; but, still as I say in great spirits. But now I saw that he was turning quite another way, getting quite a down-hearted moping kind of manner, I couldn't well make out. He would come in of an evening —very rough and sulky—and sit down before the fire looking into the coals, and never open his mouth for hours at a time. Then she would get up and walk up and down, stamping and muttering—nothing very bad, you may be sure. I soon guessed—indeed I heard as much in the village —that she was drawing off a bit—or else trying her play-acting upon him, for she was full of those kind of tricks. She was a very deep one, that Mary Arthur, and it was a pity she ever came into the place. She had a kind of up-and-down way of treating him—one time being all smiles and pleasantness, and next day like a lump of ice,—pretending not to see him when he came in. She made him know his place—rolling her black eyes back and forward in every direction but his; then he would come home raging and swearing. I often wondered what she could be at, or what was at the bottom of it all; and I believe, I would never have come at the truth if it did'nt happen one day I was up against a handsome looking gentleman in a fisherman's hat, just at the door of the Joyful Heart. They told me inside it was young Mr. Temple of Temple Court,—some ten miles off—come down to stop there for the fishing.

There it was! That was the secret of all! He had been there nigh on a fortnight—had come mind you, for two or three days' fishing; but the sport was so good he really must stay a bit longer. Quite natural—and you may say, quite proper! I'm thinking there was better sport going on in the parlour than ever be found in the river. Her head was nigh turned with it all, and I really believe she thought she was going to be Mistress of Temple Court before long—though how a young girl that had come down to London, and had seen a bit of life, should be so short-seeing is more than I can fancy. She took the notion into her head—that was certain—and every soul in the place could see what she was at, except the poor blind creature at the Forge; but even he had his eyes opened at last, for people now began to talk and whisper, and hope all was right at the Joyful Heart. I heard that the minister had gone once to speak with her; but came out very red and angry. No doubt she had bidden him mind his own concerns, and not meddle with her. As to old Joe Fenton's asking after his niece, he might as well have been cut out of a block of wood.

One morning just after breakfast, when he—Ding Dong Will—was sitting at the fire as usual, and not speaking a word, he turns round quite sharp upon me and says:

"What is that young Jack doing all this time? What do you say?"

"I'm sure I can't tell," I said, "unless it be fishing."

"Fishing!" said he, stamping down the coals with his great shoes, "like enough: I've never heard much of the fish in these waters."

"Still he does go out with a rod," I said; "there's nothing else here to amuse him, I suppose. But he goes on Monday."

"Look me in the face," says he, catching me by the wrist, you don't believe that he's come only for that?"

"I can't tell," said I, "unless it is that he likes Mary Arthur's company. She's a nice girl."

"Ah!" says he, "I've been thinking so some time back—the false, hollow jade!—This was at the bottom of all her tricks!—But I tell you what," said he, snatching his hammer, "let him look out, and not come in my way—I give him warning——"

With this he got a bit of iron upon the anvil and beat away at it like a wild man. Then he flung it down into a corner and taking his hat, walked out with great strides. I ran after him and took him by the arm, for I was in a desperate fright lest he should do something wicked. But he put me back quietly.

"See," said he, "I give you a caution, don't meddle with me. Mind——"

I did'nt try and stop him then, for he looked savage. But I followed a little behind. He made for the Joyful Heart; and just as he came under the porch, with his head down, and never heeding where he was going to, he ran full up against somebody, who without much more ado, gave him back his own, and flung him right against the wall.

"Now then young Hercules!" said a gay kind of voice—I knew it for Mr. Temple's, "now then look before you, will you? Keep the passage clear."

I thought the other was going to run at him straight, but he stopped himself quickly

"Who are you speaking to in that way?" said he, with a low kind of growl. "Is it your horse, or your dog, or your groom? Which? Are those manners?"

"Now Bruin," said the young man, "no words. Let me pass,—I'm in a hurry."

"Who was it taught you," says Ding Dong Will, with the same kind of growl, and not moving an inch,—"who taught you to call folks Brums and Herculeses—eh? I declare," says he, colouring up quite red, and trembling all over, "I've a mind to give you a lesson myself—I will by——"

I think he was going to spring at him this time, but I heard steps on the sanded floor and there was Mary Arthur standing before us. A fine creature she looked too. She was in a roaring rage—and her eyes had more of the devilish look in them than I had ever seen before.

"For shame," she said to Will — "for shame! What do you come here for, with your low brawling ways. Who asked you to come? Who wants you? Take him away—home—anywhere out of this!"

It was a piteous sight to look at poor Ding Dong Will, staring stupidly at her, and breathing hard, as if there was a weight on his chest.

"Mr. Temple," says she, turning to him quite changed, and with a gentle smile on her face, "can you forgive me for all this? That such a thing should have happened to you in our house! But it shall never occur again! Never, never!"

I could see he took her very easy, for he was looking out at something, and she had to say it twice over before he heard her.

"Sweet Mary," said he. "don't give yourself a moment's uneasiness about me. Let things go as they like, so that you don't put yourself out."

She looked after him biting her lip hard.

"Why don't you take him away as I told you!" she says at last. "What does he want here?"

I pitied him so much, to see him standing there so beaten down, that I could not help putting in my word.

"Well, I must say, Miss Mary, poor Ding Dong Will did'nt deserve this,—from you of all people."

"Hallo!" says Mr. Temple, coming back; "is this famous Ding Dong Will from over the way?"

"No other, sir," says I.

"Here, Ding Dong Will," says he, putting out his hand, "we mustn't fall out. If I had known it was you, you should have had the passage all to yourself. You're a fine fellow, Will, and I've often admired the way you swung the great hammer."

She was biting her lips still harder than before, but said nothing.

"Stop," said he, "I have a great idea. So this is Ding Dong Will! Whisper a minute, Mary."

He did whisper something to her, and you never saw what a change it made in her. She turned all scarlet, and gave him such a wicked devilish look.

"That is some joke," said she at last.

"Not a bit of it," says he, laughing, "not a bit of it. Ah! You see I know what goes on in the village!"

"I couldn't believe that you mean such a thing?" says she, getting white again.

"Stuff!" said he, very impatiently, "I tell you I am in earnest. Listen, Ding Dong Will. I must be off to London to morrow,—the ladies there are dying to see me, so go I must. Now I know there has been something on between you two,—don't tell me, I know all about it. So now friend Ding Dong, show yourself a man of spirit, and settle it sharp. And I promise you I'll come down myself to give the bride away, and start you both comfortably."

It was well for him that he was looking the other way, and didn't see the infernal look she gave him out of those eyes of hers. I think if there had been a knife convenient she would have plunged it into him at that minute. But she covered it all with a kind of forced laugh, and said she wasn't quite ready to be disposed of so quickly, and then made some excuse to run up stairs. Mr. Temple then yawned again, and went over to the window, and wondered would it be a fine night, as he had to dine out. Neither of us spoke to him, for his was an unfeeling fellow with all his generous offers. So we left him there, and I brought back Ding Dong Will to the Forge again.

About four o'clock that same day (it was almost dark at that hour,) when I was coming home from buying something in the village, I thought I saw him crossing over to the Joyful Heart; and as I passed the porch, I swear I saw the two of them (Mary Arthur and he) talking in the passage—there was no mistake about it—and she talking very eagerly.

Presently she drew him into the parlour, and shut the door. What could bring him there now, after the morning's business?—Well, I thought, he is a poor spirited creature, after all—a true spaniel! He didn't come in I suppose for an hour after that, and then in a wild sort of humour, as if he had been drinking. But what do you think of his denying that he had been near the Joyful Heart at all, or that he had seen her! Denied it flat! And then, when I pressed him on it, and asked if I wasn't to trust my own eyes, he began to show his teeth, and get savage. I was only a youngster then, and so had to put up with his humours; but I determined to leave him on the first convenient excuse. Dear! how that man was changed in a short time!

On this night he took a fancy that he should go to bed early. He was tired he said, and wanted rest after the day's trouble, and his heart was heavy. So I gave in to him at once, and were soon snug in our little cots on each side of the hearth: we used to sleep of nights in a queer kind of place just off the Forge, all vaulted over, with arches crossing one another and meeting, in a kind of carved bunch in the middle. This might have been the clergyman's pantry, or wine vaults, may be, in the old times. Whatever use they had for it, it was a very snug place. I recollect there were all sorts of queer faces with horns and hoofs, all carved out in the bunch; and I often lay awake at nights looking at them, and studying them, and thinking why they were grinning, and winking at me in that way.—I remember one creature that always aimed straight at you with his tail pointed, holding it like a gun.

It might have been about half past nine o'clock, or perhaps half past eight, when we turned in. I know I heard the old church clock chiming pleasantly as we lay down.—I was watching the fire flashing up and down, and taking a look at the funny faces in the bunch overhead, I soon went sound asleep. I woke again, before the fire was out, and looking towards Will's cot, saw that it was empty. A vague feeling of uneasiness mingled with my surprise at that discovery, made me jump out of bed in a moment. I reflected for a little—felt more uneasy than ever—huddled on my clothes in a great hurry—and, without giving myself a moments time for any second thoughts, went out to see what had become of Ding Dong Will.

He was not in the neighborhood of the Forge, so I followed a steep footpath in the wood behind, which led straight to the water's edge. I walked on a little, observing that the moon was out and the stars shining and the sky of a fine frosty blue, until I came to an old tree that I knew well. I had hardly cast a first careless look at it, before I started back all in a fright, for I saw at my feet, stretched out among the leaves, a figure with the fisherman's hat beside it. I knew it to be young Mr. Temple, lying there quite dead, and his face all over blood.

I thought I should have sunk down upon the earth with grief and horror, and ran farther along the pathway as fast as I could to a place where the trees opened a little, full in view of the moonlight. There, I saw Ding Dong Will standing quite still and motionless, with his hammer on his shoulder, and his face covered up in his hand.

He stayed a long time that way, without ever stirring, and then began to come up, very slowly, weeping his eyes up in the ground. I felt as if I were fixed to that one spot, and waited till he met me full face to face. What a guilty start he gave!—I thought he would have dropped.

"O, Will, Will! what have you been doing! Some terrible thing!"

"I—I—I, nothing!" he said staggering about, and hiding his face.

"What have you done with him—Mr. Temple?" I said, still holding him. He was trembling all over like a palsied man, and fell back against a tree with a deep groan. I saw how it was then—it was as good as written in his face. So I left him there —against the tree—and all the rest of that horrible night I wandered up and down along the roads and lanes: anything sooner than be under the same roof with him. At last morning came; and, as soon as the sun rose I stole back, and looking through the window, found that he was gone. I never like to think of that night, though it is so far back.

By noon the next day the whole town was in a fever: people talking and whispering at corners. He had been missed; but they were on his track, for it was well known that he was away among the hills hiding. They dragged the river all day; and, on that night, the body of young Mr. Temple was found; his head beaten in with a hammer.

What end Will Wichelo came to, it would not be hard to guess. But Mary Arthur—she who drove him on to it, as everybody knew—she was let away, and went up to London, where she lived to do mischief enough. The old Forge was shut up, and fell into greater ruin. For many a long day no one ventured near that part of the river walk after dark.

Bull in Clover.

AN INCIDENT IN THE DONEGANA.

We had made a very pleasant run down the St. Lawrence on a bright day and reached Montreal, about 7 p. m. On board were a number of Yankee girls, from New York and Philadelphia, who possessed a fair share of the beauty which distinguishes Americans, between the age of fifteen and eighteen. After tea, the gentlemen went outside to enjoy their cigars, the ladies retired to complete their toilets. These operations being respectively completed, both met again, about 9 p. m, in the drawing-room. A good looking young Philadelphian presided at the piano—the other young gents doing the beaux to the best of their ability—the ladies lolled on the luxurious sofa—silks of the richest hues were spread over crinolines of the most stunning dimensions—necks and arms were displayed of the fairest colors, and finest forms—hair of luxuriant growth, was dressed in the most attractive fashions—jewels, that dazzled the sight, glittered in the splendid light as if the mines of California and Golconda, had poured out their richest treasures to grace the scene. All this heightened by the splendid gas light, and gorgeous furniture of the Donegana, the reader may easily fancy a picture upon which any man might gaze with pleasure. At this moment in walked a fine looking officer of the ——th Regt. He was a splendid looking fellow, and his bright scarlet jacket and deep blue pants, set off his tall graceful figure to the best advantage. On his manly breast hung the medal that showed him to be a Crimean and a hero. We could not look, but with admiration on our good-looking countryman. Bull had come to see the girls. An entire stranger, his red jacket was his introduction.

The moment he entered, he was the centre of attraction for all eyes. The girls gazed with delight—the light knock-kneed Yankee beaux trembled. Introduction was an easy matter in such circumstances, and almost immediately we saw Bull the very centre of the gay assembly, sitting in a chair at one end of the sofa, the girls had surrounded him. The N. Y. & Phil's. were nowhere. Bull stroked his moustache and smiled condescendingly, a dozen pair of bright eyes watched to meet his looks—a dozen pair of coral lips burned to exchange even a word with the warrior—every face melted into the most bewitching smile, if Bull but condescended a look, Anon he took off salt junk fare, and bayonet charges, of storms and trenches, while every bosom heaved with sympathetic emotion. Bull was the hero of the hour, never was triumph so complete. Observing but unobserved we gazed with pleasure on the scene, and our flesh fairly crept with delight when we saw the sleeve of a scarlet jacket on the fair daughters of Republican Institutions.—Sentinel.

AN INTERESTING MASONIC BIBLE.—The Free Masons of the 46th British Regiment, now stationed at Windsor, England, have in their possession the original bible belonging to Lodge No 227 of the Irish construction, once in existence in that corps, upon which George Washington afterwards commanded as chief of the army of the United States—was initiated into the the rites of Free Masonry. This book was taken in battle in 1777, during the American war, by our troops, and honorably restored to the Lodge of the 46th, with a military escort as a guard of honor.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Billious Headache, and all affections of the system which result from an insufficient or immoderate flow of bile, are at once relieved by the operation of Holloway's Pill's. Dyspepsia and liver diseases so inseparable; for the stomach and the liver always sympathise, and as this great medicine acts powerfully upon both these important organs, it performs the work of cure with a precision, rapidity and thoroughness which have no parallel in the records of medical practice. The Pills may be relied upon with the utmost confidence in cases of diarrhea, dysentery, cholera-morbus, spasms of the stomach, cholera infantum, and all other disorders affecting the digestive organs and the bowels.

AN ASSORTMENT.—In New York during June, there were six murders, nine garroting, six burglaries, four under the denomination of perjury and forgery, eighteen violent assaults, nineteen larcenies, eleven of the class of counterfeiting three suicides, and a riot every day for general amusement.

A clergyman who was reading to his congregation a chapter in Genesis, found the last sentence to be: "And the Lord gave unto Adam a wife." Turning over two leaves together he found written and read in an audible voice "and she was pitched without and within." He had unhappily, got into the middle of a description of Noah's Ark.

A facetious gentleman travelling in the county, on arriving at an inn, was met by the hostler, whom he thus addressed: "Boy, excuse that a gentleman from the vehicle, stabulate him, devote him an adequate supply of nutritious aliment, and when Aurora of morn shall again illumine the Oriental horizon, I will reward you with a pecuniary compensation for your amiable hospitality." The boy, not understanding a word, ran into the house saying, 'Master, here's a Dutchman wants to see you.'

CIRCULAR.

To the Presidents, Vice-Presidents, and Directors of the Agricultural Societies in the County of

GENTLEMEN:—

The Annual Exhibitions of our Provincial Agricultural Association have steadily advanced from year to year in magnitude and importance. Under the fostering influence of such Institutions, our country is rising rapidly to greatness, and we entertain sanguine hopes that the approaching Exhibition, to be held at Brantford, on the 29th and 30th of September, the 1st and 2nd of October, will proclaim to the world Canada's onward progress in all the industrial arts.

You may rest assured, Gentlemen, that no effort will be wanting on the part of the Local Committee, and those officially connected with the Association, to render all the arrangements complete. They will do everything in their power to ensure the success of the Exhibition. This will not perhaps be considered an inappropriate moment for expressing our acknowledgments to the Municipalities which have contributed the following sums to the Association, viz:—

The Town of Brantford	£1000	0 0
The County of Brant	500	0 0
" Waterloo	50	0 0
" Oxford	100	0 0
" Wentworth	50	0 0
" Norfolk	50	0 0
The County of Norfolk Agricultural Society	50	0 0

In addition to which, will be given the whole of the funds of the County of Brant Agricultural Society. The Prize List has already been issued, by which it will be observed that a much larger amount of Premiums will be awarded than upon any former occasion; while, with the view of encouraging improvement in every department of industry, the Judges will be instructed, as usual, to give Premiums and Diplomas to animals and articles of merit, which may not have been enumerated. And I am assured by the Local Committee, that every effort will be made to secure, in the vicinity of Brantford, fields of late spring grain and clover, to test the harvesting implements; and from the unusual lateness of the season, it is hoped we may yet be able to accomplish that desirable point. I am further permitted by the Managing Directors of our Railroads, to state that every accommodation will be afforded, at reduced fares, to the public, whereby persons residing as far distant as Toronto, Buffalo, London, and Stratford, may come by the morning trains to the Exhibition, and return home each evening. We trust that this will induce many thousands to be present who would not otherwise be able to attend.

It will be your province, Gentlemen, in your respective localities, to invite all to compete for the honors to be bestowed, and to solicit the local press to give you their valuable aid in showing that such institutions raise amongst us the standard of excellence, and foster the growth of all those arts which minister to man's comfort and convenience, while they are the great sources of a country's wealth. But there is one point, to which it is important you should draw the attention of the enterprising and skilful farmers of your County, viz.:—That although it has not been made by the Board a positive requirement of the successful Exhibitors of grain and other farm products, (except for the Canada Company's Prize,) that they should render a written statement of their respective systems of husbandry by which they have attained to such results, it is yet hoped that many will make an effort to furnish such information, for the Board of Agricultural to arrange and publish in their "Transactions." Such information should embrace the character of soil and subsoil, system of rotation, the time and manner of applying manure, quantity of seed sown, the best and most practical method of raising the different root crops, the most important points to be attended to in cheese-making, &c., &c.; each Exhibitor studying how he can impart knowledge bearing upon his particular department. To bring out all the results of our Provincial Exhibition, and in addition to the most energetic official management, the zealous co-operation of the leading practical men of our country. Upon them it is that we depend for that reliable knowledge, which would be of the utmost value when published. To obtain and circulate such information, is, beyond doubt, one of the greatest functions of this national institution. I would further mention that the Exhibitors of all implements of husbandry, and of manufactures of general utility and importance, should furnish a description of the article, the price, and the place where they can be bought, as the Board intend publishing a descriptive list of the articles exhibited, for the benefit of the manufactures and the public. Those annual gatherings are designed to embrace every branch of industry; and while we hope to see Agriculture occupying there her prominent position, with her magnificent stock and rich products, it is not less important that our enterprising manufacturers and mechanics should exhibit all the results of their ingenuity and skill.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Your most obedient servant,
GEORGE ALEXANDER,
President Provincial Agricultural Ass.

Woodstock, July, 1857.

THE exertions made to extend a knowledge of the advantages which this Province affords to emigrants have produced their legitimate results. Already the immigration has been considerably in excess of that of last year. The valuable information issued by the Bureau of Agriculture, has obtained a much wider circulation in England than it otherwise could, through the exertions of Sir Ousack Roney, the indefatigable Secretary of the Grand Trunk Railway Company. The result of these united exertions may be seen in the following comparative return up to the 7th Aug.:

Whence.	1856	1857.	Increase.
England -	6746	10,206	3460
Ireland -	1243	1,692	449
Scotland -	1656	2,405	749

Nor'y & Sw'n	2611	6,034	3423
Lower Ports	124	16
	16483	24938	8661

The quality of immigrants is, we believe, considerably superior to what has been witnessed in previous years. They have doubtless brought more money into the country, according to their numbers, than usual.

Besides the immigrants who have arrived, official notice has been received of the following, on their way:—

S. A. James	Liverpool	June 26th	398
Agamemnon	do	July 3rd	374
John Owens	London	June 28th	473
Inkerman	Clyde	July 3rd	234

MR. BUCHANAN, the emigrant agent, reports that all the latest arrivals have found instant employment; and that numbers more are still asked for. This is the most cheering feature in the immigration of the present year; inasmuch as it proves that the emigrants who brought their labor to this market, were not disappointed in the expectation of being able, speedily, to dispose of it to advantage. If the demand for hands continues active after the exhaustion of the supply furnished by immigration, it is proof that there is no pressure on the labor market, and that a scarcity and not an excess of labor prevails.—Leader.

The Princess Royal's Wedding Dress.

The Princess Royal of England is now the "observed of all observers." The time rolls on which is to take her to her new home and her new country. While it is passing, she is looked upon with the augmented interest is so natural to feel in those we are about to lose.

The wedding robe in which she is first to be saluted in the character of wife, is progressing to be ready for the day on which is to be enacted that most heart-stirring and engrossing event.

The Princess Royal is to be married in a dress of Honiton lace, as was her august mother before her. Those who know the tedious nature of the manufacture, will not be surprised to hear that its cost amounted to one hundred and fifty pounds. We are not able to say what is to be the price of the lace now in preparation, but are able to speak of its artistic design, which has been approved as well for taste as for patriotism. Its pattern is composed of national emblems—the rose, the thistle, and shamrock—beautifully interspersed and producing effects equally light, graceful and elegant. When it is remembered that every bud and flower, spray and sprig, are each and all formed by the young lace maker on the pillow resting on her knee, the amount of female labour will appear stupendous. Not the most tiny leaf or the swelling of a single meandering stem, but has required much of human time, which is, indeed, nothing less than human life.

At the same time that this exquisite and elaborate work is progressing, another robe is engaging the time and thoughts of the Honiton lace makers. The design for this second piece of exquisite gossamar might also lead to the expectation that it was intended to enwrap the youthful form of a princess's bridesmaid. It is adorned with lilies of the valley, as emblematic in their purity as they are graceful, the delicate hanging bells nestling under the broad leaves, nature herself being the artist, copied with so much skill by the delicate threads, guided by the dexterous fingers.

The wedding handkerchief is also in progress. It is composed of a splendid border of most elaborate workmanship, while in the centre the Royal Arms of England are copied by the same progress, being a perfect marvel in the lace making a t.

ANOTHER WITNESS.—The Simcoe Standard says, an Innkeeper named Graham, near, Jarvis, has some reason to know Townsend. On the day that Mr Neelles met his death, Townsend, with several of his comrades went into Graham's tavern, after having committed sundry depredations along the Cayuga road, and after getting dinner and refreshments, paid for the same by robbing the landlord, for while some of the gang held the landlord others pillaged the till, and so went away. Now, Graham has been to see the prisoner, and says that he has no doubts about this being the party who owed by the means of Townsend, and who on the above occasion aided in robbing him.

We learn by late intelligence from Washington, that a treaty arrangement is under consideration between Lord Napier and Gen. Cass for the final settlement of the Central American controversy with Great Britain, growing out of British occupation of the Bay Islands. The contemplated plan is similar in its general results to that of the treaty made by Mr. Dallas, and which failed of ratification, except that the new arrangement will avoid the rock on which the former split, by letting England first conclude her treaty with Honduras, so as not to commit the United States to her stipulation against the introduction of Slavery in the Bay Islands.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, AUGUST, 20, 1857.

IN advocating the loan of monies for Municipal purposes, or in fact for any purpose where the community at large is affected, and where the action of the municipal bodies of the county will be required to use the powers invested in them, we will have many disadvantages to labour under; we will have the old prejudice against taxation to contend against, as well as local feelings to oppose us. That these two will be brought to bear against the proposed by-law, to borrow £30,000 for the improvement of County Roads, in their fullest extent, when the vote will be taken thereon, we have not the least doubt.

A loan of £30,000 appears a large sum for the County of Essex to effect, and it would be, if the purpose for which it is to be raised, were not a good one; but when we take into consideration the many advantages that will result from the expenditure of so large a sum of money upon the county roads, we naturally, as advocates for improvement, look with the greatest hope to the day when Essex shall be in a position to vie with any other county in the Province in regard to her roads, and will not be, as at present, far behind many younger and less prosperous ones, in that respect.—Roads are the main source through which we must look for prosperity in any county, and more especially in this; for without them, the farming community (for they will be chiefly benefited by good roads) can never prosper; and if the farming interests are not attended to and encouraged, every other portion of the community must suffer in a greater or less degree; and as the County of Essex depends altogether upon that branch of industry for her support, it is our duty to exert every energy to improve it. Lands that are now quite useless and unproductive, will be brought into market and become settled upon, and will contribute their share towards the enrichment of the community. It is, we conceive, a far-fetched argument to use against it, to contend that by opening out these roads, non-residents and land speculators will be benefited, and will receive a larger price for their lands, than they could at present, with no roads at all. We would simply ask, would not these very lands, by being improved and enhanced in value, become a source of revenue to the county, in the increased rate at which they would be assessed? Lands that are now assessed at four dollars an acre, along the line of the proposed new roads, would, when opened, be assessed from ten to twelve dollars an acre; they would then certainly contribute their pro portion of taxes as well as other lands that are already settled upon. Are we to stop all improvements in the county, for fear of benefiting a few non-residents? Why, the idea is simply absurd. We contend again, that so soon as these new lines of road are opened, the land in the immediate neighborhood will be purchased by actual settlers, and they would be far cheaper at the advanced prices, which they would then command, to the settler, than they are at the present prices without the road; for no one in his right senses would bury himself in such a wilderness, from whence there are no means of exit, except by an Indian trail.

It has been said that the old settlers will derive no benefit from the opening up of new roads, and that they will only be saddling themselves with a heavy tax, from which they will derive no direct benefit; and therefore they should oppose the borrowing of money for that purpose. This argument is so narrow and contracted, that it reminds us forcibly of the fable of "The Dog in the manger," and is far more suited to the days of old, than this progressive and enlightened age. If we wish to keep pace with the rest of the country in improvements and advancement, we must not only see that we have good roads ourselves, but that our neighbors have also. This is the proper feeling that should influence the electors when they cast their votes for or against the proposed loan. We contend that by the improvement of our section of the county, by rendering what is at present a dead weight upon our resources, a source of revenue and profit, the whole county cannot help being benefited in a greater or less degree; we do not wish, however, to be understood to say, that persons living at a distance will derive any immediate direct benefit; it is only from the general improvement of the whole county, that they will reap any advantage. If the county is prosperous, and healthy improvements are being gone on with, all classes in the community will be better off than if they were neglected. This is a fact that needs no further argument in its favor; it is known to all, and has been felt by all.

In making the proposed improvements, we hardly think that local selfishness, can have any weight with the elector, for although the road before every man's door cannot be improved out of this loan, yet it will be seen by glancing at the map, that every Township in the County will receive its proportion of the expenditure, and will consequently be benifited thereby, it will also open out a highway through the centre of the County, from the river Detroit to the borders of the County of Kent, and runs through some of the very best land in the County. If the proposed improvements were local, and intended to affect particular Towships only, then there might be some reason for opposing the expenditure, but this is not the case.

We next come to the profit that certain officials will make out of the loan and its expenditure. If that is a sufficient objection to the loan, why should it not be an objection to all taxation? This would of course be upon the same footing as other taxes, and if it will cost too much in this instance, we had better do away with taxation altogether, on account of the cost of collection. There will of necessity be some reduction upon the £30,000, for if it is supposed that people will devote their time and abilities, even for the good of the County, it is more than we have yet learned, and it cannot be expected; but it is only sheer nonsense, to assert that the loss will be so enormous, and that the real sum when collected will be only £20,000 for expenditure. This is an absurdity too glaring to notice, and will only be used by those who from ignorance, know no better, or from what is far worse, a desire to pervert the truth.

We hope that before the electors cast their votes against the proposed By-Law, they will weigh well in their minds the subject before doing so, and not let themselves be carried away by selfish motives, but take a broad and liberal view of the matter. Let them consider, whether good roads are not an ornament and a credit, as well as an advantage to every County. We feel confident that a majority of votes will be cast in favour of this public improvement.

The London Herald, we regret to find has closed its career, after an existence of just two years. The Herald was conducted upon sound conservative principles, and manfully and steadfastly has that journal stood forth to advocate the cause for which it had been established; but for all this, the conservative members of the community stood by regardless of what the chances were against a purely party paper, becoming self sustaining. And instead of exerting themselves to make it such, by using what influence they might possess in its favour, were more ready to grumble, than willing to render assistance.

Thus it is in many instances with the conservative party, they are altogether too lax in their support of their own party papers and suppose, as a matter of course, that if a journal is only once started, it must of necessity be a paying investment, whereas in truth there is hardly a journal in the Province, with two or three exceptions, that pay six per cent upon the capital invested. Conservatives think upon this, and let you act upon it, for if you expect party papers, they must be supported.

Let them take example from the Radicals, who work night and day for their journals, and leave no stone unturned, where by so doing they may assist them; this is quite right, and they deserve credit for their energy, and we only regret, that among our own party, this feeling of indifference exists to the extent that it does. It is for this reason that so many more radical journals, than conservative, are published in this Province, and it always will be so until a stronger feeling is evinced towards the Press than at present exists.

The Herald says in its valedictory and is what might be said by many other journals in the same cause:—

"That the tight times have something to do with the suspension of the Herald, it would be idle to deny; but the peculiar tastes of some eminent members of the party for whose benefit the paper was started have been equally the cause of its receiving the cold shoulder, in such a manner as to convince its proprietors that the would-be Conservative leaders of London would rather be without the Herald. They will now have their wish; and, with the cessation of the efforts of an Independent paper, perhaps their prospects may brighten. If they do not, the parties cannot blame us."

We were much pleased at seeing our old friend, Major Lachlan, looking so well and hearty the other day, when he was on a visit to his numerous friends in this part of the country, after an absence of many years.

The gallant Major is now a resident of Cincinnati, where he has a married daughter. Few men were ever more active in public life, or as a private gentleman, in this his then adopted land, than Major Lachlan was. He left the army (the 17th foot,) and settled in Colchester, upon a very valuable property, about twenty years ago. He became a magistrate and chairman of the Quarter Sessions, then Sheriff of the County, and a Colonel of Militia, and he was a principal supporter of agricultural and all other useful institutions in the neighbourhood.—The Major's literary attainments and classical knowledge all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance are familiar with. He moreover, did good service in the Rebellion of 1838, and was particularly active at the taking of the schooner "Ann" at Amherstburg. He sold his estate at Colchester, disliking the close proximity of so many colored people, and removed to Montreal several years ago, where he expected, and was encouraged to expect, some government appointment, for which his abilities so eminently qualify him. But no avail, 'chiseling' and chicanery, and broken promises, marred his honest views, and he had the misfortune like many many others, to be a true, loyal, and good subject to the Queen—a certain barrier to promotion in the present day—and a sure extinguisher of hope in the breast of every good and upright man.

☞ We beg to direct attention to the advertisement in another column, of valuable Real Estate for sale, upon the McKee farm. This property has been laid out into ten acre lots, just the proper size for building a residence upon, and is conveniently and pleasantly situated just far enough from town. These Lots will be sold upon reasonable terms. All those who feel inclined to become permanent residents in this neighborhood should not let this present opportunity pass without availing themselves of so good a chance.

☞ Charles Pinney Esq., Civil Engineer, was kind enough to present us with a handsome Map of Windsor, got up by himself in the very best style, and reflects great credit upon him as a draughtsman, and if we may judge is very correct. We would advise all who wish a firstrate Map of Windsor, to secure one at once; as the supply is limited.

Ireland.

PRINCE NAPOLEON IN IRELAND.—Shortly before eleven o'clock on Saturday morning, Prince Napoleon disembarked from La Reine Hortense in Kingstown. His Imperial Highness, accompanied by Mr. Burgraff, consul of France, was rowed ashore in the State barge. A great crowd of persons had assembled on the occasion, and the Prince was loudly cheered as he took his seat in the carriage. He acknowledged the compliment paid him by frequently raising his hat. In the course of his visit to Killiki Kilke by Hill, Bray, the Pargle, Powers court demesne and Waterfall, and Enniskerry where he partook of lunch at the hotel, after which he returned to Kingston at a quarter to seven o'clock. During the Prince's absence La Reine Hortense was thrown open to crowds of ladies and gentlemen, who were received with great politeness by the officers and crew. His Imperial Highness had during his stay in the Irish metropolis, found time to visit the establishments of several of the leading manufactures, and has given an extensive order for Irish manufactures. Among other things he has ordered an Irish jaunting car.

Death of Charles Bonaparte.

Prince Charles Bonaparte, Prince of Canino, eldest son of Prince Lucien, brother of the first Napoleon, died on Thursday, the 30th of July, at his residence in the rue de Lille, in Paris, at the age of 54, having been born in 1803. He had married the Princess Zenaide, only daughter of Joseph Bonaparte, King of Spain. The deceased Prince has been a widower since 1854. He leaves eight children, of whom the eldest, Prince Napoleon Lucien Charles, is a captain in the army, and the second, Prince Lucien Louis Joseph, has embraced the clerical profession. He is one of the Pope's chamberlains, and is expected to be soon promoted to the purple. The deceased Prince Charles was attended by his children on his death-bed, and received the sacraments of the church from the hands of the cure of his parish. The news of his death, caused by dropsy of the chest, from which he has long suffered, was at once sent by telegraph to the Emperor at the Camp of Chalons sur-Marne. M. Fould Minister of the Imperial Household, was present at the last moments of the Prince, and in the absence of the Emperor, caused seals to be placed on all his papers and personal effects. The Prince of Canino was a distinguished savant. He was corresponding member of most of the learned academies of Europe and America, and his works on natural history, and particularly ornithology, are spoken of as some of the most valuable contributions to science.

Lieutenant General Sir Charles Napier, the most efficient soldier ever in the East Indian service, has left on record the opinion that "Mutiny is the greatest danger threatening India—a danger that may come unexpectedly and with a power to shake the very foundations of our Eastern Empire."

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature,

The Laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of share - $200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years 96.

Total - $296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.
And for three years 6.65.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalments on each share.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT,

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influences.

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. As ORY ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or ITCH) &c., to the only remedy now in use, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints, and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and then the cure which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & Scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

How to treat Caterpillars.

The following is from the American Journal, called the Plough, Loom and Anvil, and as caterpillars have committed extensive depredations upon Canadian orchards, it may be worth while to copy the article for the benefit of our readers:—

"You may keep off the caterpillar, if you will; and it will cost you nothing to do it—nothing but what you will be paid for it in dollars and cents as you go along, leaving the pleasure of seeing a clean orchard, and the reputation of being a tidy farmer, to be set down as so much clear profit; and certainly it is not small, if self respect and the esteem of the neighborhood are worth having. You should keep a clean orchard for your own sake, and for the sake of your neighbors. It will be more for them to keep clear of pests when your orchard is a hot bed for them.

Perhaps you say, your neighbors propogate the pests, and it is in vain for you to attempt to keep your orchard much cleaner than theirs. There is something in that. You cannot drive them. Mankind are a little like the Irishman's pig—"won't be driven." But they are like that nobler animal, the horse, in another respect—"love to be led by the nose;" especially if they like the man that leads them. Suppose now, that you clean your own orchard, and then say to your neighbors, "Come on, let's have a clean neighborhood of orchards." 'Come,' is a softer word than 'go.' More are persuaded by it.

Yes, clear off the caterpillars. The time is from now as long as you live, for the Giver of all good never meant that there should be a rose without a thorn; or good fair delicious fruit, without care and labour. If he had made the earth prolific of all good things, with no enemies in the shape of caterpillars, canker worms, weevils, frost, tempests, drought, something to keep man awake, to burnish up his powers, to scrape off the rust, the human race would have been extinct long ago. In baffling, therefore, with the farmer's enemies, think that you are fulfilling one of Heaven's merciful appointments; and do the work cheerfully, hopefully. You'll conquer, if you will to conquer.

We have said the time is when you live. Rather discouraging. Not very. If you do the work well from January to August this year, there will be little to do next year, and less year after next, and so on. But how? is the question. Your agricultural papers will tell you a score of ways, all very good perhaps. The agricultural papers are about as good as they can be, till the readers will let us give them better. Farmers read it, that they do not let us your the light of science on them; give them hard words when necessary, pages which it would take them a winter evening to conquer, but which they could conquer nevertheless, and become scholar men, but for the ridiculous idea that a farmer cannot be a scholar. Either way would become easy, when once entered just as the caterpillars are more easily kept down the second year than the first, and still more easily the third. But as the farmers will not come to us, we will go to them—Science is bound to bless the farmer. That is its benignant mission.

Science should be clothed in her own beautiful garb, and the farmer should learn to look upon her with the same pleasure as upon his own neatly clad wife and daughter. But to our special receipe for expelling caterpillars, we will dress her in a less costly garb—will use no word that would be new to a child; not because this is the best way, but because the farmers mistakenly, as we think, will have it so. Aye! we humor them at their own bidding, but to their own hurt. They are a little like spoilt children in this respect. The naughty schoolboy says, "I will do no good to learn English grammar; what's the use of algebra for me? I care nothing about geography; I'm to be nothing but a farmer, or a mechanic.' So, too, many farmers refuse to learn a few scientific terms, which would be a key to a flood of light on their business, and do more than a little to raise their calling and themselves to a high pinnacle of glory in the eyes of mankind. But let that go.

There are two batches of caterpillars that infest apple and other trees, which have a bitterish and tonic bark and leaf. The apple and the choke cherry, and the common black, or rum cherry, seem to be their favorites. These, if the farmer would keep his orchard clear of these pests, he must either cut down the wild cherries and cast them into the fire, or must consent to watch them with the same same vigilance as his apple trees. If cherry trees are tall, it is more difficult even to keep them clean.

A Valuable Recipe.—Take one pound of sal soda and a half a pound of unslacked lime, put them in a gallon of water over the fire, and boil about twenty minutes; let it stand till cool, then drain off and put it in a strong jug or jar. Soak your dirty clothes over night, or until they are wet through, then wring them out and rub on plenty of soap, and in one boiler of clothes, well covered with water, add one tablespoonful of the washing fluid. Boil half an hour briskly, then wash them thoroughly through one suds, and rinse them well through two waters, and your clothes will look better than the old way of washing twice before boiling. This is an invaluable recipe and we want every poor woman to try it.

Summer Management of Sheep.—In the spring, do not turn your sheep into the pasture until it is well up, or until it is ankle high, so as to have something to shade the ground; keep your sheep close, and feed them on hay and grain of some kind—they will eat it well if kept from grass. When put upon pasture, have three or more fields and change them often, so that their pasture may be sweet. I have known a neighbor lose three hundred sheep out of six hundred in one summer. He divided them into three parts, and put them into three large fields, with no shade except what the fence on south side of each field made. The sheep lay along the fence, and when the nose fly came, the sheep were to be seen running with their noses to the ground, fighting the fly, and eating only just enough to keep life in them. The sheep did not go more than eight or ten rods from the fence, and this was eaten close to the ground when there was plenty of pasture on the north side of the field: as a consequence the sheep poisoned themselves in their own filth. The fly laid its egg in the nostrils of the sheep, and they soon died in great numbers of "worm in the head."

Now, you would ask, how he should cave his sheep? He should have put them all into one field, and forced them to go farther from the fence; and about two or three days after the first shower, he should have changed them to another field When ever you see your sheep run with their noses down to the ground, drive them to your furthest pasture; the fly will stay about where the sheep have lain. Keep changing them from field to field, and you will not be troubled with "worm in the head."
—Genessee Farmer.

Cure for Inflammatory Rheumatism.—A correspondent of one of our agricultural exchanges, who has suffered from this terrible affliction, gives the following as a certain cure. It looks to be worth trying:

First rid the system of costiveness. This plague is frequently the origin, and almost always an attendant upon inflammatory rheumatism. It may easily be cured. A thorough vegetable cathartic at the outset, and a pill or two each night following on retiring to rest, will open the bowels; and if the person is kept warm and clean, the disease generally wears off soon. Ayer's, Moffatt's, or Dr. S. S. Fitch's Cathartic Pills—the last best—are good for such a cure.

Should the rheumatism seem disposed to hang on somewhat after the costiveness is removed, it may be summarily ejected in the following manner: Set the patient in a low chair, and cover him—chair and all—closely, with a good thick bed quilt, leaving a breathing place for the mouth and nostrils. Under the chair place a spider or iron basin filled with rum, which set on fire. If it make too great a heat for the patient to bear, check it by sliding a board over it. Keep it a-going till the patient is thoroughly heated and as wet as a drown'd rat. The bed by the side of which this bath is taken, should meantime be thoroughly warmed, and the patient removed to it from the chair, well covered up and tucked in, and allowed to sweiter it out. Inflamatory rheumatism will take its departure, and if the proper precautions are afterwards observed, the places which now know it will know it no more forever.

Keep the body warm always by comfortable clothing—flannel next the skin—keep clean by bathing—avoid chills and damps, and wet or cold feet. Above all, keep off the great enemy—costiveness. Should it threaten, take one, two, or three pills at night on retiring—just enough to loosen, not to physic. Eat plenty of good wholesome food—not knick-knacks, and you will come out all right. I had a most horrible experience with inflammatory rheumatism, many times should have died of sheer agony, had not my pains been allayed with morphine. After suffering most awfully, losing much valuable time, and teen dosed and drugged, I was finally cured by the above simple and inexpensive method; and for seven years havn't had a touch of the disorder, and don't fear I ever shall.

P.S. The spirit bath should never be used till some days after all costiveness is removed.

Private Fortunes of Great Personages.—Cæsus possessed in landed property, a fortune equal to £1,700,000, besides a large amount of money, slaves and furniture, which amounted to an equal sum. He used to say that a citizen who had not a sufficient fortune to raise an army, or legion, did not deserve the title of a rich man. Publius Scipioner Seneca had a fortune of £3,500-000. Tiberius at his death, left £23, 625,-000, which Caligula spent in less than twelve months. Vespasian, on ascending the throne, estimated all the expenses of the state at £35,000,000. The debts of Milo amounted to £500,000. Cæsar before he had brought the friendship of Curio for £500 and that of Lucius Paulus for £300,-000. At the time of the assassination of Julius Cæsar, Antony was in debt to the amount of £3,000,000; he owed this sum on the Ides of March, and it was paid by the Kalends of April; he squandered £147,-000,000. Appius squandered in debauchery £300,000, and finding on the examination of the state of affairs, that he only had £800,000, poisoned himself because he considered that sum insufficient for his maintenance. Julius Cæsar gave Servillia the mother of Brutus, a pearl of the value of £40,000, Cleopatra, at an entertainment, gave to Antony, dissolved in vinegar, a pearl worth £80,000, and he swallowed it. Cicilius, the son of Esopus, the comedian, swallowed one worth £8,000. Caligula spent for one supper £80,000 and Heliogabalus £20,000. The usual cost of a repast for Lucullus was £20,000; the fish from his fish ponds were sold for £35,000

A Distinction.—Napoleon was one day searching for a book in the library of Malmaison, and he had discovered it on a shelf somewhat above his reach. Marshall Moncey, who was present, one of the tallest men in the army, stepped forward, saying: "Permit me, sire; I am higher than your majesty." "You are longer, marshal," said the emperor, with a frown.

GREEN'S

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighboring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

Farmers

Call at the Great Western Boot store, where you will find every article in the Boot and Shoe trade to suit you.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the River Detroit and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Milk House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of the private family.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING.

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE,

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the varieties of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, and every Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By Skipping from the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West. Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many others are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for most of his graduates.

Hoops.

POLITELY DEDICATED TO THE "LORDS OF CREATION."

Yes, hoop hurrah! ye noble lords,
We'll join you in the shout,
And trust that o're the echo dies,
You'll learn what you're about.
Vive les hoops! Oh, let it ring,
On hill-top and in vale.
For we would spread their glory far—
These skeletons of whale.

Oh, blame us not, because we wear
The thing that you detest,
For remember 'tis a way we have,
To wear what we like best,
And if you cannot bear to see
Our flounces have their day.
Just turn your modest heads aside,
And look another way.

What if it is a foreign mode?
Your'e not behind us far,
You show it in your short-toed boots,
And all the clothes you wear.
And we've as much a right to hoops,
As any of you men
Have a right to curl your pet goatees—
A la Napolienne!

Ye married lords, with woeful phiz,
Who cast your eyes askant,
When teazing wife to take them off,
She sharply says, "I shan't."
Go, in penitence and tears,
Bow down these heads of thine,
And mourn that all your sins can't hide
'Neath woman's crinoline.

Ye single lords, "'tis distance lends
Enchantment to the view,"
And we would keep you all at bay,
To keep the saying true.
For we have found, too oft, alas,
Despite your lordly pride
There's many a snaky tongue behind
The grass that grows outside.

And to these great buggy-boos,
The more that you shall dread 'em
And the louder you shall preach 'em down,
The wider we shall spread 'em
If that won't do, then hearken this—
With flounces far unfurled,
We'll start you all to Jordan,
And monopolize the world!

The Celebrated Irish Beauties.

THE MISSES GUNNING.

During the early part of the reign of King George the III, there lived in an obscure village in Ireland. a family in the middle walks of life, named Gunning They were not richly endowed with this world's goods, but possessed sufficient for all the comforts, if not the luxuries of life.

Matthew Gunning was a farmer by profession, and had he possessed that spirit of frugality which seems almost unknown to the Irish nation, he might have been a wealthy man. As it was, he generally followed the principle of "letting to-morrow take care of itself."

His wife had been the favourite "village belle," and still retained traces of that extraordinary beauty which had excited the admiration of all who beheld her—two girls are the sole fruit of their union, who promised even in infancy, to equal if not surpass their mother, in personal charms; and that mother's whole soul was bound up in them.

Being near of an age, the children were constantly together; and the sprightly Lizzie and the fairy Louisa were petted and spoiled, by both young and old, in the village of E——. One summer afternoon, fatigued with their sports, the infant sisters threw themselves upon the grass, beneath a willow which over-shaded their parent cottage—and with the round cheek of Louisa pillowed upon the sunny tresses of Lizzie, and their dimpled limbs and snowy robes thrown into strong relief by the rich, wavy sward, they presented a picture which Lawrence would have longed to transfer to canvas.

The mother, as she sat with her spinning wheel in the deep embrasure of the window, watched them as they slept, and unconsciously her thoughts wandered into the future; and with a mother's anxiety, speculated upon their future career. As she mused, she fell into a gentle slumber, and the visions of her musings assumed, as it were, a tangible shape, "a local habitation and a name," and like phantasmagoria, passed before her.

She fancies herself in London—that great city of which she had heard so much, and she seemed an invisible character of a scene that far surpassed her proudest hopes; and she saw her lovely daughters appearing in the perfect beauty of womanhood, as actors on the busy arena of the aristocratic world. Peers and peeresses, prelates and statesmen, even royalty itself, seemed to do homage to their unrivalled charms.

Throngs of admirers worshipped at the shrine of their beauty, and one distinguished from the rest by his haughty bearing and the glittering star upon his breast, knelt at the feet of her youngest born, her bright-haired Lizzie; and she thought that upon that regal brow an airy coronet, formed of the ducal strawberry leaves, reared as if it had found a resting place. Delighted she awoke, and with the glittering vision still filling her imagination, she started to find herself in her own humble cottage, and her children still sleeping beneath the tree.

She mentioned her dream to none, but the memory of it lingered for years, and, with a mother's partiality—she whispered 'why should not such a thing be?"

Time sped on, and our heroines increased in beauty and years. They received the best education the place could afford, and their worthy curate, seeing that their minds soared far above mediocracy, as well as their persons, formed their ductile powers to such a degree that they were fit to grace any circle.

When Louisa was about seventeen their mother died, and on her death-bed exacted a solemn promise from her husband that, before the expiration of six months, he should take them to London. Then, for the first time, if they had not attracted notice, he might return with them to his native home.

Had it been anywhere but at the dying bed of his wife, Matthew Gunning might have smiled at the ascendency which the imagination had been allowed to gain over the judgment; but although he desired no higher destiny for his children than to see them the wives of respectable men in their own sphere of life, still he could not refuse her last request, and made the required promise. Could he have foreseen the future?

As soon as the daughters could become reconciled to the thought of leaving the grave of their beloved mother, and the many associations of childhood, for the city, where they would be "unknowing and unknown," they started for the great metropolis. They arrived there in June—that month whose delight's the tyrant fashion has compelled the aristocracy of Britain's Isle to forego, and oblige them to remain in the city, when they would fain be reposing beneath the shade of those giant trees that wave proudly over the ancestral homes of England's haughty nobility.

Matthew Gunning, willing to fulfill his wife's wishes as much as possible, took lodgings in a fashionable hotel, and ere many weeks had elapsed London was in an uproar. Who were those angels that had suddenly appeared as if direct from paradise? The furore, as Horace Walpole calls it, was unparalleled. The young nobles whose tastes were sated with usual London "Belles," begged their stately mammas to leave their cards upon our heroines, if they wished them ever to assist in their monthly balls; and if the aristocratic parents refused upon the plea of their being "nobodies," the youthful peers declared that they would repair to the club whenever their mothers or sisters particularly desired their escort.

And so it went, day after day, and week after week, the gate of the hotel was thronged with England's proudest and noblest, the eyes of the Irish daises were almost dazzled by the array of brilliant names, whose cards were hourly sent to them, and even Matthew Gunning began to think that his wife was not so foolish in her aspirings, as he once deemed her. From the duchess to the baronet's lady, from the peeress who boasted of descent, from the Plantagenet to the parvenu of yesterday, all alike strove to do them honor, and more than once has the proud duchess, in whose veins flowed the blood of kings, found their rooms deserted on the night of her most magnificent fete—because why? she had neglected to invite the Gunnings, and to her mortification she would hear that the rooms of the rich banker's wife were crowded the same evening by the elite of the nobility, and the magnet of attraction was the fair sisters.

The aristocracy with a few exceptions, gave way before the overwhelming tide of excitement that was rushing on like a mighty torrent, and the usual invincible artistocratic walls of Almack's fell without a blow before the irresistible power of beauty. And now had their mother been alive, she might indeed have thought her fairy dream fully realized.

No person who was not a spectator can hardly conceive for the rage of the fair sisters that was evinced by the fashionable world. Horace Wa pole, in his letters speaks of it as the most extraordinary thing that has happened for centuries. Selwin, the famous wit, was a devoted friend of the eldest sister, and evinced it for many years.

And now came the crowning scene in the woman's dream! The Duke of Hamilton, one of the most courted and admired of the unmarried nobles, at whose approach the managing mammas fanned themselves violently, so as to appear unconcerned, and the unconscious daughters looked down and smelled at their boquets, whose movements were watched by many a glittering eye and anxious heart. He, the young and haughty Duke of Hamilton and Brandon was vanquished by the charms of young Elizabeth, and before the end of the season the Ducal Coronet was in reality placed upon those shining tresses. In the course of a fortnight from her sister's marriage, Louisa was married to the young Marquis of Coventry.

The rest of their career is known to all the world. Who has not heard of the shoemaker who made upwards of two guineas by exhibiting a slipper that he was making for lady Coventry, at a penny a head? And also read with amazement of a thousand persons who sat up all night around the doors of a hotel to see the Duchess of Hamilton enter her carriage at an early hour in the morning? Who would ever have dreamed that the daughter of an humble Irish farmer should thus become an integral part of that haughty aristocracy of England?—But so it was; and the bright-haired Lizzie who reclined beneath the willow, hushed to sleep by the music of her mother's spinning wheel, lived to become the wife of two Dukes, and the mother of four! For after the death of her first husband, she married the Duke of Argyle.

There is scarcely an instance on record, which more clearly proves that "truth is oft times stranger than fiction," than the history of the motherless daughters of Matthew Gunning.

A Visit to Alexander Von Humboldt.

The well known novelist, Max Ring, who visited, some time ago, the veteran of science, Alexander Von Humboldt, thus describes the personal appearance of the venerable old gentleman.

Humboldt's figure is not large but is rather stout—his feet and hands are small, and of beatiful form. His silver white hair surrounds the venerable head; he wears on the high large forehead the mark of genius. His eyes are blue, and notwithstanding his advanced age, are full of expression and life. His fine formed lips reveal a particular smile, half sarcastic, half benevolent, full of spiritual supremacy. While speaking, he sits bent forward, his eyes cast to the ground; from time to time he lifts his head, friendly smiling, thus animating the listener. Conversing with him, you forget entirely that the celebrated man has passed already his eighty seventh year, so juvenile, fresh and exciting are his words, flowing in wonderful change, mingling humor with instruction. He is, in the truest sense and fullest meaning of the word, the best narrator, the clearest orator the world knows. An immense amount of knowledge is always at his control, and notwithstanding his great age, you cannot perceive the least failure in his memory.—He probably has no equal. Facts, names and figures never escape his memory, and he remembers often with the same tenacity the smallest affairs as the greatest and most valuable facts.

The principal feature of his whole being is a rare humanity for others, which almost reaches self-forgetfulness. It is only known to his most intimate friends and Humboldt spends the greatest part of his income for charity, and in aiding in the support of young and aspiring students. His private property is not very considerable, but he receives from the King of Prussia a large salary for his position at the court, and besides this a corresponding sum is paid him by Cotte the publisher of his works. By the simpleness of his wants this income would not only be sufficient, but would allow him to lay up something; but Humboldt thinks to make a better use of it by changing the fate of some unfortunate young man.

The influence which he has with the King he uses for the promotion of science. There is no person of talent, no juvenile genius, who is not noticed by him.

It may be interesting to learn how this great naturalist spends his time. Humboldt rises at about half-past eight o'clock; at breakfast he reads his letters, which he generally answers immediately. There is perhaps no letter writer so punctual as he, though very few persons have so large a correspondence, to all parts of the world.—

After this he dresses with the aid of his valet de chamber, to receive and announce visitors, or to make visits himself until two o'clock. At three o'clock he goes to the royal palace, where he generally dines, if he does not invite himself to dine with some family of his acquaintance. He remains mostly at Alexander Medelssohn's, in whose house he lives. At seven o'clock in the evening, he usually returns to his home. He then goes to the court or in society, from which he returns about midnight. Now is his real and best time for working; in the profound nightly science, he writes his immortal works, often in Summer until the day shines through the windows. It is always three o'clock in the morning when this juvenile old man thinks of allowing a short rest to his almost ninety years old body, to gain the necessary power for the new day's work. Indeed we think this a strange story, and still every word of it is true.

Humboldt has no family of his own—his nearest relations being the sons and daughters of his excellent brother, William, for whom he has a touching fraternal regard. "You should have known my brother," says he, with amiable modesty, "he was always the most talented of us two brothers."

Hunting for a Slave.

A FALSE HEARTED FEMALE BETRAYER.

A correspondent of the Chicago Daily Tribune, writing from Camp Point, a village in Illinois, on the border of Missouri, under date of July 15th, tells the following story. It seems almost incredible that any respectable female, and one whose youth also might have induced a belief that she possessed tenderness of feeling and compassion for suffering, should have so degraded herself as did the Miss Welsh mentioned in the letter. How many mouths will now repeat her name with contempt and loathing, who otherwise, had she acted on the golden rule, and sped the fugitives on their way to freedom in Canada, would have mentioned her with respect and admiration. The day may arrive when she will be a mother, and will remember that slave mother in whose bosom she crushed out all hope, and the three innocents of another race, whom she betrayed to bondage more terrible than death:—'Last evening our little village was considerably excited, by an arrest being made of a negro woman and three small children, who had escaped from their master, living at La Grange, Mo. It appears the poor creatures had been lurking in the timber, within half a mile of our place, for two or three days, and had been seen frequently by those who did not view them with any particular interest, and have even been so bold as to call on families living near their retreat for victuals, water, &c. But yesterday a report was raised that a reward of $1000 was offered for their delivery in La Grange, when 'all eyes were open for the apprehension of the fugitives,' and in a few minutes a party was formed and the search commenced. All day they were engaged in the stealthy tread, but no slaves were to be found, and the party being weary, returned in the evening to refresh themselves preparatory to another trial at night. The fun was spoiled, however by a messenger arriving a few minutes after they returned, informing them that the negroes had been decoyed into the house of Mr. James Welsh, who lives at the edge of the timber in which the unfortunates were concealed. This treachery was performed by the daughter of Mr. Welsh, a young woman, who found the negroes a short distance from the house, by telling them that she was a friend to them, and that if they would go with her to the house she would give them something to eat. The crazy mother could but accept this offer for her starving children, and without suspicion went into the house. But before they had time to allay their hunger, the sable mother and poor helpless children were surrounded by a dozen stout men, all 'armed to the the teeth.' In a few minutes a hack was procured, and the poor creatures were fast returning to their bondage. True it is that money is the root of all evil.'

Miscellany.

QUITE A MISTAKE.—The Baltimore Republican tells a story of a young man who fell in love with a young lady residing in one of the residences in Upper Tendom. The lover' fearing a repulse from the head of the family, conducted his courtship in a clandestine manner. The upshot of the matter was that an elopement occurred and the parties were married. After the marriage the bridegroom proposed that they should return home and procure the father's pardon. Judge of his dismay when, with a trembling voice he was informed that although she possessed the name of the gentleman in queston, she was not related to him in the slightest degree, and was employed in his dwelling in the capacity of a seamstress. Thus all his visions of a secured fortune were scattered to the winds: and the scene of recrimination which ensued was terribly out of character for a newly married couple.

AFRICAN EMIGRATION.—A Southern paper says, upon what authority we do not know, that the government of Martinique has rejected the proposition of the Marseilles traders for supplying it with free negroes whilst the island of Guadaloupe has accepted it. It is thought this will reduce the speculation one half, or cause it to be abandoned altogether. The majority of the English papers denounce the whole affair as a retrogressive fall into the slave trade, though we see it stated, nevertheless, that a West India deputation has waited upon Lord Palmerston on a mission intimately connected with a similar scheme for providing the British West India Islands with free black labor.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Delicate females who are harassed and debilitated by complaints peculiar to their organization, are uniformly relieved by Holloway's Pills. For hysteria, spasm, hot flushes, sick headache, pains in the back and loins they are a safe and reliable remedy, while the healing and cooling effect of this balsamic Ointment upon burns, scalds, running sores, irritations of the skin, scrofulous ulcers, salt rheum, erysipelas, and all external inflammation, is a miracle in surgery.—Purchasers, before using these remedies, are cautioned to look for the Water-mark, which appears in every leaf of the genuine book of directions. If the words, "Holloway New York and London, are not visible in the paper, the medicines are counterfeits.

A most amusing and humorous suit has arisen from the following transaction:—A New York merchant shipped fifty Maltese cats or kittens from Malta, and a storm arose on the road home, when superstition seized on the minds of the crew, who threw the cats overboard, The owner claims damages at the rate of $50 for each cat, $2,500 in all.

A doctor returned a coat to a tailor because it did not fit him. The tailor seeing the doctor at the funeral of one of his patients said, "Ah, doctor, you are a happy man!" "Why so?" asked the doctor.—"Because," replied the tailor, "you never have any of your bad work returned on your hands.

A wag one day speaking of two of his acquaintances who had gone West, where the new-comers are usually attacked the first season with the the ague. Said he: "Neither of those two men will be afflicted."

"Why not?" inquired a by-stander.

"Because," was the reply," one of them is too lazy to shake. and the other won't unless he gets pay for it."

A Yankee doctor has contrived to extract from sausages a powerful tonic, which he says contains the whole strength of the original bark; he calls it the 'Sulphate of canine!' He anticipates a great popularity for it in New York.

"Don't care much about the bugs," said Mr. Warmley to the head of a genteel private family in which he resides, "but the fact is marm, I hain't got the blood to spare; you see that yourself."

The man who hung himself to an axletree with a cord of wood, has been cut down with a sharp-set appetite by the fast man who tired down a wagon-wheel.

The Siege of Delhi:—Horrible Atrocities by the Mutineers.

The Times has published the following letter:—

ARMY HEAD-QUARTERS, }
DELHI CANTONMENTS, June 12 }

We are now encamped on the Flagstaff Hill, having dislodged the insurgents on the 8th. They fought most obstinately, and disputed the ground inch by inch; but British courage, and I may add, ferocity, forced all before them. In the enemy's camp was found a European actually laying the guns! He was literally cut to pieces by the exasperated soldiery. It is suspected that there are others in the city. Three hundred of the mutineers tried to escape by getting into a serace, but they were soon by some of our fellows, and a party went to dislodge them. They fired from the windows, killing our fellows burstropen the door, and, rushing in killed every one. Not one was left alive. We marched down to the lines by the artillery bridge, the centre one having been destroyed by the enemy. We were under heavy fire till we got beyond the canal, but not a single casualty occurred.

Yesterday, they came out in force, but were driven back with great loss. The Guide Corps and the 60th Rifles had nearly all the fighting. Poor young Battye, of the Guides, was mortally wounded. We have three batteries in position now, and they are pitching shot and shell into the city very fast. The Ghoorkas who belong to our force are behaving splendidly. The city is hermetically sealed at present, so I can give you no news from thence.

All was quiet at Lahore, and up as far as Seetapore, to the 30th inst. It is supposed the check the Delhi mutineers have received has prevented other corps from showing their teeth; but there can be no doubt that the whole native army has been tampered with, and the will is not wanting to show their disaffection. Delhi once more in our possession, things will probably quiet down again—not before.

(From the Calcutta Englishman, June 18.)

In the fortnight which has elapsed since the departure of the last mail, so many startling events have occurred, that we hardly know how to enumerate them. Perhaps the greatest sensation will be caused at home by the arrest of the ex-King of Oude and his Minister Ally Nucky Khan, who were both lodged in Fort William on Monday morning. Soon after his deposition, this unfortunate monarch left Lucknow, and has ever since resided in the neighborhood of Calcutta in great seclusion, and, apparently patiently awaiting the result of the exertion of his agents in England. But if the reports of natives can be trusted, the King's attachment to this neighborhood arose from it having been planned that the whole of Bengal and Upper India should be shared among the Mahomedan princes. The titular King of Delhi was to have had the North-west. The King of Oude's brother, their hereditary possessions with some additions, the King himself Lower Bengal, and some provinces were to have been assigned to the Nawab of Moorshedabad, so that the Mussulman dynasties were to have been everywhere restored, and the ascent of each throne made easy, not by the blood of warriors slain in battle, but that of unoffending English women and children, cruelly butchered in cold blood. It is to be supposed that the government is in possession of sufficient evidence against these audacious criminals, and that it would not have arrested the King of Oude without having proof that he is personally implicated in the conspiracy by which he was to have profited. If this be the fact, the deposed monarch will have lost all claim to the sympathy of the British nation, and will be regarded with greater horror than the mutineers themselves, as having instigated their crimes without courage to share their danger.

Our communications with the Upper Provinces are so constantly interrupted that we cannot give no connected narrative of events. Every day brings news of a fresh mutiny and fresh murders, and instead of the larger portion of the Bengal army being loyal and faithful, as so confidently asserted by official men, the disobedient are now exceptions to the general rule of mutiny, and even those few are probably restrained by fear alone from following the example of their comrades. When vigilance has been shown, the disobedient have been disarmed, and this we have reason to believe, has taken place throughout the Punjab, though we have only reports from some stations. At other places where it was impossible to send timely relief, mutiny and murder have occurred and thus most of the stations beyond Benares have fallen into the hands of the mutineers. At Allahabad, the European residents hold the fort against the sepoys and mob, and are by this time, no doubt, relieved by the Madras fusiliers sent to their assistance, but the communication with them is cut off; and every attempt to establish clerks to the northward has failed. Our latest news from Delhi, which is as follows, reached us by telegraph to Madras, and thence by steam to Calcutta:—

"There has been great success on the 8th outside the walls of Delhi; twenty-six guns captured, and the mutineers driven completely into the town. All the heights in our possession. Parties of mutineers infest the Allyghur road, stopping back communication between Agra, Boolundshahur and Meerut. All quiet at Agra."

This is very important, since the heights completely command the town and fort, which cannot possibly be held long, and it is therefore probable that Delhi has already fallen. This will not immediately quiet the country, but it will break up the conspiracy, if, as is now generally believed, it is an organized attempt to restore the Mahomedan princes to power. Had it been as skilfully carried out as it was cleverly planned, it might have been fatal to the British rule, for the reluctance of this government to believe it generals, its tardiness to act, its extreme forbearance towards men in open revolt, gave extraordinary advantage to the conspirators had they known how to use them, but they wanted a man. Wretched zenana slaves and their corrupted masters, are not the persons to effect a political revolution, and the want of a leader is fatal when acting against an established government, which, when roused, is capable of energetic action. There is no doubt that the mutineers calculated on the impossibility of obtaining reinforcements in time, and they must have been astonished at the rapidity with which British troops have been poured in. Indeed, there is nothing in the whole annals of war equal to the promptitude with which a part of the Persian expedition arrived, the men of her Majesty's 64th foot being actually landed in Calcutta within three weeks from the day on which the Delhi mutiny was known to government. We shall soon have force enough for ample vengeance, as it is now known that the whole of the troops intended for China will be diverted to Bengal, and mutiny will everywhere be crushed, for fortunately we have no external enquiries, and our Indian neighbors are for the most part friendly, and are giving us assistance.

While we give due credit to the government for its exertions to procure troops, we are sorry that we must censure an ill advised measure of precaution.

On Saturday, by a sudden and spasmodic effort, the Legislative Council passed an act for restricting the public press. Having been passed without any warning or preparation, and in utter neglect of the usual forms, it may be fairly likened to the conduct of a sleeper, who being suddenly roused, strikes friend and foe indiscriminately. We can hardly be wrong in attributing this piece of Legislative wisdom to a sudden impulse, since the government from the beginning of the mutiny, has turned a deaf ear to all the improper or inflamatory articles of the native newspapers, and appears only to have been roused into action by the appearance of an incendiary proclamation in the Doorbin, a Persian paper edited by a man in the employment of the Suddur Court, and therefore affording an additional proof of the asserted fidelity of those in the public service. The utter inutility of this act, as a precaution against the spread of such incentives to murder and treason, may be judged of by the well known fact that this very proclamation, or one almost precisely similar, has been circulated for months past, through every regiment in the Bengal army, and has been read in every bazaar where Mahomedans resort. No press law, even if it amounted to a total suppression, can prevent this in a country where ready copyists are everywhere procurable. If the members of government did not know this, if they were ignorant of the existence of this and similar incendiary publications, we can only say that they knew less than the meanest of those under their authority. If they did know it, we can only wonder at the apathy with which the progress of the mutiny was regarded, when a vigorous effort might have checked, if not suppressed it, and at the sudden vigour displayed when two-thirds of that native army are in open revolt.

We said above that this act strikes friend and foe alike, but it strikes friends much harder than foes; for the entire suppression of a little native newspaper, and even the fright of its printers and types, would only be the loss of a few hundred rupees to a man whose whole fortune may be embarked on this scheme for the destruction of the infidels; while such an attack upon any of the English papers would ruin the proprietors, and starve the large body of persons employed by them. We do not say this because we apprehend any wanton abuse of the power given by this act, which we have no doubt is intended simply to meet the exigencies of the times, but it would have been not merely a graceful acknowledgment to the Public Journals of India, but an act of justice to those who have done their best to support the government in this perilous crisis, if the act had drawn a wide distinction on between the English papers, and the vehicles of slander and treason which it was more especially pointed at.

It would be simply ridiculous at a time like this, when every thing we possess, our fortunes, lives and the lives of all who are dear to us, are staked upon the suppression of this revolt, to suspect any English journalist of opposition or even lukewarmness to his own cause. No mere hint from any authority has hitherto sufficed to restrain us from publishing anything which it was thought prudent to keep back, and we have no doubt that the same feeling has animated our cotemporaries.

We have laid aside all the usual topics of animadversion, the grievences of planters, smitos, &c., to give a fair and honest support to the government, and our reward is "a gagging act." As this extraordinary piece of legislative wisdom is limited to a year, it is fair to suppose it is only meant for mutiny—but it may be easily extended to prevent the usual animadversions of the local press upon public measures and public men. If so it is easy to see that it must be a failure, since the fires suppressed here will burst out with tenfold violence in England. Already the severest attacks upon the measures of this government have been sent home If it could be fairly argued that these strictures have no support from those best informed on the subject, the local papers, they might have very little effect, but when it can be urged that the Indian journals dare not speak out under the penalty of suppression, private statements will be believed. Every man now smarting under the loss of property, or in affliction at the murder of friends and relatives, sends home an indignant and exaggerated statement of the apathy and blindness of the government, and its miserable efforts to plaster over and conceal the foul ulcer that is eating its vitals; when these are read a shout of disgust and indignation will be raised throughout the land.

The Navy Department at Washington have received a letter from Flag Officer James Armstrong, dated United States ship "San Jacinto," Hong Kong, May 23, in which he says: "From the enormous force the English are collecting at this station, and the arrangements they are making for its permanency, it is clear that China is to be compelled by them to yield her exclusiveness." He adds:—"There will be a total of 60 vessels, mounting 783 guns. Accompanying this force are several sea-going hospitals and transport ships, with a large supernumerary medical staff."—Globe.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—We learn from a source which we suppose may be relied upon, that the Directors of the Company owning this ship, are proposing to reduce the price of tourist tickets from £100 to £50, and intend also to issue tickets on this side of the Atlantic, for a European trip. The route for tourists in this country will be such as to embrace everything worthy of attention between Portland and Chicago, Washington and Quebec.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, AUGUST, 27, 1857.

Is all probability, the Loan By-Law for the opening up of Town Lines, has been rejected by the different municipalities in this County. This we cannot but regret; we must, however, submit with as good a grace as possible to the will of the people.

That they stood in their own light, in not voting for the By-Law, we feel confident; but what appears to have been most against these improvements, in the minds of the people, is that non-resident lands would be improved to a greater extent than any other. Upon this point we have already spoken, and it is needless to again go over the same ground; but will now propose a remedy for the evil, which is simply this: that petitions be circulated throughout the Townships, praying the Legislature to grant Municipal Councils the power to levy rates upon the lands of non-residents, where they will be mainly benefited by the im provements. Such a measure as this would find favor with, and would be just and equitable to all parties. The opening of these roads has become a necessity, and will have to be done, and that shortly. The better way, therefore, would be to commence at once to obtain signatures to petitions for that purpose. We will refer to this subject again.

GRAND CRICKET MATCH BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

This match came off at Toronto between eleven picked players of Canada and eleven of the United States. The wickets were pitched on Wednesday the 19th and the game was continued for three days and resulted in a glorious victory in favor of the Canadians. The game was well contested and reflects great credit upon the victors, for they may feel justly proud at beating eleven of the best players in the United States.

The United States eleven consisted of the following gentlemen:—Messrs. Senior and Barlow of Philadelphia. Mr. Comery of Albany. Mr. Bury of Cleveland. Messrs. Wright and Lang of St. George's Club, N. Y. Messrs. Higham, Willby, Cupp, Crossley and Sharp of New York Club.

The Canada eleven were:—Messrs. Brad bury, Parsons, Heward, Dexter of Toronto. Pickering and Arron of Montreal. Head, Rykert, and Philips of St. Catharines, Dykes of Galt and Starling of Belleville.

At the close of the Game the score stood thus,

TOTALS.

United States—1st Innings	108
" " 2d "	89
		—197
Canada . . . . 1st Innings	145
" 2d "	53
		—198

Canada winning with seven wickets to go down.

The result of this match, will compensate for the defeat of the Canadians, when the last game was played in the City of New York.

During the last week, we had occasion to travel through most of the Townships in the County, and had a fine opportunity of witnessing the general features of each, the state of the crops and the improvements made upon the roads, within the last year.

The first Township that we passed thro', was Maidstone, along the front, where we found the main road in a most shameful state; in many places having the appearance as if nothing had been done to them for many a day. The Council should look to this, and expend a trifle in that quarter, as travellers will be apt to think ill of the Township, on account of their shocking roads. There can be no excuse for not rendering assistance to that section of the Township; for at the other side—we mean upon the Middle Road, very little is needed, from the fact of its being a "Board of Works" road. Mudholes, two feet deep are rather unpleasant subjects to meet with, in ones perambulations, and particularly when threatened with a cooling shower. Had our wishes been realized, just when we were passing through the mire, the Councillors for Maidstone would have had cause to regret the quantity as well as quality of mud in which they should have wallowed, but unfortunately for the Township they have not. The side Roads are not in a much better condition.

The early crops were already harvested and may be looked upon as a fair yield. Corn looks badly and will run far short of what it should be, had the season been more favorable. Potatoes look well and give a fair promise of an abundant yield.

BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK, August 24.

Surrogate Bradford to-day rendered a decision on the Burdell estate. The decision is very elaborate and lengthy, and concludes by declaring that Mrs. Cunningham is not the widow of Dr. Burdell, and by directing that letters of administration be issued to next of kin.

Shameful Quackery & Imposition The New Jersey Doctor.

A fellow styling himself a retired English Physician in Jersey city, advertises that for a York Shilling he will give any person a recipe that will cure Consumption, Colds, and other diseases, and that he does this from pure benevolence. Multitudes of Yorkers must have been showered on the impostor, but people who are duped often suffer without complaint rather than expose such miscreants. An inhabitant of Toronto has shown us a precious correspondence which passed between him and the New Jersey Doctor. He first sends a Yorker to the Doctor. The Doctor in return sends a printed paper containing a recipe for his invaluable medicine. He says that the materials of which it is composed cannot be got genuine but from himself, and that on sending two dollars, the benevolent and disinterested Doctor will send a bottle properly prepared—the dollars are sent—but did the bottie ever come? No. An answer came, however, stating that as it would be better for convenience and cheapness, he had sent a dozen bottles of medicine to Toronto, to a person whose post office address is given, and on applying to that person, and paying a dollar and a half, the applicant will receive a bottle. This person, he says, has not advertised yet, (nor is it likely he ever will.) But this knave, who has already received his own price, says it will be a saving of half a dollar to get it in Toronto.—Along with this correspondence a printed document is sent, professing to contain a correspondence between the said Doctor and medical men in Europe and India. The letters are evidently vulgar and ignorant fabrications, full of all manner of absurdities. We hope that this exposure will prevent any Newspaper in Canada from giving currency to the deceptions of this consummate knave.—Globe.

Loss of the Bark "Monasco" at Sea—Fifty-Four Lives Lost.

On the 1st of August a telegraph dispatch was received in this city, via Boston, stating that on the 21st of July the bark Monasco, from Burin, Newfoundland, for Gottenburg for New York on the 13th June, with 61 Swedish passengers and a crew of 13 persons. On the night of the 21st July, the bark ran upon a high rock on Corbin Head, Newfoundland, and went down in a few minutes and foremost. By this disaster 54 Swedish passengers perished. It would appear, however, from the facts that have transpired that this dreadful loss of life was mainly attributable to the cowardice and incapacity of the captain. Had Capt. Dailey possessed ordinary discretion or self-control, few if any of his passengers would have been lost. But instead of manfully standing by his ship, he was the first man to set an example of pusillanimity which is truly painful to contemplate. At the first alarm he rushed with his wife to the boat, and stuck by it to the last, as though it were his only hope. We trust that those who saw fit to place him in so responsible a position, will take the earliest opportunity to ascertain how faithfully he discharged its duties.—N. Y. Tribune.

Mrs. Cunningham sent to Gaol.

From the N. Y. Tribune, Friday.

Mrs. Cunningham, otherwise Burdell, was removed from No. 31 Bond street, yesterday, to the City Prison and locked up in the same cell she occupied on a former occasion. Since the delivery of Justice Davidson's opinion, she has been permitted to remain in Bond street as she professed to be too ill for removal, and the Tombs under the special charge of Inspector Dilks of the Fifteenth Precinct, acting as agent of Mr. Gray, Warden of the City Prison. There being no chance of her obtaining bail, it was resolved yesterday morning to remove her to the Tombs, the matter, perhaps, being hastened by the following letter addressed to District Attorney Hall:—

"DEAR SIR:—As Counsel and Attorney for some of the heirs of Harvey Burdell, I have long been desirous to secure possession of the house No. 31 Bond street.

"As I gather, Justice Davidson has issued his warrant of commitment against Mrs. Cunningham, and therefore as the house referred to cannot rightfully, and, as I think, not legally, be made a prison, and as it appears to me that the matter of the safe and proper disposition of the accused is with you more than with any one else, I claim that the house, the property of my clients, be freed from Mrs. Cunningham's presence.

"Always respectfully,

CHARLES EDWARDS.

"A. OAKEY HALL, ESQ., District Attorney, New York, August 13, 1857.

Mr. Hall upon the receipt of this letter dispatched Officer Smith, of the Lower Police Court, to assist Inspector Dilks in removing Mrs. Cunningham to the Tombs without further delay. About 9 o'clock, the two officers proceeded to No. 31 Bond street and informed Mrs. Cunningham of their business. Her daughters Helen, Augusta and Georgiana were with her; and as soon as the subject of removing her was broached, Augusta (the eldest) fainted, and was revived with some difficulty only to suffer a relapse. A physician was sent for, but more than two hours passed before she was evidently recovered to bear her mother's removal. For some time past Miss Augusta has been afflicted with a nervous disease, and is subject to fainting fits. Helen, the second daughter, bore the blow with great fortitude, and insisted on accompanying her mother, who still appears to be very ill and weak. Since the arrest of Mrs. Cunningham, her daughter Helen has been almost constantly with her, using every means in her power to alleviate her sufferings.

Everything being arranged, a carriage drew up to the door, and a quantity of clothing and bedding was placed in it, without unnecessary display. The door was then opened and Mrs. Cunningham was brought out on a mattress by Inspector Dilks and officer Smith, and carefully placed on the back seat. She was dressed in black, and wore a thick veil over her face, and appeared to be entirely helpless. Her daughter Helen took a seat by her side. The officers next entered the carriage, drew the curtains, and the vehicle was driven down Broadway, toward the Tombs.

The matter had been so quietly arranged by the officers, that there was very little excitement in the street, and not over forty people were to be seen. The crowd was much scattered, and consisted of servants from the neighbouring houses, and those who chanced to be passing by at the time. While Mrs. Cunningham was being brought out silence prevailed, and no one seemed to trouble themselves about the matter, except an inquisitive gent, who asked Inspector Dilks if the baby was done up in one of the bundles in the carriage.

As the vehicle drove off the servant girls indulged in all sorts of remarks: "There she goes, and may the divil go wid her," said a brawny Irish girl, with her sleeves rolled up, exposing her red arms. "The divil will get his mate now, faith," exclaimed another.—"She's a murtherin' suld hag," chimed in a third; and "what a pity to make such a fuss over her," said a fourth. The domestics of the vicinity, composing the greater part of those who witnessed Mrs. Cunningham's departure, were in high feather, and some considerable time elapsed before they left the sidewalks and returned to their household duties.

The carriage arrived at the Tombs at 11½ o'clock. When it stopped at the prison gate a crowd began to collect at once, and in a short time fifty or sixty people had collected around the carriage. The crowd was driven back, and Mrs. Cunningham was hurried through to the Matron's Office, where Dr. Covil was in attendance and took her in charge. Upon reaching the office she appeared completely prostrated, and unable to speak. After resting here a while, she was conveyed to the cell which she occupied on a former occasion.

The Potato Crop in the South of Ireland.

As the fate of the potato crop in the South of Ireland was beginning to cause some little uneasiness, the subjoined cautious statement from the Cork "Examiner" of 27th July, is not without interest.

Various accounts continue to be received with respect to the state of the potato crop, according to the locality from which they come; but there is a little discrepancy to be observed in statements referring to the same locality. From all the midland counties the reports are decidedly favorable, both with respect to the yield of the crop and the absence of disease, and even from the interior portion of this country the accounts are comparatively satisfactory. But there is no doubt that the disease has appeared in a marked and virulent form throughout an extensive district along the coast of the south. All the last accounts we receive are from localities in almost the same situation with respect to being near the sea. The other day a statement was made that in the vicinity of Skibbereen, the name of which is so memorable in the history of the blight, the crop was not affected. We have ascertained from accurate authority that this report is exactly the opposite of the fact. The potato crop in that locality is stated to be very extensively infected and also to be far inferior to that of last year in the actual amount of produce. In the contiguous district, surrounding Bantry, we have been informed that the blight has shown itself in some districts to a considerable, but still less extent, than last year, and also at a later period; and further west, in the vicinity of Dunmanway, we learn that a gentleman the crop has been attacked, but the new seed is generally found to be exempt from the blight. We have also received a letter from Dingle, which we cannot give to-day, questioning the statement in which we referred lately, that the County of Kerry was free from the disease, and stating that in certain parishes to the west of this county the crop is much blackened and injured. However, we have the assurance of a clergyman that though such is the case with respect to the parishes referred to, on the opposite side, "from Dingle to Tralee, the crop never looked so healthy." Thus, the account we gave on a former occasion is substantially confirmed. It is satisfactory to know that the accounts from other parts of the country concur in representing the crop as healthy and flourishing. Of course it would be hazardous at this time to measure the proportion of the crop affected, even in the localities to which the disease extends. But it may be observed that in later years the disease has not spread with the same rapidity or for the same length of time as was the case on its first appearance."

The Goodwood Race.

From the New York Times.

We have sent our American horses to England; they have arrived; they have been seen; they have run; and—they have been beaten!

Had this result been first achieved at the York Races we should have received it with distrust, for the reasons set forth by us some time since. But the management of the Goodwood Races is beyond suspicion.—There our horses have been fairly treated, and every opportunity has been afforded them and their owner to bring out their best qualities. Doubtless these opportunities have been improved, and the consequence is, that we have been fairly, handsomely, and thoroughly beaten. And the best thing we can do now is, to acknowledge the fact, and, if we like, try it again.

A great many rumours, of course, are already in circulation as to the wild devices employed on this occasion, to deprive us of our natural prerogative of superiority over everybody in everything. It is already darkly hinted in the Herald office that Lord Palmerston was seen to emerge from the stables of "Pryor and Pyoress" on the Wednesday before the race, with a dark lantern in one hand and a hammer in the other. We all know the determined hostility borne by Lord Palmerston to this country, and we cannot doubt that there may be some foundation for the story. At all events, it deserves to be looked into; and now that we have three—yes, four five Lords in this country, it becomes a question whether we ought not to seize and imprison Lord Napier, Lord Althorp, Lord John or George Hervey, and the Earl of Listowel, till we hear of the result of the Ebor Handicap.

If Britons never will be slaves, neither will Americans consent to be d'stanced.—All nonsense apart, it is really of some importance that we should not make fools of ourselves, because two of our horses have been outrun by four horses of British breeding on the British turf, and a Gallic Monarque. We can only regret the circumstance, and hope for better luck next time.

If we must be beaten, it is a satisfaction that we have been beaten fairly, and in good company, and before an honorable assemblage of spectators! [illegible]

The French horse Monarque won the race. The English horse "Risebor is placed second, and "Fisherman" third. Gunboat slipped and fell, and Kestrel and Gemmadi Vergy also fell heavily. Monarque won by a head, and Reisber beat Fisherman by about three lengths. Another head separated Fisherman from Belleville, who finished fourth, and three lengths behind Fisherman. The American horses "Pryor and Pyoress" was placed fifth and sixth, and the English horse "Melissa" seventh. All the others pulled up. The finish is said to have been the most exciting ever witnessed. The English papers remark, but without assigning any reason, that the two American horses would have figured more prominently had they been ridden by English jockies.

THE CUP.

From the London Times.

The Goodwood Cup for this year is really what is professes to be—a cup and not a palm tree, a group of pugnacious warriors, or flying steeds. It is a noble vase of oxidized silver in the ornamented or renaissance style of the sixteenth century, and is beyond all doubt one of the most effective and artistic imitations of the medieval silver work which has been produced. The upper part is subdued and simple in style, being only ornamented with flat engraving of ivy leaves and berries upon a bright matted ground. The handles form an altogether novel and striking combination, and are so interlaced in the quaint elaborate style of the renaissance as to present the effect of four winged figures of fame rising from their base. The body is adorned with richly executed bas relief of Queen Elizabeth reviewing the English forces near Tilbury, and the different figures are chased and grouped with excellent taste, and the general effect of the whole piece is taken from the best authorities; the features and dress of the Queen from the coins of her reign. The opposite side has an ornamental tablet for inscription, enriched with bosses, wreaths, and sunken damascene work. The foot is formed by crowned lions supporting chased medallion portraits after Holbein of Lord Burleigh and Sir Francis Drake. The general effect of the whole piece is unusually striking and attractive; and the imitations of the steeled damascene being perfect, gives the vase the aspect of an antique piece of family plate rather than a work from the jewellers. The design modelling is by Mr. Armstead—the workmanship such as only comes from Hancock's.

QUEBEC, August 23rd.

The "Anglo Saxon" arrived here about eight o'clock this morning. The "North American" arrived at Liverpool about two o'clock on the 12th. The "Anglo-Saxon" reports having experienced thick weather, and head winds nearly all the time. Her course being too far north, she saw nothing of the Atlantic cable fleet.

THE ATLANTIC CABLE.

VALENTIA, August 1C, 4 P. M.

The work of laying down the Atlantic telegraphic cable is going on up to the present time as satisfactorily as its best friends can desire. Nearly three hundred miles have been successfully laid in the sea. The depth of water into which it is being submerged is about 1,700 fathoms, or about two miles. The transmission from the shallow to the greater depth was effected without difficulty. The signals are everything that an electrician could desire. The ships are sailing with a moderate fair breeze, and passing out at the rate of five miles an hour. Messages are being constantly interchanged between the ships and the shore. All are well on board, and in excellent spirits, and hourly becoming more and more trustful of success.

The Emperor and Empress had returned to France.

The Quebec Chronicle says that the new ship "Frenchman," built by Mr. Henry Dinning, of Quebec, has made the run hence to Liverpool in 15 days. She sailed from Quebec on the 1st July inst. and arrived out on the 17th.

Occasionally events occur which startle humanity, and cause us to believe that fiends sometimes possess the shape of man. Of such a character is a crime recently committed in Chicago. A mother 80 years of age, was murdered on Tuesday last by her son and daughter. She was beaten to death, apparently for no other reason than to get rid of the trouble of keeping her for the few remaining years that could have been allotted to her. The name of the deceased was Deidrich. The son, George Deidrich, is a cripple, and the daughter is a widow with two children. They are both in jail.

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature.

The Laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division if it estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of share -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years -	96.
Total - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.
And for three years - - 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each share.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness

The Wheat Crop.--Midge.--What Shall be Done?

From nearly all parts of the Upper Province we hear the most alarming accounts of the ravages of the "Midge"—that most destructive of all the insect enemies of the wheat-grower. In the counties of Kent, Lambton, Middlesex, &c., it has proved more disastrous this year than ever before, if the accounts that have reached us can be relied upon. In the counties of Lincoln, Welland, and Haldimand, its depredations have deprived many a farmer of his bread. East of Toronto, in the counties of Durham and Nothumberland, bitter complaints are also made of its blasting influences. The counties of York and Peel, and the county of Simcoe, so far as we have been able to learn, have escaped with slight injury. There is something remarkable in this apparent immunity. The Midge has devastated the wheat fields East, West and South of these counties, but has given them a mere taste of its quality. To what is this owing? The superior culture, the better varieties of wheat, or the geological character of the soil? Geologists tell us that the tract of country embraced within the counties of York and Peel, and part of Ontario is of a different character from that on either side. Our soil is a drift deposit of immense thickness, averaging about 200 feet. The rock which underlies this drift is called the Hudson River group, or Lorra ne shales. The Niagara limestone bounds it on the west in the county of Halton, and the Trenton limestone on the east in the county of Ontario. We do not even give it as our opinion, that the peculiar geological character of the soil in this neighborhood has anything to do with the attacks of the "Midge"; still if a particular tract or belt of country is found to have escaped for a succession of years, and if that tract differs geologically from those which suffer, the fact is well worthy of investigation.

It is much to be regretted that no steps have been taken to ascertain exactly and reliably the extent of these insect depredations in Canada; the townships most subject to the pest; the kinds of soil, varieties of wheat, and system of cultivation which it seem- to prefer, and on the contrary, those soils, varieties of wheat, and modes of culture which seem to preserve from its attacks. As we have remarked on former occasions, a mere essay or compilation of the history and peculiarities of this insect to be found in the writings of Harris, Fitch, Kirby, and others, will prove of little value. We have read them all and so far as prevention or remedy is concerned, find ourselves but little wiser for our pains. What the country wants, is the organization of a system of observation and experiment, to be carried on for a series of years in each township. The observers might be selected from the most intelligent members of Agricultural Societies. They should be furnished with specimens in the fly as well as the larva state of the various insects to be noticed, together with a short description, and their proper scientific as well as popular names. A formula should be drawn up as a guide to each observer, so that results may be properly recorded and classified. If any remedy exists, if any means can be adopted to rid the country of this pest, or to check its progress, this is the way to find it out, and secure for it when announced the public confidence. When will the Bureau, or Board of Agriculture move? How long must the farmers of Canada wait to see the fruit that was promised when these departments were established?

The injury which Canada will sustain this year from the depredations of the midge, may be estimated at millions of dollars; next year, as we have every reason to fear, it will be worse. Some have recommended the total abandonment of wheat culture for two or three years. This remedy may indeed be the only one that will effect a cure. But has any one counted the cost; have the consequences been duly considered? It is estimated that we exported last year, about nine millions of bushels, at an average price of a dollar and-a-half per bushel. Now, what will be the effect upon our industrial interests, upon our trade and commerce, upon our public improvements, upon our financial credit, at home and abroad, upon the public revenues, which an extravagant legislature and a reckless government have pledged to their full amount for the next twenty years if this chief source of income be suddenly dried up, even though the drought last but two years?

Mr. Mechi, the agricultural experimentalist, naively remarks in a book he has lately put forth, that "a month's holiday to the British stomach would settle all our manufactures, commerce, and philosophy." And, an English politician once suggested as the only remedy for the political grievances of a certain troublesome community, that the Island they inhabited should be submerged for about fifteen minutes! The cure proposed in our case, appears to belong pretty much to the same category. That our farmers have, for some years, grown too much wheat in proportion to other crops; that they have not prepared their fallows with sufficient care, frequently growing wheat after wheat,—which we believe is the chief cause of the rapid increase of insects—must be admitted, and we think it will be found that in sections of the country where good cultivation is practiced, where the wheat stubble is ploughed in the fall and ploughed deep, where wheat is never allowed to follow wheat, and where hardy varieties are generally sown, the insects give, but little trouble. Of course, the advantage of such a plan cannot be fully ascertained, so long as farmers here and there, adhere to the old system. One field in a township allowed to stand as a breeding-patch for the larva of the midge, will be sufficient to perpetuate the species to an injurious extent, and probably nullify every attempt to procure its extinction. Any remedy of this kind, therefore, to be effectual, must be general. Hence the necessity for the aid and the interference of authority.

SALTING HAY.—We frequently find notices of salting hay, and also of the injurious effects, in many instances, resulting from it. We give from the farm report of L. D. Clift, of Putman county, N. Y., in the volume of Transactions of the N. Y. State Society for 1855, a preparation that has proved highly beneficial, and obviates the difficulties attending the use of salt:—

"PREPARATIONS FOR HAY IN THE MOW.—I have used, for several years, the following preparation for my hay: Two parts of slacked or quick lime to one of salt. The salt to be mixed with the lime until dissolved and the mass becomes a powder. Up on a load or ton of hay, at intervals in moving or stacking, use from ten to fifteen quarts, dosed evenly over the hay. I formerly used salt alone, but the men would often use too much, so that it was injurious to the stock. The above mixture obviates this—it corrects the acidity and sourness of hay, and I do not recollect a sick animal since I commenced its use. Horses troubled with the heaves are greatly relieved by feeding upon hay thus prepared, and I am satisfied it is a preventive of the heaves. My horses are kept in the stable the year round, well groomed, and they do far more work and wear longer than when suffered to run during the summer."

BONES AS A MANURE.—A late number of the Country Gentleman has an elaborate article by Levi Barlett, of New Hampshire, on bone manure. He concludes that there is no other manure whose effects are so lasting as an application of ground bones. Besides the increase of crops he says it supplies phosphate, which grasses generally lack, on old and long grazed fields in New England, and the want of which, cause what is called "bone disease" in cattle. Mr. M. recommends that the bones be pounded, and also broken to pieces, boiled or ground, and then spread evenly over the soil, and mixed with it. He has a field that was thus dressed years ago, and the effect is yet very perceptible on clover.

ADVICE TO YOUNG FARMERS.—Allow me to say, to young farmers especially, let us be studious and inquisitive, as well as laborious; let us be simple and frugal in our habits; avoid needless expenditures, leave fine dress, and fast horses, and showy dwellings to those who really need these things to recommend them. Let us remember that for health and substantial wealth, for rare opportunities for self improvement, for long life and real enjoyment, the farmer's is the best business in the world.—Goldthwaite.

STEWED APPLES.—Apples kept over for winter use lose their perfect flavor, and the summer luxury of "stewed apples" is rarely enjoyed during the winter or spring. While apples are plenty and in fine flavor, stew them with sugar, and seal them up. They will be as spicy and delicious at Christmas as in September. A cheaper or more favorite article for the tea-table can scarcely be found.

PROTECTION FROM ANTS is secured for your preserves, &c., as follows:—Set them on a table, insulated by placing its legs in cups of water, and notwithstanding their sagacity and industry these household scourges will not be able to cross over.—This way is perfectly successful, and practicable on a smaller scale. If they extend their incursions to your sugar urn, set it in a plate of water. After a while the ants finding nothing to eat, will desert that part of your house.

BAKED APPLE PUDDING may be made as follows:—Pare and quarter four large apples, boil them tender with the rind of a lemon; when done, remove nothing but remain when done but the juice; and the crumb of a small roll, 4 oz. butter, melted, the yolks of five and whites of three eggs, the juice of half a lemon, and sugar to taste; beat all together, and lay it in a dish; then beat the two remaining whites to a froth and throw it round the edge of the dish; grate a little white sugar over when baked.

TO CLEAN SILK.—Pare and slice thin three washed potatoes, then pour on them half a pint of boiling water, and let it stand till cold. Strain the water, and add an equal quantity of alcohol. Sponge the silk on the right side, and when half dry, iron it on the wrong side. The lightest colored silk may be cleaned and brightened by this process; also cloth, velvet, or crape.

BISCUIT WITHOUT SALERATUS are made by taking at night one pint of sweet milk, one tea-cup of yeast, butter the size of a walnut, and flour enough to make a nice loaf; then let it stand till morning; roll to half inch thickness, bake in a moderate oven, and you will have very nice light cakes for breakfast.

TO PRESERVE TIMBER.—It is said that if one pound of sulphuric acid is mixed with forty pounds of water, timber therein immersed will not rot, and that the underground portion of posts will last many more years for being so treated.

TO IRON VELVET.—Lay a damp towel over the bottom of a smoothing iron; put it on the wrong side of the velvet, and pass a whisk brush over the pile till the surface is free from wrinkles.

CORN TRADE BETWEEN FRANCE AND EGYPT.—The Courrier a Etats Unies announces that an association has been formed in France, with a capital of 2,000,000 francs having for its object the direct importation from Egypt of wheat, corn cereals, alimentary pastes, &c. Since the reduction of duties on these articles large supplies have been derived from the United States, chiefly American bottoms. What may be the effect of this new movement on our grain trade with France, remins to be seen, through but little good has ever been accomplished by moneyed monopolies.

THE CROPS IN THE NORTH OF IRELAND.—The Northern Whig, in describing the state of the crops in various parts of the North of Ireland, says:—"perhaps in the memory of the oldest agriculturist, we have never had more certain prospects than at present of an abundant harvest. The growth of oats has been particularly advanced by the refreshing showers of the week, and the large breadth of wheat throughout the country also bears evidence of its general influence. There cannot be a doubt that, should the present fine weather continue, the harvest of 1857 will be one memorable in the history of the present generation."

Select Poetry.

He will not Woo Again.

'Twas but a word, a careless word,
In pride and passion spoken;
But with that word the chain that bound
Two loving hearts was broken.
The hasty wrath has passed away;
The bitter words remain:
In vain the lady weeps and sighs;
He will not woo again.

No other love may light her path,
No other move his heart;
Yet changing seasons come and go,
And find them still apart.
Her once bright cheek is paler now;
His heart a trace of pain;
Their eyes are sorrowful, and yet
He will not woo again.

They meet as strangers, calm and cold;
As calmly, coldly part,
And none may guess that tranquil mien
Conceals a tortured heart.
To him the world hath lost its light;
For her all joys are vain;
Nor hope nor memory brings relief,
He will not woo again.

Alas, that love, long tried and warm,
Should wither in an hour!
Alas, that pride o'er human hearts
Should wield such fearful power!
Oh! weep thou not for those who die—
For them all tears are vain;
But weep o'er living hearts grown cold,
Who ne'er may love again.

The Jew's Treasure.

"BRING forth the Jew Oglandi, that we may pass sentence of death upon him!"

The order was speedily obeyed, and soon an old, very old man, was led into the presence of Jussul Bashaw, who was seated on his little throne in the audience hall of his palace. His form, now bent and feeble, depended on a staff to support his tottering steps—age had impaired his strength and bent him low, but the mind and wit retained their firmness, opposing time and trouble.

But what was this man's crime? Why he was a Jew—known to be a rich one—and the bashaw wanted his money, which the Jew would not give.

"Jew," said the bashaw, "reports have reached our ears that thou art in possession of great wealth."

"We were in need of money," continued the bashaw, "and commanded that our Hasnadar Grande should dispatch a message to you for a loan of two hundred pieces of English gold; but Mamet, our chief officer of the treasury, mistook our meaning, and sent to your house a party, who slew your children, immured you in a cell, inflicting tortures upon you. We inquired the reason of all this, and were told that you had attempted the life of a soldier, and so ordered your tortures to be renewed. This day we have learned your innocence, and now think of your restoration to freedom, and——"

"Upon what condition?" hastily interrupted the Jew, who, though knowing that all the bashaw had uttered was an untruth, still pretended to believe every word.

The bashaw did not give a direct answer, but then said:

"Report says that you have concealed silver, gold, and jewels, enough to make, in the coin of this regency, the sum of eighteen hundred thousand yasticks. Have you so much money?"

"Yes, and more!"

"Allah akpar!" said the bashaw, stroking his long beard with delight. "You would like your freedom?" he added inquiringly.

"As the eagle loves to soar aloft in air, the wild beast to roam unmolested through the forest, so have I always loved my free dom."

"You may have liberty on one condition, Jew."

"Name it."

"You have much wealth!" was the significant reply.

"Yes."

"You could live like a prince upon one half of it?"

"I could."

"Give me the other half, and you shall have your freedom."

"And will you not harm me any more?" asked the Jew, eagerly.

"No, good Jew; we will shield thee from all future harm," said the bashaw almost beside himself with joy. And descending from his throne, he approached and warmly embraced Oglandi.

"The last pledge will thou give me?" asked the Jew.

'Our princely word—nay, our oath."

"By what will you swear?"

"By the sacred stone in the kaaba of the temple at Mecca—by the names of Mahomet and of——"

"And will you keep your oath?" interrupted the Jew.

"If we do not, may we die the most horrible death man can conceive or invent."

The bashaw paused in breathless suspense, awaiting a reply, while Oglandi stood speechless as a statue.

The bashaw could no longer endure the painful silence. "Speak, good Jew," he said, "and tell us where you have your money concealed."

The Jew was immovable as marble—he weighed in his mind the value of the oath. His silence was painful to the anxious interrogator.

"Tell us!" entreated Jussuf, who was now suffering from alternate feelings of hope and fear.

Casting a strange look at the bashaw, the Jew said:—

"Your excellency first said that you wanted to borrow my money, but now you want me to give it to you."

"Your liberty!" significantly replied Jussuf, who was so completely elated and assured by the Jew's actions, as not to doubt that he would accept of any reasonable terms to get his freedom.

"I shall surely be set free?" again said the Jew.

"Soon as you tell where your money is to be found, and it is brought here, you shall be free."

"Your excellency knows the spot where Galil encamps?"

"Yes."

"Near half a mile east of it stand two barren date trees——"

"We have noticed them," interrupte l the bashaw.

"Between the trees is an oval stone surrounded by a bed of wild sorrel." And he paused.

"Go on!"

"And you will surely keep but half of my riches?"

"Only half."

"Well, upon lifting up the stone I spoke of, you will find a second one, which is flat, then a third, and a fourth one. Raising the last stone, you will find a large hole, running many feet underground."

"Yes—yes, I see."

"One day, I accidently discovered this place, and thought what a good spot it would be to hide my money in."

"Enough!" said the bashaw, dancing with delight. "Allah! my empty treasury shall soon be filled!"

The bashaw now dispatched a number of Turks to unearth and bring away the hidden treasures.

At the end of an hour the Turks returned, and stated that they could find no treasures there.

"How now, Jew?" asked the bashaw. "My men have searched the place and can find no money. Thou hast deceived us."

"I did not say my wealth was there."

"You wished us to believe as much."

"I said that I thought the place a good one for that purpose."

"And then you did not bury any of your riches there?"

"No—for the next day I found a better place."

"And where is it?"

"Where neither you nor your bloodthirsty followers can find it!"

The bashaw now discovered the cunning of the Jew, and that he had been caught in his own trap.

"Son of a foul Jew dog!" roared the exasperated bashaw, drawing one of the gold mounted pistols from his belt, and tapping it significantly.

"I fear not thy lead," said the old man in a calm tone. Then as if speaking to himself, he added, "Would that I had the strength of youth!"

"And what if thou hadst?"

"I would drag the from that blood bought throne, and dash out thy brains on this marble floor, to avenge the death of my murdered children!"

The bashaw now foamed with rage, and would have shot Oglandi dead, had not a thought, which suggested a last hope of getting possession of the Jew's money, at that moment entered his mind—he would threaten all of Oglandi's race with death just at the moment the executioner should raise the axe to chop off his head.

The bashaw now sent for the high sheriff, who soon appeared, axe in hand.

The bashaw ordered him to decapitate Oglandi forthwith. The sheriff dragged the helpless victim to the block. He raised the axe, but, when about to strike, a messenger from the bashaw arrested his hand.

He addressed Oglandi.

"The bashaw," he said, "swears that if you yield not your money, he will put to death every Jew in Tripoli, of your blood."

"Tell the incarnate fiend," said the Hebrew, triumphantly, "that of the once numerous family of the Oglandi's, I am all that remains—the last of my race!"

And breathing forth a last and fervent supplication to Heaven, the old man calmly placed his head on the block.

The axe fell, and he was no more!

A Tiger Slayer.

The morning after our arrival it was signified to us that there was a large royal tiger in a nullah near the town. This was soon confirmed by the appearance of a native who was preparing to attack it single handed. The animal was short, not robust, but compactly made, sinewy and active, having a countenance remarkable for its expression of calm determination. He was entirely naked above the hips, below which he simply wore coarse linen trousers reaching about half way down the thigh. He was armed with a pondercus knife, the blade of which was exceedingly wide and thick, with an edge almost as keen as a razor. On the left arm he bore a shield, about eighteen inches in diameter, covered with hide, and studded with brass, having a point of the same metal projecting from the base. My companions and myself walked with this intrepid little Hindoo to the lair of the sleeping foe. We were the less apprehensive of any personal danger, knowing that the tiger is a very cowardly animal, and seldom makes an open attack; and further that it always prefers attacking a native to a European. We soon reached the nullah and discovered the beautiful beast at the extremity, basking in the sun. Its proportions were prodigious. I have never seen one larger. The nullah was narrow, but at the bottom tolerably free from inequalities, so that the area was more than usually favorable for the operation of the undaunted tiger slayer. As soon as we reached the spot, the man leaped into the hollow, at the same time uttering a shrill cry in order to arouse his enemy from its slumbers. Upon seeing its resolute aggressor slowly advance, the animal raised itself on its fore legs with a terrific howl. As the little Hindoo continued to approach, which he did slowly, and with his dark eyes keenly fixed upon his formidable foe, the tiger rose to its full height, and began to lash its sides furiously with its tail, yet evidently appeared to be in a state of embarrassment. Still the man advanced deliberately but undauntedly; the uneasiness and rage of the excited beast increased with every step; at length it crouched, evidently with a determination to make its terrific spring. The man suddenly stopped, when the tiger paused, turned upon its head, and, uttering a horrible noise, between a snarl and a howl, made one step forward, and sprang towards its victim, who instantly bent his body, received the animal's paws upon his shield, dashed the knife into his body, and fell under, but almost entirely beyond the extremities of his wounded enemy. The creature turned upon its back, the little Hindoo regained his feet in an instant, striking the prostrate tiger with astonishing quickness and precision, a desperate blow upon the throat which completely severed the windpipe, at the same time springing with the quickness of thought, beyond the reach of the monster's claws. The tiger died almost immediately. When told that it was positively past doing any more mischief—for it had done much in its time—we descended into the nullah. The gash in the animal's body was terrific. The lower region of the heart had been wounded, and the intestines cut through. By way of a trophy, the victor deliberately skinned his dead enemy, which he soon accomplished, and with great dexterity, and then returned in the pride of power, with the token of victory upon his shoulders. He obtained from us two or three pagodas, which he considered a most liberal reward of his bravery.—East India Travels.

Close Shooting.

Abram Bass, Esq., of cricketing celebrity whilst practising with other members of the Burton-on-Trent Rifle Club, was one day unexpectedly joined by a bevy of ladies, one of whom requested to see some of Mr. Bass' shooting. A two inch door's eye being placed, four successive shots were fired at 110 yards.—Every shot went through the same hole, a little to the left of the centre without breaking the outer edge of the paper. On another occasion, when lunch had been discussed on the banks of the river Trent, and the black bottles looked as though their occupation was gone, employment was found for them. A wager was laid that the bottles should be re-corked and thrown into the river, seventy yards from the shooter, (Mr. Bass,) and that, while floating, the cork of each of the six bottles should be hit to win; if the body of the bottle was struck, to lose. Every cork was struck. The weapon in this case was a pistol of peculiar construction, with a ten inch rifle barrel.—The staple fixed in the stern of a flat-bottom fishing boat was struck, the first shot, for a wager at 200 yards. A swan was shot through the head at 170 yards, and a hare at 280 yards—all shot dead. A boy was seen angling upwards of 90 yards from the bridge on which Mr. Bass was standing with not less than two score lookers on. A bet was made that Mr. B. would break through the upper part of the fishing rod the boy was using, the first shot. The weapon in this case was the pistol before mentioned.—The shot was made, and the line, with the wholebone mounting, fell from the rod. The boy stood aghast. The wager was won, and handed over to the little fisherman.

Miscellany.

ANTIQUITY OF TARRING AND FEATHERING.—Tarring and feathering, it seems, is a European invention. One of Richard Cœur de Lion's ordinances for seamen was, "that if any man were taken with theft or pickery, and thereof convicted, he should have his head polled, and hot pitch poured upon his pate, and upon that the feathers of some pillow or cushion shaken aloft, that he might thereby be known for a thief, and at the next arrival of ships to land, be put forth of the company to seek his adventures, without all hope of return to his fellows."

A COINCIDENCE.—On the 3rd August, 1492, Columbus sailed from a port in Spain on his memorable voyage, which terminated in the discovery of America. On the 3rd August, 1857, the end of the Atlantic telegraph cable was put ashore at Valentia, and the work of laying it across the ocean commenced. This precisely as annus magnus of 365 years elapsed between taking the first step towards the discovery of the New World, and commencing what we hope is destined to link it indissolubly to the Old, by virtually abolishing the vast space which lies between them.

The New York Herald thinks that it would be disastrous to the cause of civilization, to have the British defeated in India. Our contemporary argues that in many respects such a defeat would prove injurious to the United States, and adds, that were proper means taken, the active sympathy of the latter country could be secured in favor of Great Britain. The proper means alluded to by the Herald are, that England should cede the entire control of this continent and its dependencies to the United States. And if this were done, all the English would gain in return, according to the Herald, would be the privilege of enlisting soldiers in the United States. The British will not require such aid, and the Herald can scarcely be serious in offering it. If the United States can keep the Mormons and Indians in proper order, to say nothing of Plug-Uglies, Dead Rabbits, and other infernal enemies, it will be quite as much as they can do for some time.

THE ROOSTER'S OPINION.—Quite an amusing occurrence happened in the police Court this morning, says the Lowell News. A case was to come up concerning the disputed ownership of a certain rooster, and the bird was in court awaiting the result. Previous to hearing the case another was tried; and just as his Honor gave the decision, the cock set up a loud and prolonged crow. This unexpected endorsement of the Judge brought down the house, and even his honor was compelled to join in the general laughter. An order was given, however, for the removal of the bird, as the Court was unwilling to have all the defeated parties thus "crowed over."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Coughs, colds, influenza, and asthmatic affections are always more or less associated with irregularities of the secretions. The stomach, the bowels, and the liver, connot be in a healthy condition while the lungs and the air passages leading to them are obstructed, and in all diseases of the respiratory organs the effect of these Pills is highly salutary. As an outward application for sore throat, croup, asthma, and bronchitis, Holloway's Ointment is in valuable. It soon relieves the irritation of mucous membrane of the trachea and the bronchial tubes, and removes that choking sensation so alarming in croup and asthma.

A DROWSY DAMSEL.—The Rockville (Ind.) Republican tells the most extraordinary robbery story that we ever heard. It says that some fellow entered the house of Mr. Jesse Wright, of that (Parke) county, and robbed the room of Mr. W.'s daughter, who was sleeping in her bed. After plundering as much as he could, he proceeded very coolly to steal the ear-rings out of the ears of the drowsy damsel. These pulled the rings off her fingers, and thinking still that he hadn't made the robbery complete, he cut all the hair off one side of her head. And he accomplished it all without waking the girl.

Bogus watches are now on sale at the various Railway depots in Toronto. We would advise travellers, from this section of country, against dealing with those engaged in the Jeweling business at these places.—Sometimes they endeavor to make a sale; but failing in desire to effect a loan and leave the watch in security. The whole thing is a swindle; and we make mention of the fact to put people on their guard.

POWER OF MODERN FIRE ARMS.—Some soldiers, who were lately firing a Minie Rifle at a target at Magdeburg, Saxony, at a distance of 1,000 paces, hit and mortally wounded a laborer at work 700 paces beyond, or 1,700 paces in all. A pace is 2½ feet. A sheep was accidentally killed in England with the Enfield rifle from a distance of 2,500 yards, or nearly one mile.

A gentleman at a musical party, where the lady was very particular not to have the concord of sweet sounds interrupted, was freezing under the performance of a long concerted piece, seeing that the fire was going out, asked a friend in a whisper, "How he should stir the fire without interrupting the music?"—"Between the bars," replied the friend.

In Marion County, Ohio, recently, one man used another for the rent of a house. On the trial, evidence was adduced that the house was haunted, and the jury decided that the defendant be paid $15 as damages, instead of paying rent.

NOT TOO GOOD A JOKE.—A young fellow in Connerville, O., by way of a joke, rigged himself up as a fugitive slave, and called upon a number of his young lady acquaintances. In going the rounds, a U. S. Marshall took him in charge and examined him before a Commissioner. A little water secured his release.

A CONTRARY WIND.—"How changeable the wind is," said Mrs. Partington, upon her return from a walk in Boston. "It is the changeablest thing I ever did see. When I went up to Washington street, it was blowin' in my face; and when I turned to go down don't you think it went blowin' on my back?"

Two friends meeting after an absence of some years, during which time the one had increased considerably in bulk and the other still resembled only effigy of a man, "—said the stout gentleman, "Why Dick, you look as if you had not had a dinner since I saw you last."—"And you," replied the other, look as if you had been at dinner ever since.

AN ODD CUSTOM.—In France, during the reign of Henry III., sugar-plums were considered as requisites which no lady or gentleman could dispense with. Every one carried his box of sugar-plums in his pocket as he does now his snuff-box. It is related in the history of the Duke of Guise, when he was killed at Blois, he had his comfit box in his hand. Small comfort indeed for a dead man.

FLATTERY is a much more difficult weapon to wield than many imagine. It it like a flail, which, if awkwardly used, may instead of hitting the ears of corn, box your own.

Halifax, August 26.

The America arrived at half past one, A. M. She passed the Persia, outward bound, on the 23rd. The North American, from Quebec, arrived out on the 24th.

THE ATLANTIC CABLE.—The British steamer Cyclops had returned to Valatia, with Mr. Field on board. That gentleman immediately repaired to London to confer with the Directors, and telegraphed from London on Saturday as follows:—Her Majesty's steamer Leopard arrived at Portsmouth on Friday evening, and reports that the Atlantic cable was lost at a quarter before 4 o'clock on Tuesday morning, the 11th instant, after having paid out successfully 335 nautical miles of it. 100 miles of it was laid in water over two miles in depth, and the greater part of this while going at the rate of rather more than five miles an hour. At that time there was a heavy swell. The Niagara was going at the rate of four knots per hour, and as the engineer found that the cable was running out in too great a proportion to the speed of the ship, he considered it necessary to direct the brakes to be applied more firmly, when the cable parted, some distance from the ship. The Agamemnon, Niagara, and Susquehanna will remain a short time where the cable parted, to try some experiments in the deep water in that part of the Atlantic, which it is considered, will be of great value to the telegraph company, and then all go to Plymouth England."

The experience now obtained must be of great value to the company, and it is understood that the Directors will decide whether to have more cable made, and try again immediately after the equinoctial gales, or wait till another summer. The impression prevails at Liverpool that another trial will take place in October.

Vancouver's Island.

The London correspondent of the New York Times, who writes under date Aug. 7, says:

The recommendation of the Hudson's Bay Committee, that Vancouver's island should be detached from the possession of the Hudson's Bay Company and be constituted a separate colony, invests with additional interest the despatches relating to the establishment of a Representative Assembly at that settlement, which have been laid before the House of Commons on motion of Mr. Labouchere. The plan was carried out twenty months ago, and as such a region would not seem to be very congenial to the growth of such an institution, a glance at its progress may not be uninteresting.

Gov. Douglas received the instructions of Secretary Labouchere with evident misgivings; possessing a very slender knowledge of legislation, without legal advice or intelligent aid of any kind, he confesses that he contemplated the project with dismay, and approached it with diffidence. He called together his Council, however, and it was resolved to divide the island into three electoral districts, to restrict the franchise to freeholders, and to require from members the qualification of freehold estate worth not less than £300. He anticipated a difficulty in finding properly qualified representatives, and was very much afraid that the early attempts of the Assembly would make a very sorry figure in the history of constitutional Government. The result, however, does not appear to have been so bad as he anticipated. The elections were to take a number that the returns were mere nominations in all the districts except Victoria, where the contest was strictly maintained by no fewer than five rival candidates.

The House met on the 12th of August; all the (seven) members present. A long speech was delivered by the Governor, the chief features being the pending negotiations with the Government of the United States, for the extension of the Reciprocity Treaty to Vancouver's Island, and the necessity of "ways and means" and then the House proceeded to elect a Speaker. But then a hitch arose; three elections were objected to, and the remaining members were not sufficient to constitute a Committee of Inquiry. How this dilemma was got over does not appear; probably one of the petitions, said to have been got up for party purposes, was withdrawn. The Governor states, that, "after repeated adjournments, the Speaker, with much tact and address, finally succeeded, without his interference, in adjusting party differences, and forming a Committee." The result was that one of the elections was set aside, the party elected not having sufficient property to qualify him to sit. This difficulty removed, the House occupied itself with matters of detail connected with the expenditure and financial condition of the colony. Among the addresses for returns was one for a correct copy of the Grant of Vancouver's Island, and of any other documents of a public nature calculated to throw light upon the political position of Vancouver's Island.—The documents obtained were the charter granting the island to the Hudson's Bay Company, correspondence between the Colonial Office and the Company, and between the Governor and the Company, and an official circular relating to the colonization of the island. These proceedings show that the newly-fledged legislators of Vancouver's Island are fully alive to the interests of their constituents, as is shown also in the attention paid by them to financial matters, though the apparent necessity of increased taxation is stated by the Governor to be far from popular.

Brutality to Indians.

The New York Tribune says a new partisan journal issued at Columbus, Ohio, gives the following account of the origin of our two latest Indian troubles:

"In regard to the origin of the affair at Spirit Lake, we have the following from a reliable source. The son of a Chief, with a band of seventeen warriors, had a misunderstanding with the main body of their nation. Owing to this domestic quarrel, they did not plant corn last summer on their reserve, and the agent made this a pretext for withholding their annuities last fall. It is not known what the agent did with it, but the Indians did not get it. Early in the spring this poor starved band came near the settlement, and a dog fell upon them, which in self-defence they killed. For this, they were deprived of their arms, severely beaten, and driven away by the settlers.

"Last winter, it is well known, was unusually severe, and the game scarce. These poor, starving Indians had no alternative but to perish or steal. Is it surprising that in their extremity they chose the latter? When this was known the civilized whites formed a company, armed, pursued these poor outcasts, and shot down several of them. This provoked and drove them to desperation, and resulted in the burnings and massacres that followed.

"The history of the case on the Plains as we gather it from the public press, is simply this: Last fall, the mail-carrier, a few miles from Fort Laramie, was fired upon. He returned to the Fort, reporting an attack from the Indians. Forthwith a company of dragoons were on their horses, and soon came to an encampment. They fired and killed eleven Indians, burned their camp, captured twenty ponies and returned to the Fort. The Indians that escaped this murderous outrage, being desperate, soon after fell upon a party of emigrants, took their teams, and captured two women and killed several men. Thus commenced the Cheyenne war, which, as it appears by late accounts, is not yet ended.

"Early this summer, Col. Sumner went after this tribe. He divided his force into two companies, many miles apart, and the Indians out-generaled him by getting between the two divisions; and while he was seeking to destroy them, they destroyed Babbitt and his party."

The Great Eastern.

By the last mail we learn that the Mammoth Steamer Great Eastern is confidently expected to make her first trip across the Atlantic about the first week in April next. She will, previously, make an experimental trip to Lisbon, or Gibraltar,—or, perhaps, as far as the Western Islands. "It is said that literary and scientific celebrities from various foreign countries, will be invited to join in her experimental trip. The route to be taken by the tourists, coming by the Great Eastern, is said to be as follows:—Having stayed for a short period in Portland, the tourists proceed by the Grand Trunk to Quebec, thence to Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Cobourg, Toronto, Hamilton, Windsor, Detroit, and Chicago. The latter city, will, it is understood be the western limit of the tourists' tickets. From thence the route lies through the cities of St. Louis, Mississippi, Cincinnati, Columbus, Cleveland and Buffalo,—thence through Niagara, New York, Boston, and back again, to the starting point. Sufficient time is allowed to view the cities and visit all the places of interest along the route; and in order to facilitate the travellers in their "sight seeing" a "Great Eastern Tourists' Hand-book," at present in preparation by a gentleman of literary eminence, will be obtainable by them. The price of a first class ticket for this excursion, of over 9000 miles, will be but £56; and this ticket covers all the locomotive expense, and also that of a first-rate table crossing and recrossing the Atlantic. In second-class tourists' tickets there will be a difference of about £13, for the passage across the Atlantic. The holders of the second tickets exit either return to England on the second return voyage of the Great Eastern from Portland, which will be in about five weeks after her arrival there, or spend some nine weeks longer in travelling on this continent, and then leave for England in the third return voyage."

Challenge to England.

The "Savannah Georgian" is authorized by responsible gentlemen, to the following challenge—which is open to the world:—

To run a match race of four miles and repeat, at such time as may be agreed upon, post entries for $100,000 a side, the horses to carry weight for age, to be run over the Fonthill Course at that place. The "Georgian" saddle.

"In order to induce our English friends to accept this banter, we are authorized to say further, that in the event they should do so, and lose the race, five per cent upon the money staked, or in other words, $5,000 will be allowed them to pay the expenses of their horses.

"The course at this place is considered by racing men and those competent to judge, one among, if not the best turf in the United States, and its position is so easy of access that if this offer shall be accepted, a concourse of people may be expected to gather here which shall far outnumber any assemblage ever witnessed on a similar occasion in this country.

"The gentlemen by whose authority this challenge is published are all men of respectability and wealth, and the money is ready to be covered by a similar amount from England or elsewhere."

RUMORED SUICIDE OF MISS MADELINE SMITH.—A correspondent has been furnished with the following extract of a letter dated at Ballock, Scotland, July 15. Balloch is a small place eight miles from the residence of Miss Smith's father, and 20 miles from Glasgow. The person to whom the letter is addressed lived on the next farm to that belonging to Mr. Smith, and was intimately acquainted with the family. The intelligence might not have reached London in time for the last steamer, as there is no daily paper published in Glasgow. It is possible the rumor may be true. We give it for what it is worth:—

"Balloch, Sabbath evening, July 27, 1857.

"Miss Smith went to her father's house the day she got out of jail. It is the next house to the one you sold to Mr. Conel. She passed Dumbarten toll bar in a carriage, with her father and another person, at 11 o'clock at night, on the day of the rumor that she has drowned herself. £2,000 has been raised by the Glasgow merchants, and presented to her father, to pay the expenses of the trial.—Buffalo Courier.

LORD NAPIER has accepted an invitation to be present at the United States Agricultural Society's Fair at Louisville, Kentucky, September 1st, which promises to be on even a more magnificent scale than the one at Philadelphia last year. Mr. Leonard Wray expects to be there with the new sugar plants, sorghum and imphee, to make sugar and syrup each day of the Fair. The awards of the Syracuse Reaper trial will be announced, and the great national trial of ploughs, cultivators, threshing machines, steam ploughs, and all other agricultural implements will be made. The citizens of Louisville have guaranteed $30,000 to cover all expenses, and our Kentucky exchanges anticipate a grand time. The occasion is an important one, and will call together an immense crowd, beyond doubt.

The Maple Leaf.

SANDWICH, SEPTEMBER 3, 1857.

After leaving Maidstone, with anything but kindly feelings for the roads we had passed through, we crossed the new bridge over Belle River—a good substantial structure, which has been erected within a couple of years; this bridge is certainly a credit to the two Townships of Maidstone and Rochester, of which it is the highway uniting them, the river being the dividing line between the two, which brought us into the thriving village of Belle River, only a few years past a dense forest, but now showing every sign of life and activity.—The large saw and grist mills in operation, deprives it of its otherwise rustic appearance, and the shrill whistle of the locomotive, as it drive up to the station, makes one forget that he is far away in the woods. Having refreshed the inner man at Stowe's Hotel which, by the way, is no mean establishment, and we were rather agreeably surprised to find such good fare laid out, or so well got up. Passing through the Township of Rochester, we found the roads in a far better condition than in the former township. This may be, from there being less roads to improve than in the other; but we are inclined to believe that more attention is paid to the highways, for they had the appearance of having been oftener attended to and repaired.

The inhabitants of this township labour under a great disadvantage from the lack of drainage that exists. It is every wet in most parts, and as a consequence, the crops are very uncertain; and, although there is plenty of fall, yet from its not being thickly settled, it would be impossible for individuals to drain their lands sufficiently to be of any great benefit. This could be effected with any perceptible advantage, would have to be undertaken by the Municipality, and a number of tap drains dug, from the Middle Road to the Lake, where there is a great fall. An undertaking of this kind, done this and properly carried out, would have the effect of making Rochester one of the best Townships in the County, for no soil can surpass theirs in fertility, and would be capable of producing any crop that is usually grown in this section of the country, and that almost exclusively. The great length of drain required will always, for many years to come, prevent the possibility of individual farmers reclaiming the beautiful lands that now remain unoccupied, except by the stately giants of the forest, from their virgin state. These lands, if once drained, would soon become settled upon, and a large and prosperous class of people would soon be added to the community, and those few that are now striving hard to work their way through the world against so great a disadvantage, would find that a new life had opened out to them, and that the many years of toil that they had spent, would yet in their old age return them golden harvests.

As we were travelling along, and thinking upon the change that would certainly follow a thorough system of drainage in this township, we commenced a calculation of what the cost would be, the result of which we will give, although when practically applied, there might be a slight difference between it and the real cost, yet we are inclined to think that we are not far from the mark.

It would require at least four large drains, say eight feet wide at top and from three to four feet deep, to commence at the Middle Road and run to the lake, a distance of six miles. These drains should be opened upon some of the concession lines, and they would then serve the double purpose of making a good road, as well as draining the land. These drains would run in length somewhere in the neighborhood of twenty four miles, which, at $330 per mile, would require $8000 to drain the Township. This estimate, we think, would fully cover the whole expenditure; and we have no doubt that the cost would be somewhat less than we have given. It will then be seen, that there is no great difficulty after all in the way of rendering this Township dry, and a first-rate agricultural one, and at a cost that is not great, in proportion to the benefit that would be derived. The only question then would be, how the money should be raised, whether by direct taxation or by loan. We should say most decidedly by the latter means; although, in the present state of the money market, it would be hardly advisable to attempt to effect a loan at this time; but we have no doubt that in another year the times will have somewhat changed, when they might obtain the money on favorable terms.

The great benefit to the Township, which these drains would give, must be apparent to every one, and more particularly to the inhabitants; and we hope the day is not far distant, when we shall have it in our power to chronicle the accomplishment of this enterprise, which would be one of the greatest undertakings that could be gone into for the advancement and prosperity of this Municipality.

The next Township through which we passed, was West Tilbury. In this, most of the settlers are upon the Middle Road; there are consequently few Roads to keep in repair. In relation to the drainage of this Township, the same remarks that have already been made of the Township of Rochester, will apply to this, although a much less amount will drain the back part of the Township. The drainage of this Township might be effected with far less difficulty, with the exception of the front marsh.

The farms upon the Middle Road have been greatly improved within a few years. Lots that a few years past were covered with a dense forest, are now producing rich fields of corn. There is not perhaps another Township in the County where the crops generally look better than in Tilbury; and with all the disadvantages of being a great distance from market, the farms all look prosperous and thriving, and the buildings all indicate a superior class of settlers.

One cannot help being struck with the many signs of improvement that everywhere meets the eye, upon the whole length of the Middle Road, from Maidstone Cross outwards. It is only a few years past, when hardly a house could be seen along this street, where well tilled farms and good farm houses have now taken the place of the old log huts.

From the Cross, in going down the Sandwich Street, we felt highly pleased with the new gravel road that is being built by Mr. Thornton, for the Sandwich Street Plank Road Company. This road, when completed, will extend five miles below the Cross, and will be a credit to one of the best roads of that description in the Province. It is as smooth and level as a floor. The section of country through which this road passes, is commonly known as the Ridge, and is justly celebrated for forming purposes, being high and dry. The number of new houses and barns being built, indicate a prosperous state of things.

Cricket.

The return match of the "Prince Albert Club" of Sandwich, and the "Victoria Club" of Windsor, came off on Thursday last, upon the Sandwich ground. These two clubs, it will be remembered, are composed of the juvenile cricketers of each place, and the former club having been beaten by their opponents, determined to give them another trial. They accordingly met on Thursday last for that purpose, and after the preliminaries had been got through with, the Prince Albert Club took the first innings. The result will be given below.

It is necessary to say a word or two in relation to the difference that exists between the two clubs. The "Prince Albert" is composed of very small boys, compared to the "Victoria" club, who are nearly all young men grown; and of course there was a great disparity between the two.—Some of the players in the latter club, from the manner in which they handled the bat, showed clearly that there was no chance for their younger, but plucky, opponents, who stood manfully up to the scratch, and made a very fair score. And although the Victoria club has again been victorious, there is but little glory in the victory, from the great difference in the size of the players.

The "Prince Albert," though beaten, are not conquered, and intend to give the "Victoria" club another trial, when they are determined to give them a tight run, and wipe off old scores.

There only remained 14 to be made by "Victoria" Club, which were easily run by Rankin and Trow, without losing their bats

All Saint's Church, Windsor, will be opened with appropriate ceremonies on Thursday next, the 10th, inst.

Morning Prayer will be said at 8 o'clock, A. M. and the Holy Communion administered. There will be a procession of the Sunday School children, the Clergy, and the Free Masons of Windsor, at 2½ o'clock, from the old Council Chamber to the Church. Service will commence at three o'clock, with a sermon by the Rev. J. G. Geddes, Rector of Hamilton.

In the evening there will be a concert of Sacred Music, by Amateurs from Detroit, Sandwich and Windsor, for the benefit of the Building Fund. Admission 25 cents.

☞ The Thief who has been in the habit of robbing a certain potatoe field, upon the "Hands Farm" is known and if he does not hereafter keep his hands from picking and stealing, we will first be under the necessity of publishing his name, and then by way of finishing off, hand him over to be dealt with according to law.

Major General Wyndham, the hero of the Redan, has accepted an important command in India, and will proceed to the East as soon as possible.

Judge Draper, together with the Quebec and Kingston Delegates on the Seat of Government Question, returned to this country from England, in the Anglo Saxon, which arrived at Quebec on the 23rd.

CROPS IN LOWER CANADA.—We have the most satisfactory reports from nearly all parts of the country regarding the coming harvest, which bids fair to be one of the most abundant which the country has ever seen. Hay in some parts is extremely thin, while in others it is reported to be quite the contrary. During the past few days we have had warm genial weather, and several descriptions of grain are now ready for the scythe.

The Montreal Argus gives currency to a rumour that the Governor General will return by the next Canadian steamer. His stay in England, if the report be well founded, has probably been shortened by events in the East Indies, rendering the recall of the Administrator of the Government Sir W. Eyre, for the purpose of despatching him to the seat of war, desirable.

The Mayor of Brantford has received a communication from C. B. Bridges, Esq., intimating that it is the intention of the Directors of the Great Western Railway Company to carry all stock and implements bona fide intended for exhibition at half price, and that the fares for passengers will be one fare and a half for the double journey, that is, return tickets will be issued at all stations to and from Paris at a reduction of 25 per cent, from the ordinary fare.

The Montreal Gazette states that a day or two since a man named Hughes of that city performed the extraordinary feat of making the ascent of the Lachine rapids, by means of a boat propelled by a pole. Having reached the head of the rapids he descended them in the same boat, which was only six inches above the water, and found it necessary to make for the shore to empty his boat, when he reached the fort.

The Kingston News states that on Monday at two o'clock a sergeant and eight men of the 9th regiment, forming the Garrison gaurd, deserted from their posts by means of a boat lying at the Queen's wharf. One of them belonged to the band, and was at the time under arrest for a military offence but he managed to escape the vigilance of his guard. Before the deserters left they scuttled all the officers' boats lying at the wharf, by punching their bayonets through the bottom; the Adjutant's boat bore no mean marks of their distinguished regard. A sergeant's boat was uninjured. They took with them five stand of arms and ammunition.

SUSPENSION OF JAMES L. LYELL.—We regret to announce the temporary suspension of James L. Lyell, Banker, of this city. His doors were closed shortly after noon today. Mr. Lyell is in New York and sent a dispatch to Col. Anderson this forenoon ordering the doors to be closed. Of course, until he returns, no explanation can be given of the state of his affairs. It is only known that it grows out of the failure of the Ohio Life and Trust Co., of which institution he was a large correspondent.

We think from all our inquiries, that we are perfectly correct in assuring our readers that the depositors, that they are perfectly safe and need have no fears as to the ultimate result. He has undoubtedly closed temporarily to protect himself and his depositors.

This does not, as far as we know, affect any other house in this city. We advise people to keep cool, as this will blow over without doubt, and everything go on as usual.—Tribune.

ACCIDENT TO EX-POSTMASTER BRODHEAD.—We learn that a severe accident happened to Col. Brodhead day before yesterday in the afternoon, at Grosse Isle. He was training a skittish horse, and in endeavoring to dismount, the horse plunged forward, throwing him off. He struck on his right shoulder, dislocating it, and breaking his arm besides.

Surgical aid could not be procured for some hours, and was finally obtained from Malden. It must be some time before he recovers from the severe accident.—Tribune.

A mass meeting was held in the Park, New York, to raise subscriptions for Walker's destitute and debilitated filibusters.—The mass consisted of but a few persons:—and the sympathy amounted to but eleven dollars. Another meeting was to be held; but it is evident sickness and destitution have little effect upon the New Yorkers. If the fellows had been well, and had good prospects of murdering a lot of Costa Ricans, dollars and sympathy would have been abundant.

There is an old squaw among the encampment of Oneida Indians at Saratoga, who is aged 109 years, and named Honoria Dacothaner. She was born at Onelda Castle in 1748. Her husband fell at the battle of Saratoga in 1777, and her three sons at Lundy's Lane and Chippewa in 1814.

A curious case of human petrefaction recently came to light near Eaton Ohio, where the body of a woman, on being removed for reinterment was found to have changed into solid limestone, preserving a remarkable fullness and plumpness as of life. The weight of the body was estimated at about 600 pounds.

BUFFALO Aug. 31.

The Hollister Bank closed its doors this morning. There has been a heavy run on some other city banks, but it has resulted in no danger to them as yet. The excitement has been intense during the forenoon, but has almost entirely subsided.

Violent Storm!

THE DESJARDINS SUSPENSION BRIDGE BLOWN AWAY!!

Shortly after five o'clock on Friday after noon, it became evident to the citizens of Hamilton that a storm was on its way to that city. The wind blew freshly from the south-west for a short time, and darkness overhung the city—the lightning flashed, and the thunder rolled. The wind increased in fury, and, for a few minutes, played about like a hurricane—rooting up trees, and lavishing sign-boards—Roman fashion—in torrents.

The frail structure over the Desjardins Canal, at some 240 feet above the water, was exposed to the full fury of the storm, and in an instant was hurled down the yawning banks of the deep cut, a perfect wreck. Only one person witnessed the catastrophe; he states that the fastenings from below first gave way, by which the whole platform of the bridge was rendered erratic; the middle portion was lifted up and turned topsy-turvy, and now the whole strain on the towers was lateral, instead of vertical. Shortly after, one went by the board—one falling over on the other. The only remaining portion is one of the cables, which swings across the broad chasm—a sad remnant of a very wretched structure. This bridge was built by the Railroad Company, at the same time the Canal was cut through the heights, and afforded the only communication, by the common highway, between the north eastern townships and the city of Hamilton. It has ever been a source of condemnation with the Railroad and Canal Companies—the latter having steadily refused to accept the bridge at the hands of the former. A law suit was contemplated to settle the point in dispute, but now, we suppose, the pleadings will have to be amended to suit.

For some time, a person has been in charge, to prevent more than one team going on at once. No one was on it at the period fatal to its existence, and the only life sacrificed was that of a poor dog. It has been frequently presented by Grand Juries, and condemned by engineers as insufficient. Its destruction was looked upon as inevitable; and now that it has occurred, there is cause to be thankful it did not occasion the loss of human life. Singular enough, this casualty occurred when the engineer who constructed it (Mr. Griffiths) happened to be in the city. He immediately repaired to the spot, and witnessed the wreck of his work, as did Mr. Clarke on the 12th of March last, when the swing bridge broke, by which so many persons perished. Each of them were accidentally within hail on both occasions.—Globe.

Great Flood at Brampton.

The Brampton Times, Extra, of Friday evening gives the following account of a great flood at that place:—

IMMENSE FALL OF RAIN—BRAMPTON FLOODED.—Last night such an immense fall of rain took place, that, early this morning, the River Etobicoke rushed down with fearful velocity, and so overspread its banks, that the greater portion of Brampton was flooded. Through the railway bridges the water rushed into the principal streets, which were soon like rapid rivers. The water in several places in the village was above five feet deep. It went in at the windows of some houses. The damage done is considerable. The planks and sidewalks of some of the stores have been torn up, and small bridges in the neighborhood carried away. One house has been thrown on one side by the violence of the torrent. Business has been entirely suspended. The flood is now decreasing rapidly; so, by tomorrow, we expect Brampton will assume its usual appearance. It is acknowledged by all that this very unexpected immersion of our village is the worst yet experienced.

In consequence of our office having been like many others, injured by the flood, we will be unable to publish the Weekly Times until Monday next.

MAYOR HYDE TURNING BARBER.—Our worthy Mayor, during his passage from Saginaw, on the Forest Queen, was unexpectedly installed into a new office, to the duties of which he was found competent, although taken by surprise at first.

His honor having risen early and performed his ablutions, sat himself down en dishabille, in the barber's shop, to enjoy the delicious morning air blowing off Lake Huron, when a "nice young man," an unbeliever, with quite a scientific touch, concluding with a graceful bow and enquiring "can anything more be done to serve you?"

No further want occurring, the customary six pence was tendered and accepted duly, with a hint as to future patronage.

The "nice" boy shortly after the barber was, and altho' fully appreciating the "stuff," got out of the scrape gracefully, as only a good specimen of Young America knows how.—Tribune.

THE SIAMESE TWINS OUTDONE.—One of those remarkable malformations occasionally met with, both among the higher and lower orders of the animal creation, presented itself a few days since in the practice of one of the physicians of this village. It was a child having two perfectly distinct heads, developed equally as regards size and shape, which are united to a single body, each by its neck. The shoulders are broader than natural, but in other respects the body is not unlike that of other children at birth; it has but two arms and two legs.—An internal examination was made (as it was dead born), which exhibited a most singular arrangement of the organs contained in the chest and abdomen. Two perfect and entire spinal columns were formed; both had the usual number of ribs, viz; twenty-four, making forty-eight in all. The middle or internal sets of ribs were united together, so that the entire chest constituted but a single cavity, containing four lungs, the middle pair being united. Two windpipes led to the lungs. One heart circulated all the blood to this strange body. Two food pipes led to a single stomach, and except that is had but one kidney, the right, the abdominal viscera were single and natural.—Sing Sing Republican, Aug. 20.

TORONTO, Sept. 1, 1857.

As is usually the case of this day of the week, the attendance of farmers in the market was very small, the greater part of them being engaged in harvesting spring crops. About 500 bushels of wheat were offered, and found slow sale at from 5s 6d to 6s 3d for new, and 6s 6d for old wheat. The demand is light and the market far from being buoyant.

FLOUR—There is no change observable in the flour market, except that prices are hardly so firm in anticipation of increased supplies. We quote superfine at $6 25@ $6 50. Fancy at $7 25 @ $7 50. Extra $8 @ $8 50 per barrel.

TRADE PROSPECTS.—The New York Courier of Tuesday, in viewing the reported decline in Breadstuffs in England says:—

We look upon every concession in the price of Grain as favorable, not to our own market but to the Money Markets of the world. If Flour were a dollar a barrel cheaper thirty days hence in Europe, it would be better for us and Europe too. One of the greatest misfortunes at any time, and especially in a time of war or commotion, is a short crop of Grain, and consequent high prices of Breadstuffs.

There are the strongest indications of commercial prosperity throughout the whole country. Productions more than keeps pace with demand; showing that without extraordinary efforts, the West and South can at a short notice meet any unusual demand abroad for Breadstuffs or Cotton. That we can export about $35,000,000 in gold (from two ports) in less than thirty five weeks, without any actual disturbance in the money market, is a strong proof of the strength of the resources of the country, present and prospective.

The following dispatch, taken from the London Times of the 15th, gives a brief account of the breaking of the Atlantic Telegraph cable:—

Plymouth, Aug. 14th, (evening)

The United States steam frigates Niagara, Susquehannah and Her Majesty's screw steamship Agamemnon, entered the sound this morning on their return from their unsuccessful attempt to lay the telegraph cable. On board of the Niagara they report that at the time of the severance the wind was southerly, there was some sea, and the ship was going from three to four knots, and the cable paying out from five to six, and sometimes seven knots. As the quantity of slack thus expended was greater than expected at starting, and more than could be afforded, the strain was therefore increased to a pressure of 3,000 pounds, and the cable broke. The extra expenditure of slack commenced on Monday evening, when a strong breeze and heavy sea prevailed, and a powerful under-current was experienced. This current forced the wire from the ship at a considerable angle, when the break was applied with increased power. The stern of the Niagara was down in the trough of the sea, and the extra strain created by her rising was the immediate cause of the cable parting. The Niagara has gone into Damoness. The general opinion is that the season is too far advanced for another effort now. The Niagara is considered too heavy for the purpose. It is stated that the wheels ceased to revolve when the pressure was applied on Tuesday morning.

SUBMERGED WHEEL.—Mr. Elihu Spencer of this town, has just secured a patent for a submerged wheel, which many think will be of vast importance to the country. The wheel is intended to give power to propel machinery on steamers otherwise useless for that purpose unless at much expense. On all streams running at the rate of from three or four miles an hour, Mr. Spencer's wheel can be worked without the necessity of constructing dams. The wheel is so constructed as to regulate its own velocity and power by atmospheric governors. It is simple in construction, and very durable; it runs on a vertical shaft, which can be carried up through the building to any height. The buckets of the wheel partly revolve round their arms, and this motion is so regulated by their running over a circle round the axis of the wheel, the position of the buckets, when the wheel is in motion, are for one half of the revolution, as right angles to it. The wheel has been tested before several practical gentlemen, who speak very highly of the invention, and we trust Mr. Spencer will speedily reap the reward of his toil, ingenuity and expense, by demands for the use of his patent.—Brockville Recorder.

A TOAD IN A BOY'S STOMACH.—On Thursday a boy, nine years of age, named Jonathan Mickelthwaite, son of William Mickelthwaite, farm laborer, Alverthorpe, near Wakefield, parted with a toad. The reptile, which was alive, was put into a basin of water, and was since become much swollen.—Its body became about three and a half inches long, two broad, and in color is dark brown streaked with black. The boy for some weeks past has been worn almost to a skeleton, and perfectly ravenous in regard to food, constantly eating, and never seeming satisfied. The medical attendant of the family says the boy must have swallowed the toad in the spawn.

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature.

The Laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of share -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years -	96.
Total - - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.

And for three years - - 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each share.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

The Curculio.

This insect is one of the most troublesome enemies with which the fruit grower has to contend. It is sometimes known by the appellation of the gum moth, and ordinarily commences his attacks upon the plum tree early in the spring. Its appearance, however, depends in a great measure upon circumstances. Its eggs are deposited in the embryo fruit, and may be easily destroyed by a preparation formed of one bushel of wood ashes, one quart of soot, and half a pound of sulphur. The most favorable time for applying this is in the morning, when the foliage is wet with dew. The quantity applied should be sufficient completely to cover the leaves, limbs and fruit. The application rarely, when properly made, fails to destroy the insects, though they are extremely shy in their habits, and are not easily got rid of by any other means.

In isolated positions and in places surrounded by salt marshes, the smooth-skinned fruits are usually prolific, and seldom subject to disease. This exemption is frequently experienced in cities and towns on the seaboard, and it has been remarked that trees growing in the vicinity of salt water—especially if near it—are rarely, if ever, attacked by the gum moth. On the contrary, the plum, the nectarine, the apricot, &c., fruits which are invariably infested by it in interior localities, and in open and exposed situations, are rarely injured by it when so situated as to enjoy the sea breezes, or the spray of the ocean during storms.

As a general thing, the curculio, though it will attack most fruits, seems to have a peculiar penchant or preference for those which are smooth and thin-skinned. Few of these escape its ravages. The various descriptions of the cherry, though to a limited degree obnoxious to its depredations, if growing in exposed situations, frequently escape. This exemption has been attributed by promologists to the superior hardness of the skin of that fruit, but I am inclined to think it is indebted for its escape to other causes. The farmer and gardener who devote a part of their time to the cultivation of stone fruit, often tell us that their choicest selections fail, cast their fruit prematurely, and, indeed, seldom if ever fully remunerate them for the labor and expense involved in their cultivation. For this they are unable ofitmes to assign any adequate cause; and yet it is the result of the injuries inflicted by the curculio, and one of the surest indications of its presence. The small minute egg, which by means of a nidus prepared by a small puncture, deposited in the soft palaceous substance of the incipient fruit, becomes in time a worm, which eats its way to the stone and causes the fruit to drop. Immediately upon this result, the worm forsakes its former nidus, prepared for it by its parent, and seeks a lodgment in the soil, and early the next spring, about the time the fruit becomes visible on the bough, it emerges from its terrene bed a winged insect, and endued with the social instincts, and prepared to pursue the same round of action as that pursued by its parent of the year before. Although furnished with wings, it is seldom seen to use them—ascending to the scene of its depredations generally on the bark of its trunk—but not rarely trusting itself to the air when it once exercise or find use for its legs. It is frequently the case that on examining the fruit of a tree infested by the curculio, every plum or cherry will be found to have a small puncture on its surface which indicates the position of an egg. The motions of this insect are surprisingly quick and agile, and it is only by the most exact and persevering attention, that one is able to discover them; they seem to have been endowed by nature with an instinct which teaches them to shun the human face and to secrete themselves at his approach. Dr. Gage remarks that he had a tree of the "Prince's Imperial Gage Plum," a variety, although the most productive of its class, that could never be made to produce a crop of fruit on account of the injuries produced by the curculio. He however adopted the following method, and finally succeeded in securing a crop of fruit. Early in the spring, or about the period of efflorescence, he deposited near the tree a hen-coop, containing an early brood of chickens. After the insects had emerged from the soil and before they were able to ascend the tree, every one of them was taken up and destroyed by the brood.

The most effectual method of warding off the attacks of this troublesome insect, is by showering the mixture above named over the foliage, and permitting hens to run among the trees. If this course is adopted, and the soil about the trunks thoroughly, and frequently irrigated with a solution of salt and water, valuable fruit may be raised in any and every section, and without fear of the curculio.

The Horse Charm, or the great Secret for Taming Horses.

The horse castor is a wart, or exerescence, which grows on every horse's fore legs, and generally on the hind legs. It has a peculiar rank, musty smell, and easily pulled off. The ammoniacal effluvia of the horse seems peculiarly to concentrate in this part, and its very strong odour has a great attraction for all animals, especially canins, and the horse himself.

For the oil of cumin, the horse has an instinctive passion—both are original natives of Arabia, and when the horse scents the odor, he is instinctively drawn toward it.

The oil of Rhodium possesses peculiar properties. All animals seem to cherish a fondness for it, and it exercises a kind of subduing influence over them.

The directions given for taming horses are as follows:—

Procure some horse-castor, and grate it fine; also get some oil of Rhodium and oil of cumin, and keep the three separate in air-tight bottles.

Rub a little oil of cumin upon your hand; and approach the horse in the field, on the windward side, so that he can smell the cumin. The horse will let you come up to him then without trouble.

Immediately rub your hand gently on the horse's nose, getting a little of the oil on it. You can then lead him anywhere. Give him a little of the castor on a piece of loaf sugar, apple or potatoe.

Put 8 drops of oil of Rhodium into a lady's silver thimble. Take the thimble between the thumb and middle finger of your right hand, with the fore-finger stopping the mouth of the thimble, to prevent the oil from running out whilst you are opening the mouth of the horse.

As soon as you have opened the horse's mouth, tip the thimble over upon his tongue and he is your servant. He will follow you like a pet dog.

Ride fearless and promptly, with your knees pressed to the side of the horse, and your toes turned in and heals out, then you will always be on the alert for a shy or sheer from the horse, and he can never throw you.

Then if you want to teach him to lie down, stand on his nigh or left side; have a cord of leather straps at about six feet long; string up his left leg with one of them round his neck; strap the other end of it over his shoulders; hold it in your hand, and when you are ready, tell him to lie down, at the same time gently, firmly and steadily pulling the strap, touching him lightly on the knee with a switch. The horse will lie down immediately. Do this a few times, and you can make him lie down without the straps.

He is now your pupil and friend. You can teach him anything, only be kind to him, be gentle. Love him, and he will love you. Feed him before you do yourself. Shelter him well, groom him yourself, keep him clean, and at night always give him a good bed, at least a foot deep.

In the winter season, don't let your horse stand out a long time in the cold, without shelter or covering; for remember that the horse is an aboriginal native of a warm climate, and in many respects, his constitution is as tender as a man's.—Selected.

HIGH FARMING.—Mr. F. Mechi, whose name is associated with the first triumphs of American reaping machines in England, which occurred on his farm at Tiptree, has recently written a little work called "How to Farm Profitably," in which he disposes, in a good humored manner, of all those who have taken grounds against high farming. He says:—

I have often been much amused by the compassionate look and manner in which my friends inquired after my doings at Tiptree. The translation of these sentiments is this: Mr. Mechi, you are hardly losing money by your experiments to oblige the country, and we ought to feel grateful to you." But I sternly ejaculate that what does not pay in agriculture is not an improvement. The fact is, for several years I have been deriving a most gratifying return for my expenditure, and it is of a very enduring and continuous character; but the world does not believe it.

CUCUMBER BUGS.—Dr. Heckerman, of Tiffin, writes:—Most gardeners are very much annoyed by these bugs, which prey alike upon the cucumber, melon, pumpkin, and squash—the latter being its favourite. Various plans have been devised for their protection, such as soot, &c. A method which I have practised with nearly entire success, is to form a mixture of equal parts finely ground black pepper and wheat flour, and dust the plants, while the dew is upon them, with this mixture, using an ordinary flour or pepper box. It is a fact generally known, that black pepper is so obnoxious to most insects, that few will approach or stay in its presence. The object of the flour is to combine with the pepper, and with the dew or dew to form a paste, which will adhere to the leaves for many days unless washed off by heavy rains; and in which case the application should be renewed.

WHEAT—TO PREVENT SPOILING IN BINS.—Attilius Burlingame, a farmer of Cortland County, N. Y., who writes us that he is 77 years old, and of course has had some experience, says that if farmers will put one dry brick to every five bushels of grain put up in bins, or into the centre of a barrel of wheat flour or meal, it will not grow mouldy or sour. We have never tried bricks for this purpose, but have used and often recommended others to use a stone of a few pounds weight in the center of a barrel of corn meal, with the assurance of its being beneficial, and we have no doubt the use of a clean dry brick would be more so as it is better calculated to absord moisture than stone.

THE DUKE OF SUTHERLAND AMONG HIS TENANTRY.—The noble Duke, after visiting his cottars in and around Tongue last week, steamed into Loch Erriboll on Saturday last in his yacht Undine. On Monday morning he commenced his tour amongst his tenantry at Durness. He enters every cottage, makes inquiries of all about their health, sees that everything is clean and right, and should anything or want exist, he immediately orders these to be ameliorated as much as possible. The people were busily employed setting all to rights, and his visit appeared to be looked forward to with pleasure. Flags were flying in several places, showing that he would be no unwelcome visitor. As an instance of the interest he feels in their welfare, the following, though trifling, shows the goodness of his heart. A short time ago he met one of his poor tenants who was afflicted in his eyes. His Grace observed that he had only a piece of old rag to wipe them, and taking out his own pocket-handkerchief, he gave it to the poor fellow, desiring him to use and keep it. These visits are always the forerunners of farther improvements to benefit his cottars, and within the last two years new holdings have been granted and houses erected by the Duke on the estate, and these of a kind superior to any preceding. Other houses are in the course of erection in plots newly broken up; great changes are to be seen around; and there are many signs of improvement, and that the people are advancing and begin ning to prize and require comforts that hitherto had never been thought of, or, if so had been beyond their reach.

A fast Irishman, in a time of revival, joined the church, but was found sinning grievously not long afterwards. "Din't you join the Methodists?" inquired a piously disposed person. "Faix an' I did—jined for six months, and behaved so well they let me off with three."

A DOUBLE WIFE.—A sailor being asked how he liked his bride, replied:—"Why d'ye see, I took her for to be only half of me, as the parson says; but dash me if she isn't twice as much as I. I'm only a Tar, and she's a Tartar."

What is the difference between a young girl and an old hat?—Merely a difference of time—one has feeling and the other has felt.

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience and comfort of the very first class of travel, and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandise from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs SEYMOUR, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

Select Poetry.

The Young Widow.

She is modest, but not bashful;
Free and easy, but not bold:
Like an apple, ripe and mellow,
Not too young, and not too old:
Half invitir g, half repulsive;
Now advancing, and now shy;
There is mischief in her dimple;
There is danger in her eye.

She has studied human nature,
She is schooled in all her arts;
She has taken her diploma,
As the mistress of all hearts,
She can tell the very moment
When to sigh and when to smile;
O, a maid is sometimes charming,
But a widow all the while.

Are you sad? how very serious
Will her handsome face become;
Are you angry? she is wretched,
Lonely, friendless, tearful, dumb;
Are you mirthful? how her laughter,
Silver-sounding, will ring out,
She can lure, and catch and play you,
As the angler does the trout.

Ye old bachelors of forty,
Ye have grown so bald and wise;
Young Canadians of twenty,
With the love-locks in your eyes;
You may practice all the lessons
Taught by Cupid since the fall,
But I know a little widow
Who could win and fool you all.

The Plum-Pudding.

Upon the good old principle laid down by Horace, we shall at once enter upon the subject of our narrative without any unnecessary preface.

Towards the end of the last carnival, Mr. Aubertin, a rich banker retired from business, sat at his fireside with his friend M. de Marans. It was about midnight; the family had mentioned in the course of the evening, their intention of visiting the masked ball at the Opera house, and in fact had gone thither for an hour or two. The conversation soon became enlivened between the two old cronies.

"My dear Mr. Aubertin," said M. de Marans, "I cannot comprehend the obstinacy with which you persist in opposing the union of your son with Madille Morris, who is a young person all perfection, if such exists, tolerably rich, and of a family quite unobjectionable. Then, to all appearance, they love each other, and—"

"It is not I, my friend, who throw any obstacles in the way of the marriage; it is Madame A."

"I know it; but what are the reasons?

"Ha! ha! reasons?—you know as well as I do she will not give any."

"Listen, Aubertin; you are a reasonable as well as a prudent fellow; you have ever been so. I have never seen but one fault in you, which has often clouded your good qualities, and that is jealousy."

"Ha! jealous—I am no longer so. You have seen my wife depart for the opera ball, without my being tempted to accompany her."

"I believe you; she has turned the corner of fifty! Then I do not think you are any longer jealous. I am not sorry to perceive that you have been so during twenty years past, as the long jealousy has put your love to the proof!"

"Yes, I have been very fond of my wife."

"That fondness," resumed M. de Marans, "which I am far from blaming, has permitted Madame Aubertin to assume a great empire over you, and just now she abuses it."

"You believe me then very weak?" exclaimed M. Aubertin.

"So weak," replied his friend, "that you know not even the motive of your wife's refusal."

"Who has told you so?"

"You yourself; but, since you know it, tell it me, then, and at least let it be probable."

"It is very consistent."

"Let us see."

"It is about a plum pudding."

M. de Marans drew back in his chair. He looked attentively at his friend, and appeared to seek in his eyes the fatal sign of his being about to take leave of his senses. The countenance however of M. Aubertin was calm and mild, although somewhat cast down.

"Yes, a plum pudding."

"Come, come," resumed M. de Marans, "let us talk seriously. Are you joking?"

"Not at all. You know that it is my favourite dish, and that it is not only offensive to the palate of my wife, but she cannot suffer to see it on the table. She would die with hunger rather than taste a morsel of it."

"I know that; but what has that to do—"

"It was necessary to call her repugnance to mind before relating to you, as I am about to do, what passed at my house, now nearly two and twenty years since."

"At the time you had your fit of jealousy?"

"Precisely. My wife was then about eighteen or twenty. I was still in business; we received much company; M. de Morris visited us very often."

"The father of her whom your son wishes to marry?"

"Just so. If you had known him in those days, you must recollect that he was a handsome cavalier, amiable, lively, and whose assiduities might well give cause for jealousy,—and so did I become jealous."

"I know you were," said M. de Marans; "I recollect it, all, my friend. I would lay a wager, for all that, that this jealousy had no just foundation, and that you took for realities the phantoms of your unsound mind."

"You would lose, my dear A, did you make any bet of the kind."

"I defy you to prove it."

"Nothing is more easy."

M. Aubertin got up from his seat, and went to knock with the back of his hand on the wall of the parlour: and the wall gave a hollow sound.

"You know," says he, "that there once was a certain Dionysius at Syracuse, who made use of similar means to arrive at the secrets of his friends; a king of England copied him, and they called this hiding place "The King's Ears."

"Truly!"

"Yes; in the early days of my marriage I constructed there a small recess, the existence of which no one ever suspected, and from whence was heard all that was said in the parlour. I got into it by a door skillfully concealed; and when they thought me far away, there I was snug."

"What indelicacy! Aubertin, I should never have thought you capable of it."

"You are right. I do not seek to defend myself. But recollect that I had a beautiful wife, that I was jealous, and that I am telling you the story of a plum pudding. Besides, I assure you that it is more than ten years since I set foot in that hiding hole, and I have even lost the key of it. I could then follow at will the progress of the passion of M. de Morris, and his course of seduction with my wife. I listened every day to the lover becoming more tender,—the beloved wife at first opposing her love for me, then her duties, her regard for her son, the same of whom it is this day a question if he shall be married or not to the daughter of the seducer; and M. Morris urged his love, which would be eternal; he offered his fortune, his entire life; he would carry off my wife—conduct her to the world's end. One day, at length, his passion no longer knew any bounds; it burst forth in reproaches at not being loved in return, and Madame Aubertin said to him in broken accents and in tears, that she would not deliver to him the secrets of her heart: but that perhaps he had nothing to complain of, and that it was possible he was not the only one unfortunate. In a word, she gave him to understand, that I was the only obstacle to his happiness; and that were I hors de combat, should be happy to acknowledge his love and devotion."

"Indeed!" exclaimed M. de Marans.

"It was at least what M. de Morris understood her to mean," continued M. Aubertin; "upon which he exclaimed, that I had been created to render him the most unfortunate of men: he reiterated that, without me, his life would glide away smooth and happy; and though he had not dared to avow all his hatred, nor express in precise terms the charitable wish of seeing my widow put on her weeds, he said sufficient for Madame Aubertin to stop him, by observing, that I was her husband, and that those were wishes and words which she could not listen to. They separated in sad ness, and I came out of my hiding place—what was to be done? My rival was loved, or at least upon the point of being loved.—Never did a jealous mortal suffer as I did; during two days I harboured a thousand projects in my mind. On the third day a servant came and knocked at my door.—'Who's there? What do they want with me?' said I."

"'It is the cook, sir, who wishes to speak to you,' said the servant.

"'My cook! what can he want with me?' "He has perhaps some favour to ask of you,' said my wife. 'Go to your room and receive him.'

"'I have nothing to conceal from you,' replied I to Madame Aubertin; 'especially with my domestics. Let him come in.'

"The cook entered—pale, grown thin, and with a mysterious air, which is the index of some impending catastrophe.

"'What has happened to you, Rigaud?' said my wife to him, whom the figure renversee had terrified.

"'Ha, Madame!' replied Rigaud, his cotton cap in hand. 'If you but knew—'

"'Speak, Rigaud!'

"Rigaud had received a letter without a signature, in which he found a bank bill of a thousand francs, and the promise of a like sum, provided he would put in his plum-pudding—a dish that was to be prepared for the next day—the contents of a small phial of which was joined to the letter. He was assured that it would only render the plum-pudding more palatable.

"The honest cook gave me this letter, and drew from his pocket the phial of which he had been speaking. I took the phial.

"'Rigaud,' said I, 'you are a faithful servant, and I am sure of your discretion. Not a word of this to any one. Go to the kitchen, and do not disturb yourself.'

"'Rigaud,' said I, 'you are a faithful servant, and I am sure of your discretion. Not a word of this to any one. Go to the kitchen, and do not disturb yourself.'

"I examined the contents of it, and on pouring out some drops on a bit of sugar, I gave it to a little dog that my wife was very fond of, to eat. Scarcely had the poor animal touched the poisoned food, when his limbs trembled, his eyes began to wander, and he soon fell dead on the carpet.

"'O heavens! it is poison!' exclaimed my wife; and throwing herself into my arms, she bathed my face with tears.

"The cook, motionless from fear, prayed of me to accompany him to the commissary of police, to make his declaration there: but I, calm, and with sang froid, praised the fidelity of Rigaud. I acknowledged that I owed my life to him; and giving a bank bill of a thousand francs to replace that which has promised to him, I recommended him to pay attention to my plum puddings. When I was alone with my wife, she began to weep,—she overcame me with marks of her love.

"Another in my place might have been curious to assist at the first meeting of M. de Morris with my wife. As for me, I knew Madame Aubertin so well,—I had so well seen all the horror which the projected crime had inspired her with, that I was certain that an interview would never take place. In short Madame Aubertin—terrified at a passion, the violence of which had led to a cowardly attempt to poison me—managed to let M. de Morris know that he would no more be received at her house; the latter piqued at this conduct, very soon contrived to get married himself."

"Ah!" exclaimed M. de Marans, "the story you have just related to me is fearful; and I am no longer astonished that Madame Aubertin should dislike to be connected with him. That which surprises me most is, that you do not share her aversion and her contempt for M. de Morris."

"For M. de Morris!" replied M. Aubertin, "why! do you believe he wished to poison me?"

"And who, then?"

"Ha! It was myself! Yes; it was I who wrote a letter to the cook, and who sent the poison."

"You—you—Aubertin?"

"Not a doubt of it. M. de Morris, while looking upon me as the only obstacle to his happiness, suggested to me a thought that I put into execution, and which delivered me from a dangerous rival. It has cost me a pet dog and two thousand francs; but I do not find that paying too dear for recovering one's lost tranquility."

"But you have culminated an honest man—"

"Who wished to dishonour me. My wife, besides, is the only one who can have any suspicion of it—but then I was jealous.—This day, now that twenty years have rolled away since this adventure took place, and I see no more with the same optics that I did then, I blush at my conduct. I accuse myself as you do. You understand however, that I cannot either disclose this secret to my wife, nor disapprove her conduct."

"And your son will be unfortunate.—Madille de Morris will never marry him whom she loves, because you have calumniated her father!"

At this very moment the door of the parlour opened, and in came Madame Aubertin.

"You there, Madame!" said the husband to her looking at the clock, which was on the stroke of one. "I thought you were at the opera ball?"

"No, sir," replied she, "I have requested my son to accompany the ladies there, and I have profited by the leisure it has afforded me to reflect on the marriage proposed to us. I have changed my mind sir; I now give my consent to that union. I cease to oppose it.

"Truly, Madame!"

"Yes, sir;" continued Madame Aubertin, "à propos, here is a little key which I have perchance found within these four days; does it not belong to you?"

M. Aubertin took the key, cast a sly look upon it, and put it into his pocket blushing.

"My friend," said M. de Marans, "the ears of Dionysius of Syracuse, and of James of England have risen in judgement against you!"

The husband lowered his head; his secret was discovered. He was taken, after twenty years, in the trap he had laid himself!

Fifteen days afterwards his son Aubertin was wedded to Madile Julia de Morris.

NEW MODE OF PROPELLING STEAMERS.—Some experiments are about to be made with a new steamer recently launched at Keyport, New Jersey, in a trial of a new mode of propulsion. It is called Whittaker's improvement in side screw propulsion, and owned by New York capitalists. The screw is attached to the side of the vessel, instead of the after end, and high pressure locomotive machinery is to be used for driving it. Quickness of piston motion, amounting to one hundred revolutions of the screw shaft per minute, which is not obtainable at low pressure, is one of the main advantages of the application. Another is the great saving of space and weight, amounting to more than one-half.

"Learn to labor and to wait" is a very important advice to the young. To know how to wait is as essential as to know how to labor. Patience ensures calmness and courage, without which, nothing can be accomplished. A habit of impatience becomes after a while chronic, and when this is the case, the possessor becomes peevish and fretful. This is as destructive of any social quality as impatience is of every business quality. It should be guarded against by the young and counteracted by the old, if either young or old would accomplish any thing useful, or make themselves agreeable to their associates.

SINGULAR CIRCUMSTANCE.—A few days since, a squirrel was killed by some boys near the house of Mr. Lester Parker, on the Plainfield road, which had four young ones. The "nest" was accidentally found, and the four were put with the cat, in Mr. Parker's family, with kittens. Contrary to the fears of the family, she at once adopted them, and may be seen treating them with the same motherly tenderness as though they were her own—nursing them and fondling them, and they play about her with her kittens, all on the best terms. It is a well known fact that young squirrels feel occasionally from their mother's mouth, after the food has been masticated, and this instinct leads them to try the same mode with the cat, when she gently puts them aside with her paw. What is most remarkable, the cat is a great hunter of squirrels, showing an especial enmity to the race of those she has now taken in charge.—New Haven Palladium.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—When the complexion assumes a sallow appearance, and the whites of the eyes are tinged with yellow, there is mischief at work in the liver. A dose or two of the Pills will then arrest the progress of the disease, and save much pain and trouble; but should the malady have reached a more dangerous stage, and take the shape of bilious fever or jaundice, and the functions of the stomach have become disordered, a course of the remedy may be necessary. The cure is merely a question of time, for however violent the symptoms may be, however long the patient may have suffered, this potent remedy will inevitably produce the desired effect, if administered in accordance with the directions.

ORIGIN OF THE BONNET.—The first bonnet worn in England was brought from Italy in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and its form was a compromise between the present round Italian peasant hat and the French hood. The materials employed in constructing these head ornaments were—crimson satin elaborately embroidered, cloth of gold, and similar rich materials. The Leghorn hat, with perpendicular crown, and a wide brim standing out far around the face, was the first legitimate bonnet worn, and this appears long after Elizabeth's time It was trimmed with artificial flowers, and immense bows of ribbon. Our present neat and exquisitely delicate and tasteful head covering is but a modification of this huge affair, which, not until very many years back, was so universally worn and admired.

A JUST DECISION.—One night a judge, a military officer, and a minister, all applied for a lodging at an inn where there was but one spare bed, and the landlord was called upon to decide which had the best claim of the three. "I have lain fifteen years in garrison at R——," said the officer. "I have sat as judge twenty years in R——," said the judge. "With your leave, gentlemen, I have stood in the ministry twenty-five years at N——," said the minister.—"That settles the dispute," said the landlord, "You, Mr. Captain, have lain fifteen years; you, Mr. Judge, have sat twenty years; but the aged pastor has stood five-and-twenty years, so he certainly has the best right to the bed."

A FEMALE BATTLE.—The Jackson Patriot states that a regular fight took place in a marsh some six or seven miles northwest of there, on Saturday last. It seems that a feud had long existed between the female heads of two neighboring families, which had heretofore manifested itself only in wordy battles, which did no bodily harm to either side; but, waxing stronger and stronger with this pent up wrath, they met in the peaceful occupation of gathering berries. It was words first—and such words! It is but a step from words to blows, and at it they went, using tooth and nail most unmercifully. The smaller proving the better man, grounded her antagonist, and setting astride her now prostrate foe, punished her quite scientifically. When the conflict was over, what had been garments was no better than rags, and they needed the fig leaf of mother Eve to hide their nakedness.

A WOMAN'S ALMANAC.—Alphonso Kar alleges, that epochs in a woman's life are frequently marked by dress. Women will, for instance often say that such a thing happened when they bought a particular article of their costume, thus:—I recollect perfectly well, when Mrs. Jones took her third husband, Charles gave me my ermine tippet at that time. Mrs. Williams was baptised and confirmed just one year ago last January, for I bought my blue velvet dress that month. Old Mrs. Pope died last Wednesday six months, for I got my camel's hair shawl on the day of the funeral.

A DEAD NEGRO.—When the cholera was at its worst in 1849, in New Orleans, an old negro who had weathered the yellow fever many times, at length got frightened at the havoc which the new disease was making among all classes. His master one night heard him praying to an angel de Lord, by the light of a tallow candle, to spare him dis time, to let him live a little longer and den take him to glory. But he concluded his prayer, by professing perfect submission to the will of the angel of the lord, even should he be called for to go immediately on his long journey; Sambo's master determined to test the sincerity of this last profession. He knocked loud and distinct, at his door. "Who dare!" says Sambo. The angel of the Lord, answered. What you want I have called for Sambo! The master heard the candle suddenly extinguished with a whoof and Sambo energetically answered "He not here," dat nigger is been dead three weeks.

TRUE PHILOSOPHY.—It is in vain to regret a misfortune when it is past retrieving, but few have philosophy or strength enough to practise it. A famous physician ventured five thousand guineas upon the South Sea project; when he was told at Garraway's that it was all lost—'Why,' said he, 'tis but going up five thousand pair of stairs more.' This answer deserved a statue

A gentleman at Notting Hill, who has a dread of garotters over his garden wall, and burglars in his bedroom, has succeeded in awing a bad neighborhood by putting up as a notice, "A wild Irishman is let loose on these premises after dark."

Hudson's Bay Question

Authentic Copy of Committee's Report

The Select Committee appointed to consider the state of those British Possessions in North America which are under the Administration of the Hudson's Bay Company, or over which they possess a license to trade, and who were empowered to report their observations, together with the Minutes of Evidence taken before them, to the House;—Have considered the matters to them referred, and have agreed to the following Report:

1. The near approach of the period when the license of exclusive trade, granted in 1838 for 21 years, to the Hudson's Bay Company over that north-western portion of British America, which goes by the name of the Indian territory, must expire, would alone make it necessary that the condition of the vast regions which are under the administration of the Company should be carefully considered; but there are other circumstances which in the opinion of your Committee, would have rendered such a course the duty of the Parliament of this country.

2. Among these, your Committee would specially enumerate the growing desire of our Canadian fellow-subjects, that the means of extension and regular settlement should be afforded to them over a portion of this territory; the necessity of providing suitably for the administration of the affairs of Vancouver's Island, and the present condition of the settlement which has been formed on the Red River.

3. Your Committee have received much valuable evidence on these and other subjects connected with the enquiry which has been entrusted to them, and especially have had the advantage of hearing the statements of Chief Justice Draper, who was commissioned by the Government of Canada to watch this inquiry. In addition to this, your Committee have received the evidence taken before a Committee of the Legislative Assembly, appointed to investigate this subject, containing much valuable information in reference to the interests and feelings of that important colony, which are entitled to the greatest weight on this occasion.

4. Your Committee have also had the opinion of the law officers of the Crown communicated to them on various points connected with the charter of the Hudson's Bay Company.

5. The territory over which the Company now exercise rights is of three descriptions:

1st The land held by charter, or Rupert's Land.

2nd The land held by license, or the Indian Territory.

3rd Vancouver's Island.

6. For the nature of the tenure by which these countries are severally connected with the Company, your committee would refer to the evidence they have received and the documents appended to the Report.

7. Among the various objects of imperial policy which it is important to attain, your Committee consider that it is essential to meet the just and reasonable wishes of Canada to be enabled to annex to her territory such portion of the land in her neighborhood as may be available to her for the purposes of settlement, with which lands she is willing to open and maintain communications, and for which she will provide the means of local administration. Your Committee apprehend that the districts on the Red River and the Saskatchewan are those likely to be desired for early occupation. It is of great importance that the peace and good order of those districts should be effectually secured. Your Committee trust that there will be no difficulty in effecting arrangements as between Her Majesty's Government and the Hudson's Company by which these districts may be ceded to Canada on equitable principles, and within the districts thus annexed to her the authority of the Hudson's Bay Company would of course entirely cease.

8. Your Committee think it best to confine themselves with indicating the outlines of such a scheme, leaving it to Her Majesty's Government to consider its details more maturely before the Act of Parliament is prepared, which will probably be necessary to carry it into effect.

9. In case, however, Canada should not be willing at a very early period to undertake the government of the Red River district, it may be proper to consider whether some temporary provision for its administration may not be advisable.

10. Your Committee are of opinion that it will be proper to terminate the connexion of the Hudson's Bay Company with Vancouver's Island as soon as it can conveniently be done, as the best means of favouring the development of the great natural advantages of that important colony. Means should also be provided for the ultimate extension of the colony over any portion of the adjoining continent, to the west of the Rocky Mountains, on which permanent settlement may be found practicable.

11. As to those extensive regions, whether in Rupert's Land or in the Indian Territory, in which, for the present at least, there can be no prospect of permanent settlement, to any extent, by the European race for the purposes of colonization, the opinion at which your Committee have arrived is mainly founded on the following considerations: 1st. The great importance to the more peopled portions of British North America that law and order should, as far as possible, be maintained in these territories; 2nd. The fatal effects which they believe would infallibly result to the Indian population from a system of open competition in the fur trade, and the consequent introduction of spirits in a far greater degree than is the case at present; and 3rd. The probability of the indiscriminate destruction of the most valuable fur-bearing animals in the course of a few years.

12. For these reasons your Committee are of opinion that whatever may be the validity or otherwise of the rights claimed by the Hudson's Bay Company, under the charter, it is desirable that they should continue to enjoy the privilege of exclusive trade, which they now possess, except so far as those privileges are limited by the foregoing recommendations.

13. Your Committee have now specified the principal objects which they think it would be desirable to attain. How far the chartered rights claimed by the Hudson's Bay Company may prove an obstacle to their attainment, they are not able, with any certainty, to say. If this difficulty is to be solved by amicable adjustment, such a course will be best promoted by the Government after communication with the Company as well as with the Government of Canada, rather than by detailed suggestions emanating from this committee.

14. Your Committee cannot doubt but that, when such grave interests are at stake, all the parties concerned will approach the subject in a spirit of conciliation and justice, and they therefore indulge a confident hope that the Government will be enabled, in the next Session of Parliament, to present a Bill which shall lay the foundations of an equitable and satisfactory arrangement in the event, which we consider probable, of legislation being found necessary for that purpose.

DRAFT REPORT PROPOSED BY MR. CHRISTY

1. The near approach of the period when the license of exclusive trade, granted in 1838 for 21 years to the Hudson's Bay Company, over that North-Western portion of British America which goes by the name of the Indian Territory, must expire, would alone make it necessary that the condition of the whole of the vast regions which are under the administration of the Company should be carefully considered; but there are other circumstances which, in the opinion of your Committee, would have rendered such a course the duty of the Parliament and Government of this country.

2. Among these your committee would especially enumerate the growing desire of our Canadian fellow-subjects, that the means of extension and regular settlement should be afforded to them over a portion of this territory; the necessity of providing suitably for the administration of the affairs of Vancouver's Island, and the present condition of the settlement, which has been formed on the Red River.

3. Your committee have obtained much valuable evidence on these and other subjects connected with the enquiry which has been entrusted to them; and have had the advantage of hearing the statements of Chief Justice Draper, who was commissioned by the Government of Canada to watch this inquiry. In addition to this, your committee have received the evidence taken before a Committee of the Legislative Assembly appointed to investigate this subject, containing much valuable information in reference to the interests and feelings of that important colony, which are entitled to the greatest weight on this occasion.

4. Your Committee have also had the opinion of the law officers of the Crown communicated to them on various points connected with the charter of the Hudson's Bay Company.

5. The territory over which the company now exercise rights is of three descriptions,

1st. The land held by the charter, or Rupert's Land.

2d. The land held by license, or the Indian Territory.

3d. Vancouver's Island.

6. For the nature of the tenure by which these countries are severally connected with the company, Your Committee would refer to the evidence they have received, and the documents appended to the Report.

7. With regard to Rupert's Land, which is held by charter, it appears to your Committee very desirable to ascertain precisely the character and legality of the powers claimed and exercised under it, and the extent of the country over which these powers are in force.

8. Numerous allegations and much controversy on these questions have created a serious evil, arising from the impression, both in Canada and in the countries subject to the jurisdiction of the charter itself, that many of its provisions, if not altogether contrary to the laws of England are of doubtful authority.

9. The prevalence of such impressions, whether well founded or otherwise, cannot but be prejudicial not only to the authority of the Company, but to the peaceable and orderly government of those living under it; and it appears to your Committee necessary for the satisfaction and benefit of those concerned, that the question of the validity of powers so anomalous and extensive, should be set at rest by the instrumentality of a competent legal tribunal.

10. It has, however, been strongly urged upon your Committee, in the course of their inquiry, that the question of the boundary between Canada and the Hudson's Bay territories is of the most pressing importance at this moment, and one that should be determined as speedily as possible; but it is obvious that in bringing this to a practical decision, the question of the validity of the charter presents itself as the first to be ascertained. The definition of the limits of Canada must necessarily follow on the determination of what is, or is not within the jurisdiction of the Hudson's Bay Company.

11. Pending such an investigation, which your Committee consider to be the first and indispensable step to any final arrangement, they forbear to express any opinion as to the course which should be ultimately pursued; but, adverting to the willingness expressed by the Company to meet the desire of the Canadian people to obtain land for cultivation, and the establishment of agricultural settlers, your Committee think it right to express their opinion that, in any event, the country capable of settlement should be withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the Hudson's Bay Company, whose objects and interests are admitted to be opposed to such settlement.

12. Your Committee believe that the districts on the Red River, Saskatchewan, and the Mackenzie, hold out inducements to enterprising individuals, from Canada and from this country, for their early occupation, which ought, by every legitimate means, to be encouraged. The rapid extension of settlement which had been going on in so remarkable a manner to the south of the American boundary line, renders it a matter of great importance to establish within our own territory a counterpoise favourable to British interests, and modelled upon British institutions.

13. Your Committee would suggest that it be referred to Her Majesty's Government to consider, after conference with Canada and the Company, the best means for drawing the line between those portions of the country which are or are not adapted for settlement; and how the territory susceptible of cultivation, and detached accordingly from the Company's jurisdiction, should be settled and governed under free institutions. We believe that some simple and inexpensive machinery could be devised, by the aid of which those districts, whether ceded to Canada or erected into a separate colony, could be effectively administered.

14. Your Committee think it best to content themselves with indicating the outlines of such a scheme, leaving it to the Government to consider its details more maturely, before the Bill is prepared which will be necessary to carry it into effect.

15. Your Committee are of opinion, that it will be proper to terminate the connexion of the Company with Vancouver's Island, as soon as it can conveniently be done, as the best means of favouring the development of the great natural advantages of that important island.

16. Means should also be provided for the extension of the colony over every portion of the adjoining continent on which permanent settlement may be found practicable, to the west of the Rocky Mountains.

17. As to these extensive regions, whether in Rupert's Land or in the Indian Territory, in which, for the present at least, there can be no prospect of permanent settlement by the European race for the purposes of colonization, the opinion at which your Committee have arrived is mainly founded on the following considerations: 1st. The great importance to the more peopled portions of British North America that law and order should, as far as possible, be maintained in these territories; 2nd. The fatal effects which they believe would infallibly result to the Indian population from a system of open competition in the fur trade, and the consequent introduction of spirits in a far greater degree than is the case at present; and 3rd. The probability of the indiscriminate destruction of the most valuable fur-bearing animals in the course of a few years.

18. Power, however, should be reserved to Her Majesty's Government to make grants within such territory for the purpose of mines or fisheries, but with due regard to the immunities and trade of the Company.

19. Your Committee have now specified the principal objects which they think it would be desirable to attain.

20. How far the chartered rights claimed by the Hudson's Bay Company may prove an obstacle to so doing, they are not able with any certainty to say. If this difficulty could be solved, not by adverse litigation, but by amicable adjustment, such it would be best promoted by the Government after communication with the Company, as well as with the Government of Canada, rather than by detailed suggestions emanating from this Committee.

21. Your Committee cannot doubt but that, when such grave interests are at stake, all the parties concerned will approach the subject in a spirit of conciliation and justice, and they therefore indulge a confident hope that the Government will be enabled in the next Session of Parliament to present a Bill which shall lay the foundation of an equitable and satisfactory arrangement in the event, which we consider probable, of legislation being found necessary for that purpose.

The Golden Land.

The Melbourne Argus of May 29th complains that the weekly returns of gold are scarcely equal to the average of last year; but consoles its readers by arguing that large numbers of miners are at present withdrawn from the immediate labor of gold washing by sinking shafts for quartz digging, and that the products from the ordinary process of washing are temporarily obstructed by the dryness of the season.—When the rains return, and the people are again enabled to resume washing on the plains, they have accumulated, it thinks that the weekly yield will be fully up to the average.

The business of gold mining is now carried on by joint stock companies, as well as by individual diggers, and some of the operations are on a very extensive scale. One company has put up an engine of 60 horse power, and laid down tramways leading to various shafts. Another has three engines put up, and has struck several shafts, in one of which gold was found at a depth of 50 feet. Accounts, almost fabulous, are told of the extraordinary success accompanying this mode of working. One nugget was taken up weighing 370 ounces; two specimens were dug out, one weighing 129 lbs., and the other 8 lbs., which were expected to yield 97 lbs of pure gold. The person who found those, a short time before, took up a nugget weighing 319 ounces 18 dwts. A gold-broker had in his possession a specimen weighing 552 ounces, 12 dwts. A company which completed its operations for deep mining a few weeks before the account was written had already taken out parcels of quartz, yielding 1200 ounces of gold, worth about £4700 sterling. —Whilst a man and boy scraping the surface of their claim to the depth of 18 inches obtained a specimen weighing 107 pounds, of which the larger half is pure gold.

It seems, from the discussion raised by Lord Ellenborough, on Friday night, that the force sent to India will amount, by the end of the year, to 31,000 men. There were in that country before, 22 battalions, equal, probably, to some 17,500 men, so that we shall have an army very few short of 49,000 men in India. The forces that were originally sent to the Crimea, and that took part in the battle of the Alma, amounted to 29,000 men only; so that more men have left our shores already to defend India than we thought it necessary to send to attack Russia. On the arrival of troops, the East India Company makes their maintenance; the cost of an Indian war upon the home Government, therefore, bears a very small proportion to the cost of the war from which we have lately emerged.

The trial of the Italians accused of an attempt to assassinate the French Emperor terminated on Friday afternoon, August 7th. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty, with extenuating circumstances in favour of Bartolotti and Grilli. The Procureur-General demanded the application of Article 89 of the Penal Code to the three accused, modified by Article 460 as regarded the two latter. The Court, after deliberating in the Council chamber, sentenced Tibaldi to transportation, and Bartolotti and Grilli to 15 years imprisonment. The trial of Mazzini and Ledru Rollin, who are not in custody, has been postponed for a month.

A WESTERN CORNFIELD.—Joseph Hayes, an old farmer in Lawrenceburg, Indiana, sold 30,000 bushels of corn last week for 30 cents per bushel, and five cents for hauling it to the point of delivery in that place. He was almost wholly the crop of 1856, though a small part of it was left over from the previous year's crop. It produced the snug sum of $25,500, and was raised on the famous Miami Bottoms, between Lawrenceburg and Elizabethtown, that for half a century have turned out enormous crops, without any apparent abatement of fertility.

SANDWICH, SEPTEMBER 10, 1857.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company booked from places in Europe during five months 2,576 passengers; of these 2,150 were for various Canadian towns and cities, 7 were for New Brunswick, and 400 for the Western States.

On and after the First of October next, packages of printed matter not exceeding four ounces in weight, can be sent from Great Britain to the Colonies by payment of 6d sterling each package. The lowest charge at present, by the Colonial post, is 1s. 6d.

The Buffalo Courier says that a decision has been given in that city against the legality of collecting more than the regular fare on railway cars where passengers neglect to procure tickets. Railway Companies find it necessary to put on this additional charge as one means of preventing money from being paid to conductors over whom they have no direct check, but who nevertheless generally require to be well watched.

ARREST OF A PICKPOCKET.—On the arrival of the emigrant train at Windsor, on Sunday morning last, Mr. E. C. Westmore discovered that his wallet, containing twenty dollars and a ticket for Chicago, was missing; he immediately made his loss known to Detective Reilly, and every shrewd and efficient officer in the employ of the Great Western Railway Company, who at once arrested on suspicion, one Michael Carl, on whom the said wallet and contents were found. He was held in custody until Monday morning, when the affair was compromised by Carl's paying Mr. Westmore two dollars. Mr. W. could not swear to the money stolen, and it being his desire the prisoner was set at liberty.—Windsor Hld.

WESTERN MONEY.—Our city banks and brokers yesterday charged 5 per cent on Illinois and Wisconsin money. This was done solely because the Chicago bankers do not promptly redeem these bills when sent home. The bills are good and people have no need to sacrifice a penny on them.—Tribune.

In reference to the crops in the Ottawa district, the Bytown Citizen, of Saturday, says:—

"The first four days of the present week was glorious harvest weather—dry and warm. Large quantities of grain were cut down and secured. During Thursday night and yesterday morning, it rained heavily towards noon it cleared up, but during the afternoon there were showers. There is an immense crop on the ground, and all that is now is wanting to ensure an abundant supply of grain in this section of the country, is fair weather. The potato crop is suffering extensively from the "blight," and it is feared that the crop will be a short one. The average price of potatoes in this market is 1s per bushel, which proves conclusively that our farmers fear the rot. The stalks first wither, and then suddenly decay, emitting an offensive odour. We are assured that if the tops were removed as soon as the disease manifests itself, the roots would in a great measure be saved. The experiment is worth trying. The disease evidently first affects the stalks, and, by removing them, a portion of the roots may be saved; while by allowing them to remain in the ground, the destruction of the whole crop is almost certain."

RAILROAD AT AUCTION.—The Illinois Great Western Railroad is advertised to be sold at auction at Elizabethtown, that for half of October.—Messrs. J. N. A. Griswold and L. M. Wiley are assignees.

To the Editor of the Maple Leaf,

SIR,

I was much surprised at reading an article in the Canadian of last week, in which he casts one of the most atrocious scandals that, I believe, ever appeared in public print, upon the young persons of this town, and which, on perusal, but the editor of the Canadian, would have had the shamelessness to publish. I have no fear of contradiction in saying, that the youths of Sandwich, are as steady, decent and quiet a set of young persons as will be met with, in any community; for I have not seen or heard of one single case of their being either insulting or creating any disturbance whatever, for as far back as my recollection will carry me; and the calumnious article headed "Nuisance," is the first time they were ever evil spoken of.

The article alluded to, was altogether uncalled-for on the part of the editor of the Canadian; for it is not long since, that he published, or allowed to be published in his office, that scurrilous little sheet, the Spy. There could be nothing tending more to destroy the morals of any young community than the publication of such a paper; and the charge "Nuisance" would consequently be far more applicable to himself, for there could not be a greater nuisance inflicted upon any community, than the one last alluded to. It would be advisable for the editor of the Canadian, before meddling with other people's faults, to look to home a little, as, I think, a decided improvement might be made in that quarter.

I am,

Dear Sir,

A. SANDWICHITE.

Local Superintendents.

By request, and in order to settle a matter connected with the duty of local Superintendents of Common Schools, a short time since we wrote to the Chief Superintendent of Education, stating we desired his answer for publication, as to whether it was, or was not the duty of a Local Superintendent, to deliver a public lecture in each School Section, at least once a year.—In what we have done, or by publishing the reply of the Chief Superintendent, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that we are not pointing out any one individual,—for more than one or two, in these Counties have, during the past two years neglected that duty. Here is the Chief Superintendent's reply:

"EDUCATION OFFICE,

"TORONTO, 21st Aug., 1857.

SIR—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 13th instant, and in reply to remark—that it often impedes the good sought to be obtained and militates against the officer's usefulness, to obtain for publication his superior's opinion as to such officer's duty and his mode of fulfilling it. Besides it has not been the rule of the Department to correspond with those not immediately charged with the administration of the School System. But believing that you desire the information from a desire of forwarding the interests of education in your locality, I have to state that it has always been the intention of the Department that the term "public lecture," must be taken in its common acceptation as a lecture, of which public notice has been given. The law, after declaring it to be the duty of every local Superintendent to deliver an annual public lecture in each section, further requires him "to do all in his power to promote and encourage parents, guardians, trustees and Teachers, to improve the character and efficiency of the Common Schools, and secure the universal and sound education of the young;" and this cannot be done more efficiently or successfully than by public lectures to the parties indicated.

"For further information on this subject, I beg to refer you to the Chief Superintendent's remarks on page 118, of the pamphlet sent herewith.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

THOMAS HODGINS.

E. Jackson Esq.,

Editor Maple Leaf, Newmarket.

From the foregoing it is very evident that in the performance of his duty, a local superintendent must deliver a public Lecture in each school Section under his jurisdiction. The mere talking to the children is not sufficient; but notices must be issued, announcing a public lecture, and place it is, referred to above, points out the subject on which that lecture shall be delivered. It says— "another most important duty required of each local Superintendent is, to deliver in each School Section, at least once a year, a public lecture in some subject connected with the objects, principles, and means of practical education." This is plain and distinct; and he who " runs may read."—New Era.

Brag and Hoidfast, the Champion of the Seas.

Since the steamship Vanderbilt of this port commenced running on the Southampton and Havre line, carefully-indited paragraphs and tables have appeared in print, announcing the performances, with whom, of the wellknown Cunard ship Persia. These have not hitherto attracted much notice; but on the third experiment, by a judicious "cooking" of distances and time, it has been contrived to push his new competitor across the Atlantic, in one little half-hour less than was consumed by the Vanderbilt in coming, in her best run from New York to Liverpool. Slily enough, the paragraphs and the tables have gone the rounds hereabouts —but with an editorial reticence, showing how easily the conductors of journals saw through the transparent humbug. Not so perhaps with the public at large, with whom figures in print wear the aspect of fairness, and are too often implicitly believed. For their sake therefore we throw together two or three facts, leaving deductions to be made by those most interested.

The Vanderbilt's arrivals at this port, and departures from it, are calculated to and from Sandy Hook; the Persia's from the Battery! The course hence to Southampton is from 60 to 65 miles longer than that to Liverpool. For this difference in distance our accommodating navigator lops off 7 hours, whereas 44 would be a very liberal estimate, if the Vanderbilt ever steamed up to Southampton at all! But she does no such thing. Her English destination is Cowes, about 11 miles short of Southampton; nor is it even at Cowes that the ready mail for London starts off his log. He stops short at the Needles, some 10 miles further yet to the Westward, and there, making up his claim for the Championship with precise accuracy, debits himself, in time, with the run from Sandy Hood to the Needles, and there credit, in time, for the run from New York to Southampton, the last 7 hours being at the speed of 9 miles an hour! The process is ingenious, but too flimsy to bear testing.

There is no doubt that the Vanderbilt is a very fast vessel; but her owners and the press should be content with reporting her passage fairly. For the present, the Persia retains the laurels. Brag is a good dog, but Holdfast is a better.

For the benefit of those who desire to have everything set down in chapter and verse, we add a correct report of the Vanderbilt's last voyage to England. She sailed from New York at 12.20 P.M. on the 1st inst., and arrived at Cowes at 6 A.M. on the 11th—the time being 9 days, 17 hours, 40 minutes. If from this you deduct 5 hours for longitudinal difference, and 5 more (when the mail arrived) for the difference of distance between Liverpool and Cowes, there remain 9 days, 7 hours, 40 minutes, as the comparative estimate of her run. The Persia's best passage was 9 days, 1 hour, 15 minutes.

More Defalcations—Increase of Crime.

We have another "defalcation," as it is styled, to record to-day. These affairs used to be called robberies, when they were rarer, and the English language was in its purity. The thing signified by the new term, as well as the old one, is generally understood. Some "gentleman," who has been holding a position of trust and responsibility,—who passes in the world for an honourable and liberal person,—is suddenly discovered to have been, perhaps for months, stealing money from the chest of his employer or his partners. The practice is becoming quite common in our community.—Scarcely a week passes which does not witness at least one or two incidents of this kind. The latest, thus far, is the case of a confidential clerk in the St. Nicholas hotel, who was detected yesterday morning in stealing eight sovereigns, and who is supposed to have stolen, at various times, a great deal more.

We believe this form of crime is much more common in the United States than elsewhere,—and there must be some reason for it. It may be that our merchants and business-men adopt fewer and less effective precautions against fraud on the part of their employees than are common elsewhere. There may be fewer checks upon clerks and agents with us than in other countries,—so that the opportunities for fraud are much greater. Everywhere opportunity is of itself a great temptation. If men so arrange their business as to make it easy for their clerks to defraud them, they must not be surprised if they are defrauded.

But the style of living which has become common and almost necessary among young men in this city, is the direct cause of much of the swindling of the day. So long as business men and the public at large value a man according to the display he makes,—the horses he drives, the fashionable society he moves in, the opera seats at his disposal, and the general dash and show of his daily walk, so long may they expect to be defrauded and robbed. Nothing is easier than for a merchant to ascertain to his own satisfaction whether his clerk is living beyond his means; and if he is, it is positively criminal in him not to remonstrate and Teachers, to improve the character and efficiency of the Common Schools, and secure the universal and sound education of the young;" and this cannot be done more efficiently or successfully than by public lectures to the parties indicated.

We have it on unquestionable authority —the testimony of patients themselves—that Rheumatism, however deeply seated, may be cured by the simple and persistent application of Holloway's Ointment. This, we feel assured, will be welcome intelligence to thousands of sufferers, bed-ridden by the severity of their pains, and afflicted joints along the pathway to the tomb. In a climate the quicksilver sometimes makes a leap of thirty degrees up or down, the complaint is sure to be aroused by the change, and in our new settlements at the West, along the alluvial borders of our great rivers, in the hemlock swamps of the South, and in all low and damp locations, few persons escape the ague, of forty years whether a rheumatic visitation. It is clear, therefore, that a preparation which will afford immediate relief, and must eventually, a thorough cure of the complaint, must be of especial value to the people of this country. We cannot reasonably doubt, in view of the well-attested testimonials which have been laid before us, that the benefits which are in reserve for those who, in the exercise of that celebrated physician and philanthropist have conferred upon mankind, this is certainly not the least important. Many an industrious tiller of the soil, whose services are needed in the fields, is at this moment languishing on a bed of sickness; the hands that should guide the plow or grasp the spade, rendered powerless by rheumatism. May a few of these trivial words to the productive labor is similarly situated, and we can imagine with what joy these sufferers would hail the means of immediate cure. To all such we feel justified in recommending this balsamic remedy, the application of which, with the aid of a few doses of Holloway's Pills to regulate the internal organs, will, we feel assured, restore them to health and usefulness.—*N. Arrival of the Arago.

ST. JOHN'S, September 5.

The United States mail steamship "Arago," Captain Lines, from Havre and Southampton 26th August, passed Cape Race at about noon of this day, the 5th instant. Her advices, which are four days later than those received by the "Vanderbilt" at New York, were obtained by a fishing smack, and brought to this port. Commercial news is of considerable importance. This is the first successful attempt to gain news from Europe from steamers passing Cape Race. This is in itself highly important. The achievment demonstrating as it does the practicability of obtaining news were a steamer employed, in about seven or eight days from Europe.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Parliament had been prorogued.

Spollen who was acquitted of the murder of Mr. Little, of Dublin, had been re-tried for the robbery, and would soon be tried therefor.

It was reported that Lord John Russel was about to be elevated to the peerage.

Several failures among commercial men at Liverpool are reported—the names are not however, given is the dispatch.

Arrival of the North American.

Quebec, September 7th.

The North American sailed from Liverpool on the 26th of August, and arrived here about 6 o'clock Yesterday evening, bringing 4 days later news. Further telegraphic news from India was hourly expected respecting Indian mails. London advices of Tuesday night inform us that 11 days had elapsed since the mail steamer Nubia arrived at Suez from Calcutta with news to 21st of July. If the steamer from Bombay had reached Marseillies in time for letters to have been delivered in London on Monday —it was probable that the Bombay mail had not even arrived at Suez, on the 16th, two days after Nubia. Despatches from Bombay will bring news from Delhi later received at Calcutta to July 21st, as communications are less interesting.

Further details of Indian news momentarily expected. French men-of-war give every aid to the English vessels taking troops to India, and tow them when becalmed. Rupture between Sardinia and Naples looked for.

The arrival of both the Calcutta and Bombay mails at Marseilles was expected hourly.

The Times city article, after discussing details of telegraph despatch from India, says, supposing the latest news which may be expected from Bombay, together with corrected details of Calcutta despatch, should contain nothing to impart a worse aspect to that just brought—there will consequently be no reason for incressed apprehension for the final result, however much the state of suspense may be prolonged.

A telegraph to India will soon be laid down, and Malta, Vienna, and London will be in communication in a few days by electric wires.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Tuesday evening both houses adjourned till Friday, when the prorogation will take place. The only business done during the brief sittings, related to the Divorce Bill apart from the bestowal of the Royal assent on several Bills. The Commons, without much hesitation, accepted the Divorce Bill as altered by the Lords. The House of Commons had a short sitting on Monday afternoon.

Mr. Labouchere stated that the German Legion at the Cape, consisting of about 2,300 men had been called out to act as soldiers, thus enabling the Governor to furnish a large reinforcement to India than would otherwise have been possible.

Lord Palmerston replying to questions stated that the Government could not obtain the trans-Atlantic Cable to employ in the direction of communication with India without the sanction of Parliament, and that it was now too late to make application to Parliament on the subject.

The Directors of the Trans-Atlantic Telegraph Company have resolved to renew in October the attempt to submerge the Cable.

The Globe of Monday says:—The despatch of troops to India has lowered our home establishment of infantry of the line to 14 battalions, instead of 40, the proper proportion for the United Kingdom. The arrival of four regiments from the Mediterranean in the course of a few days will augment the home strength to eighteen battalions.

SPAIN.

MADRID, August 23

The rumour of a secret treaty between Mexico and the United States had caused a great sensation.

A fresh piratical attempt has been made by the ruffians on the Moorish coast on the "Betty" of London, which had lost her reckoning and stranded.

ITALY.

A rupture between Sardinia and Naples, arising out of the affair of the "Cagliari" steamer, is now regarded as imminent.

The Post has the following:

PARIS, August 24th.

We are expecting every moment to hear of a rupture between Sardinia and Naples.

Pius IX. entered Florence at 6 o'clock on the evening of the 18th instant. His reception by the authorities was imposing and splendid—by the people, respectful but cool.

Died.

At her residence, on Monday night, 7th Instant, Mrs. O. Beers, of Petite Cote near Sandwich, aged 38 years.

INFLUX OF FREE BLACKS INTO MEXICO.—The Vera Cruz Extraordinary, of the 30th ult., refer to the immigration into the State of Vera Cruz, of a number of free blacks from Louisiana. It says:

"Some time since a small party of negroes from Louisiana found their way to Mexico, and settled to the South of Vera Cruz on the Popolocapan.—

They turned their attention to the cultivation of Indian corn, and were so successful that they wrote to their friends in New Orleans, telling them of their great advantages held out to them in Mexico. Their chances for making money were here much greater than in the United States, and what was to be prized still more by the blacks, they were not here subjected to the same inequality from caste as they were in their old homes.

"The representation of these pioneers have been successful in inducing a large number to immigrate. Not long since we noticed the arrival of a party of forty, who have come with practical knowledge, strength and money to carry on agricultural pursuits to advantage, and our advices are that they are setting to work with all that energy and spirit which characterizes the people from whom they have received their instruction."

The Extraordinary does not greatly admire this contemplated accession to the population of the Republic.

RATTLESNAKE IN A MACHINE SHOP.—A day or two since, a large rattlesnake, with seven rattles, was killed in Kellogg's foundry in this city. For a week or more previous, the workmen in passing a heap of old iron and castings that had accumulated in one corner, had heard a rattling noise, but paid no attention to it.

On the day in question, a workman was poking about in the heap for a piece of old iron, having a broomstick in his hand, when his make-ship came out, much to the astonishment of all, and was speedily dispatched. Where he came from, or how long he had been there, is not known.—Tribune.

REMARKABLE RUN OF BAD LUCK.—The New York Times relates that a merchant in that city received a remittance from one of his correspondents, in the shape of a draft on the Ohio Life and Trust Company for $3,000, on the very day on which that institution closed its doors. He immediately telegraphed the fact to his debtor, who sent him another draft on John Thompson, which arrived the day after the failure of that broker; the merchant again telegraphed the failure, and received in a few days another draft on Atwood & Co., just as that firm suspended.

AN OLD MAN'S WORK.—Mr. Demming, a farmer of this country, seventy-two years of age, raised this year—the products of his own hands—seven hundred bushels of wheat. There is but little cause for surprise in the abundance of our crops, when our old men, who have lived over the allotted three score and ten years, have such fruits to show as the products of their labor. Egypt is not only a producter of corn, wheat and rye, but of men of bones and sinew, who stoutly contest the encroachment of old age, and have more of nerve and strength about them than half the young men of this enlightened North. Mr. Demming has been a resident of this country for many years, and from present appearances bids fair to live many more.—Jonesboro' Gazette.

GREAT SLAUGHTER.—Two hunters killed 54 rattlesnakes on the 23rd of August on Rattlesnake Hill, Sullivan Co. There were besides in embryo, more than 1,000. Twenty four were taken from one venerable head of a great many broods. Many of the old ones were three and four feet long.

The Paris Pays says:—"We learn by a letter from London, of the 19th, that permission has been definitely granted for the passage of English troops across the Isthmus of Suez. The troops will take the railway, and will find at Suez boats taken up at Calcutta by the East India Company waiting for them. According to arrangements made by agents of the company, these ships were to be in the Red Sea by the end of August at the latest. The authorization granted by the Viceroy of Egypt does not extend to the future; it is only temporary, and special for the existing occasion."

AN IMMENSE FUND. — The "Patriotic Fund," subscribed in Great Britain and her provinces, and by British residents and others of foreign countries, for the benefit of the soldiers who suffered in the late Russian war, their wives and children, was one of the largest of that character ever collected. Prince Albert, chairman of the commissioners to distribute the fund, lately stated in an address to Queen Victoria, that the total amount was £1,441,984, or over seven millions of dollars. Of this amount £105 was received from Lawrence, Massachusetts; £1738 from New York; £850 from New Orleans; £950 from San Francisco; £17 from Davenport, Iowa; and £152 from Philadelphia. Of the whole, the commissioners have appropriated £38,000 for the erection of an asylum for the reception of three hundred of the orphan daughters of soldiers, sailors and marines, and have endowed it with £700,000. The foundation stone was laid in the presence of the Queen.

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature.

The Laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of share - - -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years -	96.
Total - - - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.
And for three years 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each shares.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

EDMUND ANDERSON.
Sec. & Treasurer.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless, tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influences

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. ASORE ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world, proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivelled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,
Gout,	Sore Throats,

How to Farm Profitably, Particularly on Stiff Heavy Soils.

BY MR. SHERIFF MECHI, LONDON.

We have read this pamphlet with much interest. Mr. Sheriff Mechi gives full particulars of his management, and shows that if good husbandry will not pay—then in Great Britain there is no husbandry that will. He concludes his pamphlet of about 40 pages, as follows:—

"Take my own case as an illustration of the principle which I am endeavouring to enforce. The original rental of my farm was a little over 20s per acre. It is now more than double that sum, the excess being interest on improvements; now instead of £1 per acre difference in the crops as compared with what they used to be, 14 years experience has taught me that the difference is from £3 to £5 per acre, and in some crops £7 to £9 per acre. The average yield of the crops now and before the improvements may be represented as five to three at the very least. On comparing notes with an intelligent neighbour of mine, he admitted that my extra expenses of £2 per acre, as compared with his, were more then compensated in my increased crops. In conclusion, if I find a heavy land farm properly drained, free from unnecessary fences, with good covered yards centrally placed, and proper and modern machinery, if I find it free from weeds, and above all, if I know that on that arable farm at least 200 lbs. weight of meat is made per acre per annum, the result must be a certain profit. Nothing can prevent this but gross mismanagement or ignorance of the business. But how few such farms does merry England exhibit! Truth, replies, how few!!! All my life it has been my habit, in order to arrive at truth, to examine and compare various systems, with a view to form a judgment on the facts. I am quite satisfied that the mass of mankind do not adopt my practice, else it would be impossible that such miserable and unprofitable discrepancies could exist in Agriculture. There are none so blind as those who will not see, and if self interest will not prompt our landlords and tenants mutually to improve, nothing that I can say can have that desirable effect.

"The food question is an important one; a month's holiday to the British stomach would settle all our manufactures, commerce and philosophy. We must make the acres we have yield up a large increase, as we cannot extend them. It is true we are enabled to get corn from our neighbors at a paying for it, but meat we cannot get, and unless much more meat is produced per acre than at present the prices will naturally rise much higher, and cramp consumption. I can scarcely have patience, when asked, "But where is the money to come from for all these improvements?" when I see daily the tendency to invest in every new speculation, British or foreign, except "National Agricultural Improvement." In conclusion, having proved my case, and exposed my farm for many years to public inspection, it is now my intention to sit down quietly and enjoy the privacy of agricultural peace and plenty."

The time is at hand when in Canada we shall have to depend upon improved farming if we expect farming to pay.

Currant Wine.

This article, as usually manufactured, is rather a cordial than a wine, and is entirely inferior to the commonest imported wine; but when properly made, it will be found to be a very superior healthy beverage, particularly for summer drink when fully diluted with water.

We have experimented carefully on the making of currant wine, and the following will be found to give a result which we have found no difficulty in selling in large quantities at $1 per gallon.

Before pressing the juice from the currants pass them between a pair of rollers to crush them after which they may be placed in a strong bag and they will part with the juice readily by light pressure, such as a common screw, heavy weights, &c. To each quart of juice add three pounds double refined sugar, single refined sugar is not sufficiently pure—then add as much water as will make one gallon. Or in other words, suppose the cask intended to be used to be 30 gallons. In this put 30 quarts of currant juice, 90 lbs. of double refined sugar, and fill the cask to the bung with water; roll it over till the sugar is all disolved. This will be told by its ceasing to rattle in the barrel. Next day roll it again and place it in a cellar, where the temperature is sure to be even. Leave the bung loose for the free admission of air. In the course of two or three days, fermentation will commence. By placing the ear to the bung hole, a slight noise will be heard, such as may be observed when carbonic acid is escaping from champagne or soda water. Fermentation will continue for a few weeks, converting the sugar into alcohol. As soon as this ceases, drive the bung in tightly, and leave the cask for six months—the wine may be drawn off perfectly clear without any excess of sweetness.

The reason why double refined sugar should be used may be thus understood. Ordinary sugar contains one-half per cent. of gum, which, when disolved in water becomes fetid. Suppose then, four or five ounces of gum disolved in a barrel of water, we can easily understand that at the end of a few months this water will be very foul in flavour.

No alcohol should be added. The practice of putting in small quantities of brandy and other liquors makes a cordial and not wine. All the sugar used may be as recommended as at least to change its character chemically, and this change will produce all the alcohol required.—Working Farmer.

Raising Stock.

The rearing of good dairy stock is an object of great importance to the farmer. The cow ranks high among our domestic animals. Probably no other is of more importance to us. She furnishes both the necessaries and luxuries of life. To the farmer she is a source of both luxury and profit. How desirable, then, that in rearing dairy stock, he should produce animals of the best qualities for his purpose! And the question, how this can best be accomplished, is one of much interest to breeders of neat stock. If "like produces like," too much care and skill can hardly be exercised by the breeder in the selection of his breeding animals. He should select such as have the style and qualities desired in their offspring.

In rearing heifers for the dairy, such should be chosen as have descended from good milking stock. It is not only important that the dam should have been a good milker, but equally so that the sire should have been bred from a good milking race. It is generally believed by breeders of experience that the male has as much influence upon the milking qualities of the progeny as the female. Hence the necessity of having well selected males as well as females, in attempting to rear good stock for the dairy. The breeder should not only use superior animals to breed from, but reserve for himself the better portion of their progeny. If a heifer shows an aptitude to fatten easily, she is considered worth more for the shambles than the dairy, and consequently, goes into the hands of the butcher; while some hard-bided one, which could not easily be fattened is reserved for the milk pail.

The opinion is very prevalent among farmers that a heifer that takes on flesh rapidly will not make a good milker. Perhaps the fact that most good milkers become thin of flesh when in full milk leads to this opinion. But such cows generally fatten quickly when dry. It would seem that the fact of a heifer's fattening easily, should lead to the belief that she would make a good cow for butter, her aptitude to fatten showing her system to be such, that all the carbon of her food is not required for heat and respiration.—*Flint's ag. A Few Hints on the Regulations of Time in Cookery.

MUTTON.—A leg of 8lbs. will require two hours and a half. A chine or saddle, of 10 or 11lbs, two hours and a half. A shoulder of 7lbs, one hour and a half. A loin of 7lbs., one hour and three quarters. A neck and breast, about the same time as a loin.

BEEF.—The sirloin of 18lbs, from three hours and three-quarters to four hours. Rib of beef from 14 to 20lbs., will take three hours to three hours and a half.

VEAL.—A fillet from 12 to 16lbs. will take from four to five hours at a good fire. A loin, upon the average, will take three hours. A shoulder, from three hours to three hours and a half. A neck, two hours. A breast, from an hour and a half to two hours.

LAMB.—Hind-quarter of 8lbs. will take from an hour and three-quarters to two hours. Fore-quarter of 10lbs., about two hours. Leg of 8lbs., from an hour and a quarter to an hour and a half. Shoulder or breast, with a nice fire, an hour.

PORK.—A leg of 8lbs. will require about three hours. Griskin, an hour and a half. A spare-rib of 8 or 9lbs. will take from two hours and a half to three hours to roast it thoroughly. A bald spare-rib of 8lbs., an hour and a quarter. A loin of 8lbs., if very fat, two hours to two hours and a half. A suc ing-pig of three weeks old, about an hour and a half.

POULTRY.—A very large turkey will require about three hours; one of 10lbs., two hours. A small one, an hour and a half.

A full-grown fowl, an hour and a quarter; a moderate one, an hour.

A pullet, from half an hour to forty minutes.

A goose, full grown, from an hour and a half to two hours.

A green goose, forty minutes.

A duck, full size, from thirty to fifty minutes.

VENISON.—A buck haunch which weighs from 20 to 25lbs. will take about four hours and a half roasting. One from 12 to 18lbs. will take three hours and a quarter.

CANDLES.—Very hard and durable candles are made in the following manner: Melt together ten ounces of mutton tallow, a quarter of an ounce of camphor, four ounces of beeswax, and two ounces of alum. Candles made of these materials burn with a very clear light.

TAINTED BUTTER.—Some good cooks say that bad butter may be purified in the following manner: Melt and skim it, but do not let it boil. Then put into a pan of well-toasted bread; in a few minutes the butter will lose its offensive taste and smell; the bread will absorb it all. Slices of potatoe fried in rancid lard will in a great measure absorb the unpleasant taste.

WHEN A NAIL OR PIN HAS BEEN RUN INTO THE FOOT, instantly bind on a rind of salt pork; if the foot swell bathe it in a strong decoction of wormwood, then bind on another rind of pork, and keep quiet till the wound is well. The lockjaw is often caused by such wounds, if neglected.

COLOGNE WATER.—One pint of alcohol, sixty drops of lavender, sixty drops of bergamot, sixty drops of essence of lemon, sixty drops of orange-water. To be corked up, and well shaken. It is better for considerable age.

TO MAKE LEMON SYRUP.—The lemon syrup, usually sold at fifty cents a bottle, may be made much cheaper. Those who use a great quantity of it will find it worth their while to make it. Take about a pound of Havana sugar; boil it in water down to a quart; drop in the white of an egg, to clarify it, strain it; add one quarter of an ounce of tartaric acid, or citric acid; let it cool and bottle it. It can be used after it has stood two or three days and shaken freely, add more of the acid. A few drops of the oil of lemon improves it.

TO CLEAN PAINT.—Rub it over with a bit of flannel dipped in sweet oil—then rub it hard with finely powdered rotten stone—then rub it with a soft linen cloth, and polish with a bit of wash leather.

TO MAKE BLACKING.—Three ounces of ivory black; two ounces of treacle; half an ounce of vitriol; half an ounce of sweet oil: quarter of a pint of vinegar, and three-quarters of a pint of water. Mix the oil, treacle, and ivory black, gradually to a paste; then add the vitriol, and by degrees, the vinegar and water. It will produce a beautiful polish.

TO PREVENT THE SMOKING OF A LAMP.—Soak the wick in strong vinegar, and dry it well before you use it; it will then burn both sweet and pleasant, and give much satisfaction for the trifling trouble in preparing it.

Cease railing at Fortune,
Meet life with a kiss,
Nor needlessly wish it
One cycle of bliss;

For cares but embelish
Our seasons of joy,
Like feathery cloudlets
That sprinkle the sky.

Cease railing at Fortune,
Take life as it comes;
If wanting its dainties
Make glad o'er the crumbs.

Each little is sweet, if
A smile the lip wears,
But bitter the morsel
When moistened with tears.

Mirth and Wit.

An Irish girl, residing with a family near this city, was ordered to hang the washed clothes on the horse in the kitchen, to dry. Her mistress shortly after, found a very gentle family horse standing in the kitchen completely covered with the different articles that had been washed that day. Upon interrogating the girl, the reply was, "Och, to be sure, ye tould me to hang the clothes upon the horse in the kitchen, and the baste is the kindest I ever saw sure."

A lady up town cleared her house of flies by putting honey on her husband's whiskers, when he was asleep. The flies stuck fast, and, when he went out of the house, he carried them off with him.

"Facts are stubborn things," said a lawyer to a female witness under examination. The lady replied: "Yes sir-ee, and so are women, and if you get anything out of me, just let me know it," "You'll be committed for contempt." "Very well, I'll suffer justly for I feel the utmost contempt for every lawyer present.

"Well, young man, your business?" "Why, I heer'd as how you teach navigation, so I thought I'd come in and larn it this afternoon, "cause I'm going to sea in mornin'; dad is capting, and I'm mate."

"Sally, said a fellow to a girl, that had red hair. "keep away from me, or you will set me a fire." "No danger of that,' was the answer, "you are too green to burn."

"James, now I will hear your lesson," said a schoolmaster to a little urchin, who was not in the habit of studying much. "Guesh not, thir; daddy thaith little boys should be theen, and not heard."

A farmer when flagellating two of his unruly boys, was asked what he was doing. "thrashing wild oats," was his reply.

A quaker seeing a dog making off with a piece of meat out of his house, seized the thief and said "Friend, I'll not kill thee, but I'll give thee a bad name; by saying he set it off down street, crying at the same time "Mad Dog!" the consequence was, the dog was killed before it reached the end of the street.

"John," said a father to his son one day, when he caught him shaving the down off his upper lip, "don't throw your shaving water where there are any barefooted boys, for they might get their feet pricked."

"What is the cause of the potato rot?" "It is to be attributed to the rot-ta-tor-y motion of the earth." "How was this ascertained?" "By consulting a great many common-tators."

An English writer says, in his advice to young married women, that their mother Eve "married a gardener." It might be added that the gardener, in consequence of his match, lost his situation.

A gentleman, if aggrieved, has a right to pull a blackguard's ears, but he should on no account cut them off. They should be left on for the accommodation of other aggrieved parties.

"I didn't like your minister's sermon last Sunday," said a deacon, who slept all sermon time, to a brother deacon. "Didn't like it, brother A? Why I saw you nodding assent to every proposition of the parson."

Mrs. Partington says, if she should ever be cast away, she would prefer meeting with the catastrophe in the "Bay of Biscuits," so that she should have something to live on.

"Why haven't you brought back the umbrella you borrowed of me, Sam?" "Ah, fa ther always told me to lay up something for a rainy day."

"Is molasses good for a cough?" inquired a chap with a shght cold. "It ought to be," was the reply; "it is cold for consumption.

THE TEACHER POSED.—A teacher asked a bright little girl, "What country is opposite us on the globe?" "Don't know, sir" was the answer. "Well now," pursued the teacher, "if I were to bore a hole through the earth, and you were to go in at this end, where would you come out?" "Out of the hole sir!" replied the pupil, with an air of triumph.

TAKING IT LITERALLY.—"What are you doing with that lumber?" cried a steamboat captain to an Irishman who was staggering towards the boat beneath the weight of a huge plank, just as the bell was ringing for the last time—"What am I doing? Sure wasn't it yourself as said, all ye's as is going get a board, and isn't this an illegant one entirely?" said the Hibernian, triumphantly, amid the laughter of the spectators. The captain gave him his "board" and passage that trip.

Song.

BY WM. W. POSTER.

We were very poor together, Mary,
A wee, small flock was mine,
Two cows alone were all thy dairy,
In happy days, langsyne.—
At morn I was so happy then
To tread the mount and moor,
At eve to clasp thee once again,
When we were very poor.

Oft the castle on the hill was glowing,
With many a window bright,
And many a crystal cup was flowing
With ruby wine, by night;
But on the heath our little cot
Sat hidden, dark and damp;
But I was happy with my lot,
For Mary was my lamp.

I have gained the golden gear, and sorrow,
I've a world of wealth and wo,
But no eye awaits me on the morrow
Like the one I used to know!
Oh! Give me back my wee wife,
My small cot on the moor;
For joy has left me lone in life,
Since we were very poor.

Finding a Husband.

BY PEGGY MOREHEAD.

"Uncle, may I ride Milo?" I said, one bright June morning, as we sat at breakfast table.

"Ride Milo?"

"Yes! it's such a beautiful day."

"But he'll throw you?"

"Throw me?" And I laughed merrily and incredulously. "Say yes, uncle dear," I continued, coaxingly, "there's nothing to fear; and I'm dying for a canter."

"You'll die of a canter, then," he retorted, with his grim wit, "for he'll break your neck. The horse has only been ridden three times, twice by myself, and once by Joe."

"But you've often said I was a better rider than Joe.—Joe was the stable boy.—That's a good uncle, now do." And I threw my arms about his neck and kissed him.

I knew by experience, that when I did this I generally carried the day. My uncle tried to look stern, but I saw he was relenting. He made a last effort, however, to deny me.

"Why not take Dobbin?" he said.

"Dobbin?" I cried. "Old snail paced Dobbin on such a morning as this. One might as well ride a rocking horse at once."

"Well, well," said he, "if I must, I must. You'll tease the life out of me if I don't let you have your own way. I wish you'd get a husband, you minx, you're growing beyond my control."

"Humph! A husband! Well, since you say so, I'll begin to look out for one to-day."

"He'll soon repent of his bargain," said my uncle, but his smile belied his words. "You're as cross as pie-crust if you can't have your own way. There," seeing I was about to speak, "I said get ready, while I tell Joe to saddle Milo. You'll set the house afire, if I don't send you off."

Milo was soon at the door, a gay, mettlesome colt, who laid his ears back as I mounted, and gave me a vicious look I did not quite like.

"Take care," said my uncle. "It's not too late yet to give it up."

I was piqued.

"I never give up anything," I said.

"Not even the finding of a husband, eh?"

"No. I'll ride down to the old poor house, and ask old Toby, the pauper, to have me, and you'll be forced to hire Poll Wilkes to cook your dinner." And as I said this, my eyes twinkled mischievously, for uncle was an old bachelor, who detested all strange women, and had an especial aversion to Poll Wilkes, a sour old maid of forty-seven, because, years ago, she had plotted to entrap him into matrimony.—Before he could reply, I gave Milo his head.

John Gilpin, we are told, went fast: but I went faster. At first I tried to check his speed, but he got the bit in his teeth, and all I could do was to hold on and trust to tiring him out. Trees, fences and houses went by us like pigeons on the wing. As long as the road was clear, we did well enough, but suddenly coming to a blasted oak, that peeped from the edge of a wood, Milo shied, twisted half around, and planted his forefeet stubbornly in the ground. I did not know I was falling till I felt myself in a mud hole, which lay at one side of the road.

Here was a fine end to my boasted horsemanship! But as the mud was soft, I was not hurt, and the ludicrous spectacle I presented, soon got the upper hand of my vexation. "A fine chance I have of finding a husband in this condition," I said to myself, recalling my jest with uncle. "If I could see some maid dryad now, and passed myself off for a muse, perhaps I might have a chance." And I began to pick myself up.

"Shall I help you, Miss?" suddenly said a deep, rich, manly voice.

I looked up, and saw a young man, the suppressed merriment of whose black eyes brought the blood to my cheek, and made me, for an instant, ashamed and angry. But on glancing again at my dress, I could not help laughing in spite of myself. I stood in the mud, at least six inches above the tops of my shoes. My riding skirt was plastered all over, so that it was almost impossible to tell of what it was made. My hands and arms were mud to the elbows, for I had instinctively extended them as I fell in order to save myself.

The young man, as he spoke, turned to the neighboring fence, and taking off the top rail, placed it across the puddle, then putting his arm around my waist, he lifted me out, though not without leaving my shoes behind. While he was fishing these out, which he began immediately to do, I stole behind the enormous old oak, to hide my blushing face, and scrape the mud off my stockings and riding skirt. I had managed to get the first a little cleaner, but the last was still as thick with mud as ever, when my companion made his appearance with the missing shoes, which he had scraped till they were quite presentable, and leading Milo by the bridle.

"Pray, let me see you home," he said.—"If you will mount again, I'll lead the colt; and there will be no chance for his repeating his tricks."

I could not answer for shame. But when in the saddle I muttered something about, "not troubling him."

"It's no trouble, not the least," he replied standing but in hand like a knightly cavalier, and still retaining his hold on the bridle, "and I really can't let you go alone, for the colt is as vicious as he can be to-day.—Look at his ears and the red in his eyes. I saw you coming down the road, and expected you to be thrown every minute, till I saw how well you rode. Nor would it have happened if he hadn't wheeled and stopped like a trick-horse in the circus."

I cannot tell how soothing was this gracefully way of excusing my mishap. I stole a glance under my eyelids at the speaker, and said that he was very handsome and gentlemanly, and apparently about six and-twenty, or several years older than myself.

I had hoped that uncle would be out in the fields overlooking the men; but as we entered the gate, I saw him sitting provokingly at the open window; and by the time I had sprung to the ground, he had come out, his eyes brim full of mischief. I said, "My uncle, sir; won't you wa k in?" and then rushed up stairs.

In about half an hour, just as I had dressed, there was a knock at my door, my uncle's knock. I could not but open. He was laughing, but a low, silent laugh, his portly body shaking all over with suppressed merriment.

"Ah! ready at last," he said, "I began to despair of you, you were so long, and came to lunch soon. He's waiting in the parlor still," he said in a malicious whisper. "You've my consent, for I like him hugely, only who'd have thought of finding a husband in a mud-puddle?"

I slipt past my tormenter, preferring to face even my uncle, than run the gauntlet of uncle's wit; and was soon stammering my thanks to Mr. Templeton, for as such my uncle, who followed me down, introduced him.

To make short of what would be a long story, what was in jest turned out to be earnest; for in less than six months, in that very room, I stood up to become Mrs Templeton. How it all came about I hardly know. But I certainly did find a husband on that day. Harry, for that is the name by which I call Mr. Templeton, says, that I entered the parlor so transformed, my light blue tissue floating about me so like a cloud wreath, my cheeks so rosy, my eyes so bright, my curls playing such hide and seek about my face, that not expecting such an apparition, he lost his heart at once. He adds, for he still knows how to compliment as well as ever, that my gay yet intelligent talk, so differed from the demure Miss he had expected, completed the business.

Harry was the son of an old neighbor, who had been abroad for three years, and before that he had been at college, so that I had never seen him; but uncle remembered him at once, and had insisted on his staying until I came down, though Harry, from delicacy, would have left after an inquiry about my health. My uncle was one of those who would not be put off, and so Harry remained, "the luckiest thing," said he, "I ever did."

Milo is now my favorite steed, for Harry broke him for me, and we are all as happy as the day is long, uncle included; for uncle insisted on our living with him, and I told him at last I would consent, "if only to keep Poll Wilkes from cooking his dinners." To which he answered, looking at Harry, "you see what a little spitfire she is, and you may bless your stars if you don't rue the day she went out to find a husband."

Miscellany.

A BALM FOR A WOUND.—Two gentlemen were walking together in Paris. "I will engage," said one to the other, "to give the man before me a good kicking, and yet he shall not be angry." He did as he had undertaken to do. The stranger turned round and looked astonished. "I beg your pardon," said the kicker, "I took you for the Duke de la Tremouille." The duke was very handsome; the man was very plain. He was gratified by the mistake under which he believed he had suffered, turned himself, smiled, bowed and went on his way.

The New York Times gives the following description of the United States soldier: "The American soldier from the day of his enlistment to that of his discharge, passes from swamp to swamp, and forest to forest, sees no human faces but those of his companions in misfortune, nows no excitement better than fighting with a foe whom it is no glory to conquer, has no hopes of advancement, lives wretchedly and perishes obscurely. Change of quarters brings no relief. His condition is not much improved by being transferred from the banks of the Colorado to the Everglades. A march to the Salt Lake is not a very pleasing variety after scouting in Florida. The officers are buoyed up under this terrible task, by the influence and resources of education, by the voice of honor and the hope of distinction. But whence shall the poor Irish and German, who compose the rank and file, derive their con olation?

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—It is dangerous to suppress an abcess with the astringent ointments in common use.—Holloway's famous unguent operates on a different principle. It does not close the issue superficially, while "Foul corruption mining all within, Infects unseen;"

but purges the cavity of all acrid and inflammatory matter, and expels every particle of the poisonous virus which generates the pus. Consequently, there is no danger of the disease breaking out in another place. The same principle applies in all eruptive and glandular affections.—The Pills, which are a certain remedy for all complaints of the stomach, liver, and bowels, may be beneficially used as an aperient medicine, while the ointment is removing any external disorder.

The Philadelphia "Public Ledger" kindly assures the British public that the United States have no notion at present of annexing Canada, because "the Canadians are not a people homogeneous with ourselves. But the "Public Ledger" thinks that we are becoming daily more homogeneous to the Yankees, and that therefore our annexation to the States will take place some day. Time not stated. But it will be about that fabulous period which comes neither before nor after Christmas. Instead of becoming more homogeneous to the United States, we are becoming, if not more British, at least more Canadian, if we may be permitted the use of the term. The number of Yankees in the country may be increasing; but that is no reason why our love of republican institutions should increase, but rather the contrary.—Colonist

A KICKING PARTY.—A party of gentlemen in Massachusetts, being attracted by the cry for help of a lady whom a ruffian had insulted chased him, dragged him out of the river into which for revenge he had waded up to his chin, and it being unanimously decided to kick him, a ring was formed, and the scoundrel "booted" by a dozen pair of sturdy legs till they could kick no more.

VACCINATION BY THE TONGUE.—"So sensitive, so porous, and so powerfully absorbent is the human tongue, that were not the idea repulsive, the application of a quill of vaccine virus to that organ for one minute, would perfectly vacciuate a person, as if it had followed the lancet in the arm." So says our medical friend, Dr. Coggswell, of Boston, the discoverer of the Amphilogistic Salt, which he introduces into the system through the tongue, thereby subduing the inflammation of every form, as he claims it will do.—York Pennsylvanian.

THE DUBLIN CARMEN.—Witty things innumerable are said of the Dublin carmen; one is, that on a wet day, driving an English fare through Sackville street, as they passed the General Post Office, the entablature of which is surmounted by three allegorical figures, the Briton called out—"What are those statues, driver?" "On the front of the Post Office!" asked Pat, from between his coat collar; "They are the Twelve Apostles, your honor." "Twelve Apostles," muttered the Briton contemptuously, "there are only three there." "Lord bless your sowl, sir," was the response, "sure you would not have them all out this murthering wet day."

INGENIOUS TORTURE.—The Chinese have invented a new species of Torture. They fasten round the neck of a malefactor, the "all round collar," such as is worn by swells and fashionables in England. They then take the malefactor out to some public place, and make him promenade up and down for several hours at a stretch. The effect is not only painful, but extremely ridiculous, and, inasmuch as the poor devil cannot move his head either to the right or to the left, the inflictor changes wooden collar of the populace to such a degree that it is as much as the unfortunate victim can do to submit patiently to the sarcasms of the mob without resenting them. Criminals dread this form of punishment a thousand times worse than the ordinary pillory, or the wicker cages, or the mange wooden collar that is usually suspended over the shoulders of offenders that are exposed in public. It is called the "ENGLISH TORTURE," and causes a shudder every time it is exhibited.—Punch.

TAKING OUT AN EYE TO MEND IT.—The Leipsic Journal of Literature, Science and Art publishes an account of the wonderful discoveries of Dr. Graefi in diseases of the eye and the wonderful cures he performs. He has found the ball of the eye to be transparent, by a curious instrument, examines minutely the interior, takes it out and performs any necessary surgical operation and replaces it without injury to its appearance or vision. A young girl had been long affected with the most exercisiting pain in the left eye, the cause of which the most learned could not understand. Dr. Graefi found in the centre of the ball a little worm, which he removed, and restored the poor creature immediately to health and perfect sight.

"This book tells about the 'angry waves of the ocean.' Now, what makes the ocean angry?" "Because it has been crossed so often."

Extraordinary Court Scene on the Acquittal of Spollen.

There was quite a scene in court on the rendition of the verdict of acquittal in the case of Mr. Little, at Dublin, as will be seen from the following report:—

At 10 minutes past 4 o'clock the jury came into the box, and the foreman handed down the issue paper.

Mr. Alley, the Clerk of the Crown, having called over the names of the jurors, said —Gentlemen of the jury, do you agree to your verdict?

Foreman—Yes.

Clerk of the Crown.—You say James Spollen is Not Guilty. (Some applause in the gallery, which was immediately suppressed.)

The prisoner, on the entrance of the jury, had stood up from his seat in the dock and leaned forward on the bar, manifestly endeavoring to maintain his self possession. Immediately on hearing the finding he sank into the arms of the jailers in a half fainting condition. His necktie was loosened by thcse about him, and his face and head were bathed with water. While in this state he audibly uttered the words "My children." In the meantime.

The Foreman of the Jury said,—My lords, we hope that from the long attendance we have had in this case that we shall be exempt from attending on trials for some time.

Chief Justice Monahan—This is the last case, gentlemen. The business of the commission has concluded.

The Foreman—Oh, but on future occasions. We would wish to be exempt for a year or so.

Chief Justice.—Oh, I have no power to do so.

The prisoner having now recovered, came forward to the bar, and in a somewhat broken manner addressed the court as follows:

"Well, my lords and gentlemen, I find that I am not exactly deceived. My conviction was fixed that I stood before 12 of my countrymen—men of age, experience, and that had happy firesides, and confidence in their family circles. I thought that they would impartially take my case into consideration, and they have done so. It is not for me to commence to praise myself, but I have been brought here in a wrongful way —wrongfully by—I will not condemn the woman.

I always liked the man, and I loved the woman—but it is a fearful thing to be in the hands of a female bigress. I should have returned thanks to the two gentlemen, pillars of the law, on the bench. I may be too sensitive when I say the servants of the Crown have blackened my character too much in their addresses to the jury. I have, however, thanks be to God, escaped, (raising his hands,) thanks and praises be to God! Amen. (Here the prisoner sat down on the chair in the dock; but immediately rose and began speaking again.)—My character, I am afraid, must remain triflingly impaired—by children, the only ones I love, I have to provide for. The prisoner here again was overcome by his feelings.) If I had means to retire to some—

Chief Justice Monahan—Is there any other charge against the prisoner?

Governor of the Gaol—No, my Lord.

Spollen proceeding—If I can find means of retiring to an asylum in some of the colonies where I can continue for the remainder of my life to support existence, and to—

Chief Justice Lefroy—Do the Crown intend to proceed with any other charge against the prisoner?

Mr. O'Donoghoe—I am not instructed that the Crown intend to proceed with any other charge against the prisoner.

Spollen proceeded to say—To the gentlemen of the press I return my sincere and hearty thanks for the manner in which they remained silent during my incarceration.—As for shaking hands it would be foolish in me to do so. The public witnessed the untiring energy and scrutiny with which, as the gentleman himself said, he had grown old in the service, your hon. friend Mr. Curran, my counsel, and the untiring energy he displayed. But he is not so old in the service that he does not return a large fund of that which will go to support many and many a poor client beneath his able hands. May he live many a day with a similar case as mine to defend.

(Sounds of cheering outside the courthouse became audible as soon as the news of the verdict had passed out.)

Mr. Curran.—It would be well if the prisoner were not discharged immediately, as there are great crowds outside.

Mr. Sidney.—Your Lordship will please not do this discharge.

Chief justice Monahan.—He is now formally discharged by the jury and the court.

Mr. Sidney.—The jailer will kindly assist him in retiring privately.

The Court was then adjourned.

TURNING THE WORKHOUSES.—The Cork papers state, that on Monday Mr. Chaunt, an agent of the Land and Emigration Commissioners, attended at the workhouse for the purpose of select ng fifty women to be sent, under the grant recently made, to the Cape of Good Hope. The Home Government has made arrangements with the colonial authorities, that they shall receive protection until provided for either by marriage or in service. Mr. Chaunt expressed himself very much pleased with the classes of women he observed, and named about eighty out of whom the required fifty are finally to be selected. Most of these women have been five, six, and some even ten years in the workhouse—a continual burthen on the already heavily tested resources of the union.

On the Manufacture of Ashes.

Having received a number of letters asking various questions respecting Ashes, we have procured the following information from the Inspectors, who are desirous of doing all in their power to promote the interest of the manufacturers and the country:

The usual causes of inferiority in Ashes are, in the first place, dirty leys,—the leeching process not being sufficiently perfect, and the raw material in many cases being sold ashes mixed with a large proportion of dirt.

The next cause is adulterating the ashes with lime, salt, sand, &c. Salt should in no case be used, and lime only, in the leeches. On no account should stones, wood, raw ashes, lime, straw or dirt be put in to fill up a barrel.

The next cause is using weak leys. The last run of the leeches, when not able to float an egg or a potato, should never be boiled, but kept to wet the next leeches.

Another cause is bad barrels. Whiskey barrels green or unseasoned casks, or casks the wood of which contains moisture of any kind, will cause the ashes to deteriorate rapidly. White Oak and White Ash casks are much preferable, and Red Oak should never be used where it can be avoided—all well seasoned.

Ashes should be emptied by coolers into the barrel, two coolers being just sufficient to fill one barrel, and there should be as little breaking of Pot Ashes as possible, as the more they are broken the more rapidly do they deteriorate by the suction of the air. Ashes should never on any occasion be packed hot into the barrels.

If the ashes have begun to melt before packing, the cakes may be rubbed with dry slacked lime to prevent further melting, but lime or raw ashes should never be thrown loosely over them as this injures the appearance and must be separated on inspection.

Barrels should weigh at least 75lbs when thoroughly seasoned, and they should be accurately weighed, and that weight legibly marked on the barrel before packing. They should be packed quite full, and should be covered with solid round hoops to the extent of two-thirds of the barrel. The dimensions of the barrels used should be 20 to 22 inches diameter of head, and 30 to 32 length of stave over or under, being condemned by law. The mark should be quite legible, and only one plain mark and number should be on each; as when there are two or three marks, there is more liability to confusion.

After packing, the barrels should be well coopered, with three shingle nails in the end hoops of each, to prevent the heads from falling out, and put in a dry place where they will not be exposed to moisture.

The grades by law established are first, second and third sorts, and then unbrand able Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, each grade being an additional eighth off the selling price of Firsts. Thus, unbrandable No. 4 has seven-eighths of the price of Firsts deducted, and No. 5 would sell for just nothing.

Firsts Ashes should contain 75 per cent of pure alkali, at least.—Exchange.

A Thousand Miles in a Thousand Hours.

[From the Boston Post, Sept. 8.]

At half-past two o'clock this morning, James Lambert accomplished his task of walking 1000 miles in 1000 consecutive hours at Boylesion Hall, and thereby completed one of the most remarkable feats in pedestrianism upon record. Such a contempt for the demands of nature as he has evinced during this trial, tasking his energies to their utmost in the endeavour to perform a deed which all reasonable people would justly consider impossible, has excited more than usual interest for his undertaking. He commenced at 10 a. m., on Tuesday July 28, and, as stated, retired sine die from the ring this morning shortly after 2 o'clock having walked one mile in every hour for nearly forty-two days. His fatigue two weeks since was so great that even his friends abandoned all hope of his success; but he was "on his muscle," and, as he affirmed, "would walk until he fell upon the track." Within the last few days, that weariness and stupor had greatly increased; and in walking his mile, after being aroused from slumber only by great exertion, he would stagger and exhibit other signs of extreme lassitude. He was in this state up on the completion of the last mile.

The number of spectators throughout the day yesterday was very large, and at even the late (or early) hour to which the completion of the affair was brought this morning there were crowds in attendance. He made his first mile in about ten minutes and his last in over double that time. At the signal which signified the termination of the 1,000th mile, the pedestrian was warmly cheered and the company followed him on sample by retiring to their various places of rest. It is said that Lambert will receive about $2,000 as the result of this affair. The parties betting against him are New Yorkers, and they have had present here two representatives who alternated in "seeing fair play."

As Lambert will now have an opportunity of answering the requirements of his exhausted condition, it will be necessary to use the greater care in regard to him for fear that he should sleep forever. His physician prescribes thorough washing and cooling after every three hours' rest, and by a strict adherence to this treatment it is hoped that Lambert may regain his former strength. Since he commenced walking he has lost fourteen pounds of flesh, and now weighs but 113 pounds.

Monetary Affairs in New York.

Although there is considerable stringency still existing in the New York money market, monetary affairs are improving, as will be seen from the following statement from the Courier and Enquirer, of Friday:—

"The simple truth is, that the disastrous and unexpected failure of the Ohio Life and Trust Co. produced a panic; and under the influence of that panic, securities of every kind depreciated, and the city banks curtailed their loans from $120,139,382 to $112,221,365—a clear reduction of $7,918,217, or eight millions of dollars in twelve business days! That this great reduction of loans, and some two or three millions in addition, was necessary, there can be no reasonable doubt—any more than it can be doubted that the increase of their loans seven millions of dollars during the five weeks between the 3d July and 8th of August, was uncalled for, and not warranted by the state of the country. But while we admit the necessity of this curtailment in the loans of the banks, we deny most empatically that there was any necessity for doing it under the influence of a panic,—and thus attempting to correct in two weeks an error which could only be legitimately remedied by a gradual curtailment through the many months between the 1st September and the 1st January. To have curtailed one million a week from the 1st of September to the 1st of November would have been for safer than to have done what has been done during the last two weeks. * * This community was never richer or more solvent than at this moment. There never was a better debt created than the $112,000,000 now due the banks of this city by our business men; but let these banks persevere in the course pursued during the last two weeks, that is, let them reduce their loans from $112,000,000 to $104,000,000 by the 19th September—and in our judgment, and that of the best financiers in this community, their debt of $112,000,000 would not be worth fifty cents on the dollar; or, at all events, one half of it would be due them by broken merchants."

SANDWICH, SEPTEMBER 17, 1857.

A Storm in a Teapot.

AMHERSTBURG has, within the last couple of weeks, had enacted within its limits a farce of no mean pretensions, in which the fussy Major, commanding a half dozen broken down pensioners, played a ridiculously prominent part. This wonderful prodigy, supposing, no doubt, that because the Government had given him the command of the few pensioners stationed at Fort Malden, he was a man of some consequence; and not content with so confined a sphere as ruling over the few old soldiers, determined to give the good old town a taste of martial law.

It will be necessary to give a brief history of the cause of the dispute between the Townspeople and the old fogy Major, who has been making himself so conspicuous in a petty, little, mean way. The cricketers of Amherstburg reorganized their club a short time since, and went out upon the Military Common for practice. This common has heretofore been always used by the townspeople for a race-course, and, in fact for every recreation, as all Military Reserves are; but Major Donaldson being a shade above the ordinary run of mortals, arrogated to himself the right of prohibiting the cricketers from exercising their manly game upon the Military Reserve. This, in itself, without any consideration of his right to use his petty authority in the exclusion of the cricketers from the common, was a measure unworthy of a person occupying the position which he occupied. And when we consider with what right he has arrogated to himself this authority, we are rather at a loss to conceive how so much presumption could be contained in so small a compass as that occupied by the Major; for he has certainly attempted to do with this reserve, what the Government have never attempted to do before with any other; and we have every reason to believe that he has acted without authority in this matter. The report is current, that the worthy Major, not content with having his quarters furnished him in the fort, besides receiving pay for doing nothing, intends to plough up the common, and make the poor pensioners raise potatoes and cabbage for him. This, of course, is all very military! Only fancy Jones & Co. receiving an order to cast a lot of ploughs out of old muskets and swords, when our worthy Major will have turned his attention to husbandry! Then, indeed, will the milk of peace be poured out upon the whole earth, and even the savage natives in the East will then cast aside their deadly weapons, and under his directions, as of old with the Goddess of Corn, will teach them how to plough the ground, to sow and reap the corn.

Below will be found a report of the proceedings taken for this paper, of a meeting held by the justly indignant inhabitants, in consequence of Major Donaldson's petty and arbitrary conduct.

On Saturday, the 6th inst., a very large and highly respectable meeting of the inhabitants of the Town, was held in the Town Hall, pursuant to the following requisition and notice:

To Gordon W. Leggatt, Esq., Reeve of the Municipality of Amherstburg.

WE, the undersigned inhabitants of the Municipality of Amherstburg, have heard that MAJOR DONALDSON is about plowing up that portion of the MILITARY RESERVE, lying between the Garrison and the Town, would respectfully request you to convene a Public Meeting of the inhabitants of this Municipality, at your earliest convenience, to consider the best means of preventing the same.

John W. Ridsdale, Ed. Anderson, Wm. Cousins, Chas. McLeod, Thos. F. Park, Alex Jones, D. McCormick, J. A. Noble, Thos. H. Wright, James McIntosh, Thos. Horsman, Wm. McGregor, Terrance McGuire, James Dunbar, John B. Grenier, Thos. A. Meara, James Hamilton, Laurent Robidoux, Stephen Hubbard, Thomas Elliott, Thos Salmoni, John A. Kane, Alanson Botsford, Geo. Murray, John G. Kolfage.

In accordance with the above requisition, I hereby call a Public Meeting of the inhabitants of this Town, on Saturday next, the 5th instant, at the Town Hall, at six o'clock P. M.

G. W. LEGGATT, Reeve.

At 7 o'clock the Reeve took the chair and Charles McLeod Esq., on motion, was appointed Secretary.

The chairman in a few brief remarks explained the object of the meeting; he said that the inhabitants of this Town had for a long period enjoyed the privileges of pasturing their cattle upon the neighboring common, and had otherwise exercised a right over the same; that it had been intimated that the officer in command of the pensioners at this Post, intended to plough up the Common, and that this meeting was now assembled to concoct such measures as they should deem most expedient to prevent any such usurpation of their undoubted rights The chairman continued to say, that it was rather unfortunate that the inhabitants should have ever allowed the pensioners to enclose the common with a fence at all, and that they had not applied to the Imperial government for an exclusive grant of the common, when the idea of locating pensioners upon it was first mooted, he did not doubt but they would have succeeded in their application. He was still on opinion, however, that they had never relinquished an iota of their right to the common, when it was fenced in, because it was with the express consent of the people that the fence was made, and that consent was only given upon the express condition that the inhabitants were to have the use of the common as before, for the pasture of their cattle, and for recreation, &c., and they (the people) had actually contributed a large sum of money towards defraying the expenses of erecting the fence. The following resolutions were then carried nem con.

Moved by George Gott, and seconded by Peter Logan, and resolved unanimously; that this meeting have heard with regret and surprise that it is the intention of the officer in charge of the pensioners at this Post to plough up the commons adjoining the Town.

Moved by John A. Kane, and seconded by John Goslage, That the inhabitants of this Town have from time immemorial enjoyed the privilege of pasturing their cattle on the neighboring common and using the same for other purposes, and they regard the present intentions of the officer in charge of the pensioners to plough up the same, as an infringement and violation of their rights.—Carried unanimously.

Moved by John J. Kolfage, and seconded by Peter Logan, That while this meeting recognise and acknowledge the propriety of the Imperial Government rewarding meritorious soldiers, they do not consider that the government are doing justice to the inhabitants of this Town who have fought and bled in defence of their country against Foreign aggressors, when they deprive us of vested rights to bestow them upon strangers.—Carried unanimously.

Moved by John McLeod and seconded by Terrence McGuire that in the opinion of this meeting immediate and urgent steps ought to be taken by petitioning the imperial and Provincial Governments praying them to grant or retain to this Town the Commons of which the Pensioners seek to deprive us, and that a Committee consisting of the Chairman, Edmond Anderson, George Murray, and John G. Kolfage be appointed to draft the same and get signatures thereto.—Carried.

John McLeod was then moved to the chair, when a vote of thanks to the Reeve and Secretary of the meeting, was passed and the meeting wound up with three cheers for the Queen.

Cricket.

On Friday, the 4th September inst, the following gentlemen met at the Salmoni House, for the purpose of organizing a Cricket Club, viz.

Dr. Walter Lambert, John A. Kane, Thomas Oliver, Gordon McLeod, Thomas Salmoni, M. J. Salmoni, Wm. Hedley, Robert Brown, John G. Kolfage, William Gott, Charles Warner, Gordon W. Leggatt, Charles Fortier and Dr. Carrier.

On motion John G. Kolfage Esq., took the chair, when it was resolved that we organize ourselves into a Club to be entitled the "Amherstburg Cricket Club"; and that the following officers be elected viz.

Thomas Salmoni,	President.
Dr. Lambert,	Vice President.
Wm. Hedley,	Secretary.
John A. Kane,	Treasurer.
Charles G. Fortier, G W Leggatt and Dr. Carrier,	Directors.

After transacting the necessary business the club adjourned.

A large and influential meeting was held on Tuesday evening last, at the Town Hall, Windsor, for the purpose of discussing the subject of the Hudson's Bay Territory. A number of resolutions were adopted, against the monopoly of the Hudson's Bay Company. Col. Prince and D. Macdonell, Esq. were the chief speakers on the occasion.

The Millbrook Messenger, is the title of a new paper, lately started at Millbrook, by Mr. Alfred E. Hayter, we hail with pleasure the Messenger as another auxillary in the ranks of the conservative Press, and a right able one too, if we may judge from the four first numbers, upon our table, mechanically the paper is well got up, and will become a valuable acquisition, as an advocate of the interests of its locality. We wish the proprietor, as a reward for his labour a rich harvest of Golden Ears.

☞ We learn from a gentleman just returned from Chicago, that so great was the scarcity of money in that city, and so heavy the pressure, that Wheat was sold at Sixty cents a bushel, and in large quantities last week, and there is every prospect of a still greater reduction in price, merchants, are compelled to take any price in order to raise the wind.

NOT BAD.—The Board of Councilmen in Canton, State of Mississippi, recently passed the following Resolutions:

1st. Resolved by this Council, that we build a new jail.

2nd. Resolved that the new jail be built out of the materials of the old jail.

3rd. Resolved that the old jail be used until the new jail is finished.

Could Dublin or Cork beat that?

PERMANENT BRIDGE OVER THE DESJARDINS CANAL.—The inhabitants of Hamilton and the country adjoining will be large gainers by the destruction of the Suspension Bridge at the Desjardins Canal, as it is the intention of the Great Western Railway Company to erect a permanent bridge on piers instead. In the meanwhile, a temporary bridge is to be constructed, which will be completed in about two weeks.

The Bank of Commerce, N. Y., discounted business paper on Friday to the amount of 600,000.—Chron. & News.

AN IRON GIRDER BRIDGE OVER THE NIAGARA RIVER.—We learn from a reliable source, that the Directors of the Great Western Railway Company have now determined upon immediately erecting an iron bridge on the Tubular or Girder principle over the Niagara—the present bridge, owing to the slow rate of speed at which trains can be permitted to cross it, being quite inadequate to meet the requirements of the enormous traffic daily passing over that frontier. The cost is between $500,000 and $750,000. At present the rate of speed must not exceed ten miles an hour, but with the new Bridge forty miles an hour may be run with perfect safety.—It is contemplated to be ready for opening in the course of next summer, the site of the Bridge being the gorge below the whirlpool.—Railway Guide.

The By-law Passed.

The By-law the day appointed in the notice for the final decision upon the By-law to take stock in the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company to the extent of £30,000. At ten o'clock in the morning the Rate payers assembled in the Town Hall, the Mayor being in the chair. The almost unanimous decision of the meeting of the evening previous, determined those who have hitherto opposed the scheme, as being defective in point of security, to bow to the decision of the majority, and provoke the bickerings and heart burnings which a poll must have created. They rightly determined that if the security were not ample—and that is a matter which time alone must solve—the people were the parties who must suffer, and inasmuch as they seemed willing to accept the risk, it was better that it should be done good humoredly and without any contention, producing feelings which perhaps many a long day would not efface. The By-law was therefore permitted to pass by acclamation.—Peterboro' Review.

AN ESCAPED CONVICT CAPTURED.—On Thursday evening, Constable Atcheson arrested on Queen street a person whom, from his appearance, he suspected to be William Wilson, a convict who escaped from the Provincial Penitentiary on the 2nd instant, and for whose apprehension a reward of $50 had been offered by the Warden. The man, when taken to the Station, gave his name as "William Hardy." He was taken before the Police Magistrate yesterday morning on a story, stating that Mr. Justice Richards could indentify him by that name. That gentleman was sent for, but had no recollection of the fellow. The prisoner was then put back and seeing that the ruse had not the effect of setting him free, he acknowledged acknowledged after learning that his description, &c., was about being telegraphed to Kingston that he was the man, Atcheson who has the name of being a very vigilant officer, thus becomes entitled to the reward.

TRUE BRAVERY.—During the passage of the steamship "Glasgow," from New York to Glasgow, a female with a child in her arms was accidentally swept overboard. Mr Robertson, husband of the vocalist and actress, Georgia Hodson, observed the accident, heedless of danger, lost not a moment, in plunging into the boiling sea. A life buoy was thrown to him, which he caught simultaneously with his grasping the sinking mother and infant. The engines were backed, blue lights were burned, as it was almost dark, and a life boat lowered, and the woman with her infant, as well as their gallant preserver, were rescued from their perilous situation. A medal has been ordered for presentation to the hero of this noble exploit.—Chron. & News.

POTATOES.—The potato crop in the townships adjoining Kingston will, we regret to learn, prove a general failure. The latter part of last week was very warm in the day time, with heavy dews at night. Whether the peculiarity of the weather has produced the change, or only developed more speedily the disease already existing, we are unable to say: certain it is, however, that the disease has manifested itself to an alarming extent. Those who flattered themselves up to the middle of the week that their fields had escaped, have been undeceived. Early and late sown fields are alike. At least one half the produce it is thought is destroyed.—Chron. & News.

SHOOTING AFFAIR.—We understand that a difficulty occurred yesterday between a young man, name unknown, and one of the overseers named McIntosh, on the London & St. Mary's Junction Railway. It appears that McIntosh had discharged an old man in the morning. Immediately after dinner McIntosh ordered one of the hands to do something about the siding, when a son of the man discharged, called out to——d you we are not slaves and came running at him with his spade, swearing that he would split his skull. McIntosh told him, he did not speak to him at all, and commenced making out his discharge, when he was set upon by all the hands, McIntosh backing all the time to his coat which was lying a short distance from the side of the cut, as soon as he obtained his coat he got his pistol and presented it coolly at the head of the young man wounded, some one, he thinks the voice came from the pit, called to him not to shoot, or he would be sorry for it. McIntosh replied, what can I do? I must defend myself, and immediately fired, altering his aim so that he would hit him about the legs bing unwilling although suffering from the wounds he himself had received, to kill his enemy. The ball struck him in the groin, and has not been found by the physician, in all probability he will die, from the wound mortifying. McIntosh then was set upon by a number of those in the pit, and beaten in a cruel manner, till in fact, it was thought he was dead, when all hands took to the woods, when they returned and finding their victim lying where they left him, they took away his pistol. McIntosh it is thought will recover.—St. Mary's Journal.

Great Rains—Terrific Railway Accident.

The London Free Press states that on Saturday afternoon the rain descended for upwards of two hours in torrents and unremitting streams, flooding the streets, and creating immense pools in all low places. Though the inconvenience felt in the city was of a very partial kind, yet in the country places almost all grain yet uncut was laid down completely, the damage done is great.

On the Railways, too, the effects must have been disastrous. On the Great Western the heavy torrents washed down large quantities of sand, which overlaid the track, completely covering it to the depth of many inches. At a spot near Beachville this had occurred to a great degree, and the consequence was that the afternoon express coming west ran off the track. The engine plunged headlong forward and buried itself in a sand bank on the left of the road, while the baggage car took an opposite direction and was driven off to the right and completely shattered. Fortunately, the passengers did not receive many injuries of a graver nature than severe contusions, but the fireman, D. McCormick was so severely scalded that his life is despaired of. The engineer was not injured but the baggage man was very much hurt. The damage done is considerable and has been estimated at $4,000. The spot at which the accident occurred is two miles from Beachville.

From the Daily Telegraph, London, England, of date 25th ult., we clip the following interesting item of news, the writer says:—"Among the suggestions laid before the Government within the last forty-eight hours is one which, proceeding as it does from a very authoritative quarter—we mean from a political section supposed to exert a considerable influence with the Premier—will probably receive deliberate consideration.—We allude to a plan for recalling Lord Canning, whose name is unhappily identified with a false policy and its calamitous results, and placing in his stead, in the seat of supreme responsibility over our Asiatic possessions, a statesman, a diplomist, and an administrator who has already proved his high capacity, who has coped with rebellion, who has ruled in the midst of social mutiny, who has been entrusted with important negotiations, and who is even now near the scene of action. Lord Elgin could well be spared from China, were it considered that his appointment to the Governor Generalship of India would infuse vigor into our councils and confidence into our commanders; nor would such a determination imply any public disgrace to Lord Canning, who, as the functionary nominally responsible to Parliament for the disasters of India, cannot be conveniently allowed to remain in a position in which, to say the least, he has not displayed any such splendid attributes as enabled Wellesley and the Marquis of Hastings to vanquish great Powers, and bind extensive kingdoms in allegiance to the British Throne.

A DESERTED CITY.—The New Orleans mimes represents that city as being even more desolate than the "Deserted Village" sung of by Goldsmith. The Editor says:—

"We can look out of our windows at noon to-day over the once bustling Camp street, and see no one. Who opens the stores, we know not; but we expect it is done by machinery, as we never find any body in them. It is our intention to count the number of persons in town, and give their names and addresses in a short paragraph. Money is said to be so awful scarce, that the man of business remaining here thinks of dismissing his collector and hiring a burglar in his place. We are the only editor left in the charge of the city papers, and we have serious thoughts of letting out the streets as fine pasturing grounds for sheep—Anybody in want of grass will please apply."

A great telegraph line to India is at present spoken of by the British Government. The route proposed is by Bagdad in Persia, and from thence northward to the most favorable spot on the confines of the Indian Territory, and from there into the heart of the country. Rumors are thick in England that the leading members of Parliament intend to overthrow the power of the East India Company, and that the papers are now under way for vigorous debates for that purpose.—If such should happen, the government of Queen Victoria by means of the new telegraph line would be in direct communication with that large and important possession.

Frederick Sauvage, the first person to conceive the idea of applying the screw as an auxiliary of steam, died a few weeks ago in Havre, France. His fortune and health had been ruined by his labours in scientific discoveries, and his reason had left him in consequence of his chagrin of different kinds.

A FREAK OF CORN.—Mr. C. Bradish, of Madison, has left at this office a cluster of corn which grew on the top of the stalk with no husk. It is of the common yellow dent, and contains some thirty or forty little ears, of all shapes, twisted into each other. It is quite a curiosity.—Adrian Expositor.

Wheat came in very slowly; and the total amount offering did not exceed five or six loads. Of this amount about one-half was of inferior quality, and sold at 98 91 per bushel. The remainder sold at 5s to 5s 1d per bushel, the demand not being very active for the qualities brought in.

SPRING WHEAT sells at 4s to 4s 6d per bushel, with but little doing.

BARLEY is not much enquired after, and commands 3s 3d to 3s 10d per bushel.

OATS.—Some of very good quality came by boat, and sold at 2s 6d per bushel. The average rate paid is from 2s 6d to 2s 9d. A good supply continues on hand.

FLOUR.—In the absence of an export demand, and the home trade being supplied, the market is dull and prices are unsettled. We quote Superfine at $5 to $5 25; Fancy $5 50 to $6; and Extra, $6 50 to $7 per barrel.

CIRCULAR.

To Local Superintendents, Trustees and School Officers in the Counties west of Toronto.

GENTLEMEN,

The Agricultural Association for Upper Canada have recently sent a request to the Educational Department to forward for exhibition at the approaching Provincial Fair, Brantford, specimens of the School Apparatus and other articles, which are supplied to the Schools from the Depository connected with the Department. The Chief Superintendent of Education, anxious to afford every facility for the introduction into the Schools of these important requisites, has consented to do so; and the more readily, as the objects aimed at by the Managing Committee, in making the request, so fully accord with the views and wishes of the Department on the subject.

The Chairman of the Committee, in his letter to the Department, remarks as follows: "That so important an interest as Education will be represented, we do not for a moment doubt; and it is my duty to offer every inducement I can to your making a display of the means which have been so liberally provided for the enlightenment and advancement of the people of this country, in all those matters which are embraced in the general term, Education, would not only be highly acceptable to the Managing Committee, and peculiarly attractive to the thousands who will be congregated on the occasion, but have a powerful and wide-spread influence in exciting attention to the subject, and creating and heightening in the community a strong, durable and practicable interest in its progress."

To render the Educational Exhibition as interesting as possible, it is designed to send specimens of various kinds of Maps, Charts, Prints, Diagrams, Globes, Elementary School and Philosophical Apparatus, School Furniture, Prizes for Schools, Agricultural Works, Model and Map-stands, &c. &c. The Educational part of the Exhibition will be under the superintendence of Mr. May, the Clerk of Libraries, who will afford every information to Local Superintendents and Trustees desiring it. He will also furnish, if necessary, forms of application for school authorities desiring to obtain any of the articles exhibited. You are respectfully invited to visit the collection should you find it convenient to be in Brantford during the days of Exhibition.

You will no doubt agree with me as to the importance and value of thus adding an Educational feature to these great yearly exhibitions of industry and skill in various parts of the Province, so as to afford to all parties connected with our public Schools an opportunity of seeing what are the facilities and means provided by the Department for their improvement and elevation. On this point I may here repeat what was expressed in our official Journal of Education last year on the subject: "Education is at the foundation of all intelligent agricultural operations, as well as of all successful mechanical skill and enterprise. To connect, therefore, with the Provincial Exhibitions a purely educational feature; to incorporate that element in its yearly operations is both wise and appropriate. It is just recognition of that great moral agent in the amelioration of the mental soil and character, as is appropriate culture and the introduction of suitable agents necessary to the amelioration of the soil of the earth. It is also in harmony with the public feeling and sentiment of Canada, where the education of the people is considered one of the most important duties and interests of the state."

I have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,

Your very obedient Servant,

T. GIRDON HOUGHS,
Deputy Superintendent.

Education Office,
Toronto, 1st September, 1857.

School Maps and Apparatus.

The Legislature having granted annually, from the commencement of 1853, a sufficient sum of money to enable the Department to supply Maps and Apparatus (not text-books) to Grammar and Common Schools, upon the same terms as Library Books are now supplied to Trustees and Municipalities the Chief Superintendent of Education will be happy to add one hundred per cent. to any sum or sums not less than five dollars, transmitted to the Department; and to forward Maps, Apparatus, Charts, and Diagrams to the value of the amount thus augmented, upon receiving a list of the articles required by the Trustees. In all cases it will be necessary for any person, acting on behalf of the Trustees, to endorse the present written authority to do so, verified by the corporate seal of the Trustees. A selection of articles to be sent can always be made by he Department, when so desired.

Pensions—Special Notice to Teachers.

Public notice is hereby given to all Teachers of Common Schools in Upper Canada, who may wish to avail themselves at any future time of the advantages of the Superannuated Common School Teachers' Fund, that it will be necessary for them to transmit to the Chief Superintendent, without delay, if they have not already done so, their annual subscription of $4, commencing with 1854. The law authorizing the establishment of this fund provides, "that no teacher shall be entitled to share in the said fund who shall not contribute to such fund at least at the rate of one pound per annum." This proviso of the law will be strictly enforced in all cases; and intimation is thus early given to all Teachers, who have not yet sent in their subscriptions, to enable them to comply with the law, and so prevent future misunderstanding or disappointment, when application is made to be placed as a pensioner on the fund.

A miraculous escape was witnessed by the crowd on the platform of the Brantford Railroad Station, on Thursday morning. A stupid looking man attempted to pass over the cattle guard, just as the train was entering the station; the engine struck him and luckily knocked him down alongside the rail, and there the fellow lay close up to the platform until the whole train had passed, one of his companions having, with much presence of mind, held him down till the danger had passed. He was scared out of his wits, but not badly injured.

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature,

The Laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Shares in the estate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent. with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of share - -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years	96.
Total - - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.35.
And for three years - - 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each share.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!
THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influences

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. ANGRY ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under the application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatisms, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed testimony of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,

The Wheat Destroyers.

The subject of insect depredation appears to excite a greater interest this season among the wheat growers of Canada, than at any former period. The obvious reason is that those depredations have come to be serious for the present, and alarming for the future. As appears from communications in the newspapers, a good deal of misapprehension still exists as to the kind of insect now doing the mischief. The most common mistake is that resulting from the supposition that were popularly applied to the same insect, the mistake would be of little consequence. But we notice that it is applied indiscriminately to the larva of the middle, and the wheat moth, or caterpillar. This creates confusion, and renders the statements as to its operations of little or no value for the purpose of estimate, comparison, or scientific enquiry. We shall state in a few words the peculiarities of these three insects,—the Weevil, Midge, and Caterpillar. We had hoped to have presented, in the present number, engravings of each of these insects in their fly as well as larva state, but the only wood-engraver within reach, could not, on account of illness, prepare them in time. Probably they will be given in our September number.

The Weevil (curculio granaria) of Lin., calandra granaria of modern entomologists is so seldom seen in this latitude that it is unnecessary to describe it at much length. The perfect insect is a slender beetle, of a dark and pitch-red colour with a long slender snout, a punctured thorax, and furrowed wing-covers. In the Southern States, wheat stored in mills or granaries suffers considerably from its attacks, but it is seldom seen as far north as Canada.

There are several Grain worms, or caterpillars. The kind we have noticed in our own fields,—and the same appears to have extended over a large part of Canada—is apparently the Tinea granella of European entomologists. The moth or miller lays its eggs on the grain, and the grub or worm when hatched feeds on the grain. Each worm appropriates a kernel to himself. It is said that rye, oats, and barley are subject to its attacks as well as wheat. They spin a web, though we have never found them "enveloped in a web" as mentioned by Mr. Gaylord in his essay, published in 1843. Though by no means a desirable visitor, they cause but little injury compared with the midge.

The Midge (cecidomyia Tritici) was first observed on this continent about the year 1828. It began its depredations in Lower Canada and the adjacent States. It has since extended over all the Northern and Eastern States, and within the last two or three years has invaded the great wheat growing districts of the West. We have seen no better description of this dreaded pest than that given by Mr. Gaylord in 1843, and published in the "Transactions of the New York State Agricultural Society" for that year. We shall copy the substance of his remarks on the subject.

"The wheat fly is in form somewhat like a musquito, only smaller; body orange colored; legs long and slender, as as usual with the gnat family; and the wings transparent, changeable in color, or reflecting the colors of the rainbow. Having had frequent opportunities of examining the parent fly of our grain worm, which agrees well with the description given by Kirby and Spence, we think it the same insect—one that has been known and described in England for nearly one hundred years. It is possible, however, they may be some shades of difference, but their appearance and habits as described by Gullet and Masham, are so like ours, that they may be considered the same for all purposes. These flies make their appearance in June, or at the time wheat is usually in blossom, in great numbers, and are most active in depositing their eggs immediately after dusk; few being found in the day-time, or after nine o'clock in the evening. In the day-time they are secreted among the leaves and stems of the grain, rarely coming forth until after sundown. The female is provided with an ovipositer, or retractile tube, which she thrusts with her eggs between the scales of the chaff, depositing them in clusters from five to twenty. In some instances from thirty to forty larvæ have been found within the chaff of a single grain. The larvæ when first hatched are colorless, but they soon become of a deep orange, or bright rust color; are true maggots without feet, working their way with difficulty from one place to another. They gather around the central point of the chaff where the formation of the kernel commences, and completely nullify or destroy the germ. When full grown, the maggot is about one eighth of an inch in length. Some few are changed to the pupa state in the ear, but the greater part fall to the ground, where they finish their transformations, and appear in the spring or summer as perfect insects, ready to deposit their eggs on the growing wheat crop. So great is the destruction of been the damage occasioned by this insect, that ample opportunity has been had to try all the preventives usual in such cases, and we are sorry to say with very little effect on the whole. Fumigating the fields with sulphur, or smoke from any other materials will retard their action for a time, and could they be continued might destroy them. All pungent odours are offensive to the grain fly, as they are to the musquito, and that most offensive of all odours, the one proceeding from the skunk, has been tested, and highly recommended as a preventive. Quicklime strewed over the field while in blossom, has been highly recommended by Mr. Colman and others, but its success does not appear to be uniform, perhaps owing to its not being applied at the proper time or in sufficient quantity. A half bushel of lime mixed with the same quantity of ashes, and sawn on an acre, has produced good results. In the case where lime has failed, Mr. C. has suggested that the sowing took place too early, and that two or three sowings might be advisable, so as to certainly cover the time of the fly's appearing. A friend who is an extensive farmer in Rensselaer county, N. Y. assures us that the present year, wheat sown early in autumn, and which of course came forward early in the spring, has wholly escaped the grain worm, while the late sown has suffered materially; and that his experience in former years has convinced him, the same will hold good as a general rule. Where spring wheat is sown, it is found the early sown suffers the most, it being in blossom at the right time for the action of the fly. Sowing spring wheat as late as it will ripen, say the 10th or 15th of May, will save it from the worm; but such late wheat is very apt to blight, and be of inferior quality. Perhaps, when the worm prevails, giving wheat up for a short time, taken in connexion with burning stubbes and deep plowing, would be the safe course."—Canadian Agriculturist.

Calendar of Gardening Operations for September.

The hues of Autumn begin to appear during this month, and before its expiration the labor in the garden will commence drawing to a close. Hoe and weed turnips. Hoe and earth up late cabbages, savoys, german greens, &c. Continue to earth up celery.

Sow prickly seeded spinage, Egyptian greens, and Welsh onions, for spring use.

Pull onions when the tops have fallen down, and spread them on the ground for a few days to mature, then strip the tops off about an inch long and spread the onions on a floor under cover.

Gather cucumbers for pickling before they are too much grown. Tomatoes as they ripen should be gathered for catsup.

Clear away decayed crops, removing all the trash to your compost heap or pig pen. The principal sowings and plantings necessary to be done this year must be finished this month.

The following flower seeds may be sown during this month or early in October:—Grecqis, Candytuft, Clarkea, Collinsia, Eschalcotazias, Gilias, Godetias, Larkspurs, Nemophilas, Pinks, Phlox, Drummondis.

The Best Cow Feed.—The vegetable I wish to recommend, all things considered, for which milch cows in winter, is white flat turnips. Some persons will object to turnips because they will affect the taste of the milk and butter. So they will, if they are fed raw, this can be avoided by boiling.—For each cow boil half a bushel of turnips soft; while hot add five or six quarts of shorts, which will swell, and you will get the worth of it. A mess like this, to a cow once a day, will produce more milk of good quality than any other feed at the same cost. Turnips fed in this way do not taint either milk or butter.

One thing in favor of turnips as feed for cows, is that they can be sown in August or as late as September. I have sowed some as late as September, which were very fine.—Turnips are also very profitable food for pigs, boiled in the same way as for cows.—Plow Loom and Anvil.

Cream Cheese.—Take a quart of cream or if not desired very rich, add thereto one pint of new milk; warm it in hot water till it is about the heat of milk from the cow, add a small quantity of rennet (a table spoonful is sufficient), let it stand till thick, then break it slightly with a spoon, and place it in the frame in which you have prepared to put a fine canvass cloth; press it slightly with a weight; let it stand a few hours, then put a finer cloth in the frame; a little powdered salt may be put over the cloth. It will be fit for use in a day or two.

Cream Paste.—Break two eggs into a stewpan with a little salt, and as much sifted flour as it will take; mix in a pint of milk, and put it on the fire, and stir it, not to let it stick, till you do not smell the flour; add a piece of butter about the size of a walnut.

To Wash Calicoes.—Infuse three gills of salt in four quarts of boiling water, and put the calicoes in while hot, and leave it till cold. In this way the colors are rendered permanent, and will not fade by subsequent washing. So says a lady who has often tried the recipe.

A good fluid glue, ready at all times for instant use, without any preliminary preparation, is one of the most useful articles of stock with which a workshop can be furnished.—To make such a glue, all that is necessary is to melt three pounds of glue in a quart of water, and then drop in gradually a small quantity of nitric acid. When this ingredient is added, the mixture is to be taken from the fire and allowed to cool. Glue so prepared has been kept in an open bottle for two years, and still ready for use on the instant.

It may not be generally known that all fibrous materials, more especially cotton fabrics, when saturated with linseed oil, are exceedingly liable to spontaneous combustion. From ignorance of this fact, we have no doubt that many fires have occurred, the origin of which has been involved in mystery, and perhaps in too many cases been the cause of innocent persons incurring unjust suspicions.

Art of Floating.—Any human being who will have the presence of mind to clasp the hands behind the back, and turn the face towards the zenith, may float at ease, and in perfect safety, in tolerably still water, —ay, and sleep there, no matter how long. If not knowing how to swim, you would escape drowning when you find yourself in deep water, you have only to consider yourself an empty pitcher; let your mouth and nose, not the top part of your heavy head, be the highest part of you, and you are safe; but thrust up one of your bony hands, and down you go—turning up the handle ups over the pitcher. Having had the happiness to prevent one or two drownings by this simple instruction, we publish it for the benefit of all who either love aquatic sports or dread them.—Walker.

Bugs.—Sprinkle the vines with lime when the dew is on the leaves, and the bugs will leave.

Asparagus.—Cut down the stalks in the fall, and cover the bed with coarse manure.

Rhubarb.—Cover the bed with coarse manure in the fall.

Horse Radish.—Dig up the roots in the fall, and bury them in the cellar in sand.

Parsnips.—Leave in the ground till spring.

Salsify.—Leave in the ground till spring.

Scorzonera.—Leave in the ground till spring.

Sea Kale.—Cover the bed with coarse manure.

Jerusalem Artichokes.—Leave in the ground till spring.

Mirth and Wit.

A lawyer to avenge himself upon an opponent, wrote the word "rascal" in his hat. The owner of the hat took it up, looked rusefully into it, and turning to the Judge, exclaim-d, "I claim the protection of the honorable Court.—The opposing counsel has written his name in my hat, and I have strong suspicion tha he intends to make away with it."

Old Roger was visiting a friend who had a remarkably fine little girl, about three years old, famous for smart sayings. As usual she was shown off before our esteemed friend.

"What is papa?" said the "parient," in order to bring out the precocious reply.

"Papa's a humbug," said the juvenile.

"I declare," said old Roger, "I never in all my life saw so young a child with so mature a judgement."

"You mustn't say your prayers to-night, child," said a mother to her little girl of four years, who had been somewhat refractory for a time previous to putting her to bed. "Well," said the tiny sinner, "if, when I die and go to heaven, God asks me why I didn't say my prayers to-night? I shall tell him you wouldn't let me!"

Paddy was summoned to court for refusing to pay a doctor's bill,

Judge—Why do you refuse to pay?

Paddy—What for should I pay? sure did he give anything but some emetics, and the never a one could I keep on my stomack, at all, at all.

Pat was hungry, and got out of the cars for his refreshment. The cars very thoughtlessly went on without him. Pat's ire was up. "Ye spalpeen!" he cried, starting on a run and shaking his fist as he flew after the train, "Stop, there, ye old stame wagin; ye murtherin' stame ingine—ye've got a passenger on board that's left behind."

It is told that when Minister Miles prayed for rain, he left nothing uncertain. He said "O Lord thou knowest we do not want thee to send us rain which shall pour down in fury, and swell our streams, and sweep away our haycocks, and fences, and bridges; but, Lord we want it to come drizzle, drozzle, drozzle, for about a week—Amen.

"Billy, how did you lose your finger?" "Easily enough," said Billy. "I suppose so, but how?" "I guess you'd a lost your'n if it had been where mine was." "That don't answer my question!" "Well, if you must know," said Billy, "I had to cut it off, or else steal the trap."

"Miss Brown, I have been to learn how to tell fortunes," said a fellow to a brisk brunette; "give me your hand, if you please." "La! Mr White, how sudden you are! Well, go and ask pa."

"There are some members of the community," said the sagacious and witty Thomas Brackett Reed, "whose likes I cannot admit: if they do the right way, they afford but little nourishment; but if they happen to go the wrong way, they give a good deal of trouble."

How to get a Supply.—Go to strangers for charity, acquaintance for advice, and to relatives for nothing—and you will always have a supply.

Puffed up Things.—Crinolines appear to have been so generally adopted by ladies with a view of acquiring the title, hitherto engrossed by dandies of the stronger sex, of extensive swells.—Punch.

"Do you understand me now? thundered a country pedagogue to an urchin at whose head he threw an inkstand. "I've got an inkling of what you mean,' rep'ied the boy.

A Growing Youth.—"Pa, aint I growing tall?"

"Why, what's your height, sonny?"

"Why, I'm seven foot, lacking a yard. Aint that some, old hoss?"

Why are Indian servants called coolies? Probably because their principal duties is to fan their masters in the heat of the day.

Punch, in speaking of the practice of encoring a singer, says that in so doing, the person who calls for an encore, calls for twice as much music as he bargained for. If you buy a pair of trowsers, and they please you, do you encore your trowsers, that is do you require the tailor to give you another pair? Do you encore a dozen of oysters, by asking the second lot for nothing because the first were sweet and succulent.

'Boy,' said a visitor at the house of a friend to his little son, 'Step over the way and see how old Mrs. Brown is' The boy did the errand, and on his return reported that Mrs. Brown did not know how old she was.

Steam.—At a railway station an old lady said to a very pompous-looking gentlemen, who was talking about steam communication. "Pray, sir, what is steam?" "Steam, ma'am is ah!—steam—oh! ah!—steam is steam!" "I know that chap couldn't tell ye," said a rough-looking fellow, standing by; "but steam is a quantity of water in a tremendous perspiration.

A Cautious Reply.—A gentleman once joking with a lady acquaintance who had passed her four score years, in regard to her eligibility to the married state. "Oh," said she, "I have no longer any desire to get married." "Now said her gallant," suppose a very smart rich young man should offer himself, don't you think you would accept?" "Oh, I don't know," said she; "we are changeable critters!"

The Bride.

BY TAMAR ANNE KEMBLE.

She kneels before the altar,
To pledge a solemn vow;
Softly the words are spoken,
No shade comes o'er her brow.
And now she slowly turns aside,
A tear drop dims her eye;
Friends gaily come to greet her,
She meets them with a sigh.

A sigh!—she does not doubt the truth
Of the dear one by her side!
Ah! no—how trustingly she meets
His glance of love and pride.
For the past perchance was that fleeting sigh—
For the past that falling tear;
For the happy home she must leave behind,
And those who made home dear.

She thinks of her father's beaming smile,
And her mother's tender care;
She feels his hand in her glossy curls,
Hears her low murmured prayer.
She is leaving the love that never failed
For one that must yet be tried;
'Tween the past and the future comes the cloud
That rests on that fair young Bride.

It has passed away like the mist that floats
Across April's uncertain sky;
Should sorrow be found in her future path,
May it vanish as quickly by.
May the blessings showered on that bright bowed head,
Never be less than now;
May grief never silver those sunny locks,
Or furrow that noble brow.

Sandy Wright and the Poor Orphan.

It was a stormy evening, and in one of the wild desolate valleys of the Highlands, three men were walking quickly, that they might meet a shelter before the storm burst upon them in all its fury. They had travelled thirty miles that day; and the house at which they were to pass the night was still ten miles distant. The wind howled among the cliffs of the valley, and the flakes of snow began to beat in their faces.

"It will be a terrible night, lads, in the Moray Firth," said the foremost traveller, a strong shouldered, broad-chested man; "but what is that?" said he, pointing to a little figure by the side of the road.

The figure arose, and came to meet them. Slow and feeble were the steps, and as he approached they saw it was a little boy of about ten years of age.

"O, my puir boy!" said Sandy Wright, "what can lass than you here in a nicht like this?"

The boy told him that his mother had died and left him alone, and that he was going to Edinburg to seek his friends.

"But," added he sorrowfully, "I am tired and cannot walk further, and I'll be lost I'm feared, in the snow drift."

"That ye winna' my puir bairn, if I can help it," said the good boatman; and taking the boy's hand, he told him to lean upon him. But the boy was too much exhausted to walk, though aided by the strong arm of his new friend, who finding his efforts were vain carried him on his back.

The storm burst upon them in all its fury, and half blinded by the thick snow, the travellers grope along the road and through the snow drifts, which were blown by the fierce winds across the path. Still the brave boatman pa sed on with his burthen, though his companions without such load, were al most worn out; and after many a fall and stumble, and groan, they arrived two hours after dark, at the house where they were to spend the night.

There was an immense peat fire placed according to the custom of the country, in the room, and the inmates were seated around it. They made way for the travellers, and Sandy Wright, unmindful of his own tired limbs, drew near to the fire and began to chafe the hands and feet of the boy, who was almost insensible from the cold and fatigue. When life and warmth was restored to his frozen limbs, he shared with his little charge his supper and bed, and took him on his journey the next morning notwithstanding the remonstrances of his companions.

The little fellow told him his simple story. His mother was a poor widow, who had supported herself with her little child by sewing. When he was only six years old he had known the love of a father, and his mother worked early and late to keep her son at school. She was but eighteen years older than her son; and often would she stop in the middle of her work, and laying her hands on her breast, asked what he would do when she was dead? for her failing strength told her that the day was not far distant. Her fingers grew white and small and she could not sit up as before; but when her son looked at the deepening red of her cheeks, he thought she would not die.

One day, when he brought home the first prize from school, she threw her arms around him, while with tears in her eyes, she told him that his father's friends who were ashamed of her because she was poor, would be proud to be connected with him.

The mother's faith was strong in her heart. The lad could not go to school, stayed and watched by her bedside; and they would have starved but for a poor neighbor woman, who had but little to spare herself. He read to her every day two chapters in the Bible.—One day when she was very ill, and two of her neighbors had come to take care of her, she called the boy to her bedside, and told him, that when she was dead, he must go to Edinburg for he had friends to where else. Her own friends were there, but they were too poor to do much for him; and her father's were there, but they were too grand to own her. But she told him not to be afraid by the way, for the good God knew all about him. And then after a fond parting kiss, and a burst of sorrow, she bade him go to school.

When he came home he found her lying with a white cloth on her face, and the bed all white. The poor boy cried all night; and now she was buried out of his sight, he was travelling to Edinburg as she had told him to do; and folks are kind to him, just as his mother said they would be. And he had his letters to show him the way to his mother's friends when he reached town; for he could read writing.

And God has put it into the heart of Sandy Wright to be kind to the poor orphan. He was like a father to him during his journey; he shared with him his bed, and carried him on his back when the lad was too tired to walk.

On reaching the Queen's Ferry, Sandy Wright found that his money was almost gone, and he intended to get the boy across without paying the usual fare; when the boat reached the middle of the Ferry, the gruff looking ferryman began to collect the fare—passing the passengers one by one until he stood before the boy.

"Dinna stop before the boy," cried Sandy Wright; "he is a poor orphan—here is my groat."

The Ferryman still held out his hand; and Sandy told him that they had found him in a desolate glen, bewildered by the storm; and that they were taking him to his friends in Edinburgh, and that he ought not to grudge him his passage.

The ferryman without answering, took off his cap; Sandy Wright twisted it out of his hand telling him to take care—that they did not know what would become of themselves or their own bairns. But the ferryman saying he would have the fare, or the fare's worth, if it were his jacket, laid hold of the boy, who began to cry. Then rose up Sandy, and seizing the ferryman in his powerful grasp, told him not to touch the puir thing, cry shame on ye man! and the cry of "shame! shame!" was echoed by the other passengers till the surly man gave up the point.

On landing Sandy Wright told the boy that he had some business to do at the custom house, and some money to get, but that he would first try to find out his friends for him, that he must look into his letters and see in what street they lived.

The boy untied his bundle, which contained a few shirts and stockings, a parcel of papers, and a small box; and said that his mother charged him to keep the papers safely, for they told of her marriage; and in that box was her wedding ring. She could be added, have got the money for it when she was sick and not able to work; but she would starve sooner than part with it; and I would na like to part wi' it so any how but your sel', if ye would take it;' and opening the box he gave it to the boatman. It was a valuable diamond ring, and Sandy Wright, returning it to him, told him not to part with it to any body.

They found the direction in one of the letters, and in a few minutes were walking up Grass Market. Suddenly the boy sprang to meet a young woman who was passing and in whom he recognized his mother's sister. She knew him and warmly embraced him; and having been introduced to the dear friend of the boy, she told him of his parentage and prospects. His father was a young man of good family, but estranged from his friends by a vicious course of life.

He married a poor but virtuous and industrious woman who was worthy of a better husband. Giving himself up to intemperate habits, he sunk into poverty and contempt; and in the midst of wretchedness, which would have been greater but for the effort of his wife, he was attacked by a fever, of which he died. Two of his brothers, who were lawyers, had recently enquired about the child's and were probably interesting themselves in his behalf. The good boatman now bade farewell to the lad; slipping him his groat, which he said was better in his pocket than that of the gruff ferryman.

Eighteen years passed away before Sandy Wright again visited Edinburgh. He had left it a strong powerful man of forty-seven, he returned to it a grey haired old man of sixty five. Troubles too, had come with his gray hairs. His son a brave young fellow, who had arisen from the humblest post on board the sea, had been impressed, and sailed upon an expedition from which he had never returned, and the poor old boatman, when about to retire on a pension to which he was entitled, for h s long service at the Custom House, was dismissed without a shilling, on a charge of having connived at the escape of a smuggler. He had travelled a weary two hundred miles, with the hope that an inferior clerk in the Custom House, with whom he had some acquaintance might use his influence in his behalf. The clerk, who had but given him little encouragement, had dismissed him at Brown's Square. Two hours af er the appointed time had passed, and weary and sorrowful, Sandy Wright passed the street, watching and waiting for his friend, who came not; when a gentleman, who pas ed him quickly, abruptly paused, and retracing his steps, fixed his eyes steadfastly upon the old man.

"My name, sir, is Sandy Wright," said the boatman touching his hat.

"My good, kind friend," exclaimed the stranger, his face glowing with pleasure, as he grasped the old man's hand, "often, often have I enquired for you, but no one could tell me where you were, or whether you were living or dead. Come with me to my house in the next square. What! not remember me; it will be ill with me, when I cease to remember you! I am Hamilton, an advocate; but you will scarcely know me as that.

The astonished boatman accompanied his new friend to an elegant house in Brown Square, where, in a handsome parlor, he saw a young lady reading.

"Who of all the world have I found," said the gentleman, "but good Sandy Wright, the kind, brave man, who rescued me from perishing in the snow, and who was kind to me when I had no friends.

With a kind smile the lady held out her hand, and assured him that her husband had frequently spoken of his kindness, and regretted that he had no opportunity of acknowledging it.

The poor little orphan had been kindly cared for by his father's friends and by his diligence in study and virtuous conduct, he had rewarded their care, and secured for himself an honorable position. And now, not with words only did he show his sense of their compassion, which had not passed by on the other side and left him helpless and perishing, but had succoured him when ready to die.—He enquired into the charges made against the boatman, and finding that they were not very serious, he invited him to spend a few weeks at his house, till he could see what could be done for him. The weeks passed slowly, though he had an interested auditor in Mrs Hamilton, who loved the stories which he told with humor and simplicity, and by her husband with the affectionate reverence of a son. But he was weary of the life of a gentleman, and sighed for the little smoky cottage and the "puir auld wife."

"Just stay with us one week longer," said the advocate, "you are not as active a man as when you carried me ten miles though the snow, and frightened the tall ferryman; and I will secure you a passage in one of the trading vessels of Leith."

A few days after, Mr. Hamilton, his face beaming with pleasure, and with a packet in his hand, entered the room.

"This is from London," said he, handing the packet to his wife, who had been conversing with the good boatman, "and it tells us that Alexander Wright, Custom House boatman, is to retire on a pension of twenty pounds per annum."

Sandy Wright, grateful and contented, bade farewell to his kind friends, and retired to his native place, where he lived comfortably on his little income, which supplied all his moderate wants. He used to say that he was a sixty year old scholar before he knew the meaning of that verse, 'Cast thy bread upon the water, and thou shalt find it after many days.'

A touching instance of Fraternal Love.

We have never read a more touchingly beautiful incident than the following which occurred a short time since in one of the French courts. The natural nobility of the brother, and the affectionate faith of the sister, are examples worthy to be followed by the unfortunate youth of our own country. The case is as follows:

A prisoner appears.

Does any one claim you?" asked the magistrate. "Ah, my good sir," said she, "I have no longer any friends; my father and mother are both dead—I have only my brother James; but he is as young as I am. Oh, sir, what can he do for me?"

The court must send you to the House of Correction.

"Here I am, sister—here I am! Do not fear!" cried a childish voice from the other end of the court; at the same instant a little boy with a lively countenance started from amidst the crowd, and stood before the judge.

"Who are you?" said he, "James Rome, the brother of this poor little girl."

"Your age!" "Thirteen."

"And what do you want?" "I come to claim my Lucille."

"But have you means of providing for her?" Yesterday I had none, but now I have. Don't be afraid."

"Well let us see my boy," said the magistrate; "the court is disposed to do all it can for your sister; but you must give us some explanation."

"About a fortnight ago," exclaimed the boy, my poor mother died of a bad cough, for it was very cold at home. We were in great trouble. Then I said to myself, I will become an artizan, and when I know a good trade I will support my sister. I went apprentice to a brush maker; every day I used to carry her half my dinner, and at night I took her secretly to my room, and she slept on my bed while I slept on the floor. But it appears that she had not enough to eat. One day she begged on the Boulevard and was taken up. When I heard that, I said to myself 'come my boy, things cannot last so. You must find something better.' I soon found a good place, where I am fed and clothed and have twenty francs a month. I have also found a good woman who for these twenty francs will take care of Lucille and teach her needle work. I claim my sister."

"My boy," said the Judge, "your conduct is very honorable. However your sister cannot be set at liberty till to-morrow."

"Never mind, Lucille," said the boy, "I will come and fetch you early to-morrow." Then turning to the magistrate, he said "I may kiss her, may I not, sir?"

He then threw himself into the arms of his sister, and both wept warm tears of affection."

Register Your Deeds.

Many of the farming community think it quite unnecessary to Register their deeds of Land. A more mistaken idea could not possibly exist. In the event of the original owner of the land becoming involved in legal difficulties and that a certificate of Judgment should be registered against his lands, or that an execution should be placed in the Sheriff's hands, directing him to sell his Lands and Tenements, it is evident, that the lands remaining in the Registry book in his name would be legally affected by such proceedings. We take the liberty of giving a case in point, which occurred during the past week under our own observation. A respectable farmer named Angus McLarty, residing in the Township of Aldboro' near Wardsville, originally purchased part of a property, styled the Baby lands, but through carelessness kept his deed unregistered in his house for several years.—It happened, however, some months ago, that he was necessitated to borrow a certain sum of money from George McBeth, Esq., M.P.P., and in security for repayment, gave him a mortgage. Mr. McBeth had the mortgage and original deed registered duly as a man of business usually does. In the meantime, the Sheriff received a Fi Fa, directed against the lands of the original owner, among which appeared the land occupied by Mr. McLarty. The sale was to have taken place at the Court House here, on last Saturday, but upon Mr. McLarty's forbidding the sale and producing his registered title, parties refrained from bidding. It thus transpired through a mere casual circumstance that Mr McLarty's lands are saved from. Had this deed remained in his chest, he would undoubtedly have lost his farm, or been subjected to very heavy legal expenses to obtain its recovery. We refer to the matter by permission, with a view of benefitting those of our farming friends who may not think it incumbent or necessary to register their deeds. In these trying times people cannot tell what pecuniary difficulties may arise, and it is better to be prepared for the worst. Our richest and most extensive land holders may fail, and the poor purchaser should at least protect himself against all emergencies, especially when the cost of registration is so trifling.— St. Thomas Dispatch.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Avoid Imposture.—As there may be counterfeits in the market, it is well to know that there is a sure protection to the purchaser in the Water-mark that exists in every leaf of the genuine book of directions, viz., the words, "Holloway, New York and London," which can be seen in the paper itself on being held to the light. In external inflammation there is an unnatural rush of blood to the part affected. The effect of the Ointment is to disperse the local fever. The Pills relieve the system, through the bowels of all morbid and irritating influences

A celebrated divine, who was remarkable in the first period of his ministry for a boisterous mode of preaching, suddenly adopted a mild and dispassionate mode of delivery. One of his brethren inquired of him what induced him to make the change. He was answered—"When I was young I thought it was the thunder that killed the people, but when I grew wiser I discovered that it was the lightning; so I determined to thunder less and lighten more for the future."

MERIT AND POSITION.—The difference between a man of merit and a man of position is this: the latter is the man of his day, the former is the man after his day.

There was a king in England when Shakespeare lived there, and doubtless every child in the realm knew his name familiarly; but how many know the name of the poor play-writer? But now, almost every child that speaks the English language, knows of Shakespeare and his writings. How many of them know of James and his writings? Very few. Thus the man of high position died with his position and his day; but the man of merit only began to live when he died.

TEMPER.—A lady of very irritable temperament was one day lecturing her husband, in very unmeasured terms. As he had previously suffered much in this way, he resolved at this time to remain perfectly quiet, and no matter how she might storm, to keep on a pleasant expression of countenance and not reply. The tempest of abuse was kept up for a length of time, but he retained the same placid smile and appeared as immovable as a stone. At last perceiving that she could not force one harsh word from his lips, and provoked at having no visible excuse for her rage, with a tremendous shriek she cried "Speak, you hollow hearted scoundrel—Speak, or I'll burst!

A peasant went to a priest to confess having stolen hay from a large stack belonging to a neighbor. "How many loads did you take?" asked the father confessor. "You may as well reckon the whole stack at once," said the peasant, as I and my wife intend to fetch it all away before we stop."

Agriculture is the art of raising crops; husbandry, the art of preserving and expending them.

THE LORD LIEUTENANT.—The Earl of Carlisle enjoyed a pleasure trip up the Shannon on Saturday the 2nd, and has now proceeded to the princely mansion of the Bessborough family.

DR. DENVIR.—It is believed that Dr. Denvir, in obedience to a suggestion from Dr. Cullen, resigned his position as Commissioner of National Education before his recent visit to Rome.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of the reception committee and the several local committees of the British Association was held in the new buildings at Trinity College on Saturday week, for the purpose of estimating the probable expenses, and that some details of the general arrangements might be submitted to the public. The Lord Mayor, who presided, called upon Professor Phillips, of Oxford, to address the meeting. The learned gentleman then detailed at some length the course generally adopted for the general management of the annual meetings of the association, and suggested that a simple arrangement should be made as nearly as possible on the approaching occasion. The meeting expressed its approval of the course suggested by Mr. Phillips.

ENCUMBERED ESTATES COURT.—The estates of Mr. Vincent Scully, whose unfortunate connection with the Tipperary Bank has involved him in a sea of litigation, are to be sold in the Encumbered Estates Court in November next. The property lies in the counties of Tipperary and Cork, and comprises in the gross 3,100 acres, yielding a rent-roll of 1,000l a year.

TENANT RIGHT.—The Rev. Dr. Cahill, has called upon the people of Ireland to forget past differences, political and religious, and to form a national party that will oblige Government to concede tenant right, and other legislative measures required for the country.

ABSCONDED AGENT.—The agent of one of the most extensive landed proprietors in the county Carlow has absconded with a sum of about 11,000l.

SCARCITY OF WEAVERS.—So many weavers, both of cotton and linen fabrics, have been tempted by high wages to abandon, for the present, the loom for the spade, that Belfast manufacturers have been obliged, in several instances, to curtail their make. One house in the muslin line could only find looms for about twenty "scrimp" last week, instead of their usual issue of five times the number.—Banner of Ulster.

THE HARVEST.—Since 1826 there has not been as favourable a season as the present, and a week or so more of the brilliant weather we have had during August is all that is now wanted to realize the prospect of an early and abundant harvest.

AN ATROCIOUS MURDER was perpetrated near Thurles, Tipperary, on Thursday week. The following particulars relating to it are from a correspondent:—"It appears that two families of the name of Stapleton have resided adjacent to each other, but some disputes, having arisen between them in reference to land, they were not on good terms. Richard Stapleton, on the day in question, went with a cart and scythe to cut some coarse grass at a place which adjoined the farm of Michael and John Stapleton, and while thus engaged the other two men were moving towards the place with pitchforks in their hands. The father of the deceased met them, and being alarmed begged of them, not to do any harm. The reply to this was several stabs made at him in the face, and the men pursued Richard Stapleton, who made for a fort at some distance, but he was overtaken, stabbed in the back, and fell. While trying to gain his footing, one of his cousins raised the scythe, and made a desperate blow, which cut off the arm with which the wretched victim sought to avert the cut designed for his head. Not satisfied with inflicting other deadly wounds on Richard Stapleton, the assailants then turned on his sister, and with the scythe cut the flesh of her arm from the shoulder to below the wrist. The most singular matter connected with the whole proceeding is, that one of the two men engaged in this awful transaction proceeded to a neighbouring magistrate to lodge an information that he and his brother were the parties who had been attacked, lying in bed as if unabled to stir from the injuries he received. The deceased lived long enough to explain what were the facts, but in the interval Michael and John Stapleton had effected their escape. A coroner's inquest was held between T. P. Meagher, Esq., and the police are in active pursuit."

The Crops of 1857.

The Agricultural Gazette has received returns from thirty-eight English counties as to the prospects of the harvest in the various parts of each county. In the principal corn-growing counties the returns are very gratifying. In Kent the wheat crop is reported to be much over average; in Suffolk full average; in Essex, over average; in Essex, over average; in Lincolnshire, over average; Yorkshire, over average; Westmoreland, over average; Northumberland, full average; Durham, average; Cumberland, average; Lancashire, over average; Cheshire, over average; Staffordshire, average; Derbyshire, under average; Notts, over average, but much sprouted; Shropshire, average; Warwick, average; Leicestershire, over average; Northampton, above average; Rutland, over average; Norfolk, over average; Cambridgeshire, over average; Huntingdon, over average; Herts, full; Bucks, Oxfordshire, Worcestershire, Herefordshire, Monmouthshire, Gloucestershire, Surrey, Hants, and Berks, ditto. From the western counties the accounts are similarly gratifying. In Wilts wheat is reported to be over average; in Dorset, in Cornwall, and in Somerset

In most of the above counties barley and oats are about an average, whilst the potatoes and green crops are various; in some places the former are much diseased, and the latter suffer from rain, but on the whole the accounts are more favourable than those of former years. In Devonshire, Mr. S Cornish, of Stanecombe, states that wheat is in an average, barley over average, oats average, beans good, peas, ditto, potatoes diseased, green crops, an average, and grass a large crop. Mr. T. Michelmore, Barry Pomeroy, states that wheat is an average, barley ditto, oats good crop, beans good, peas ditto, potatoes average, green crops good, and grass heavy. Mr. W. E. Rendle, Plymouth, Mr. Langdon, Barnstaple, Mr. J. Benson, Tavistock, and a gentleman of Exeter, give similar accounts.

Speech from the Throne.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN: We are commanded by Her Majesty to release you from further attendance in Parliament, and at the same time to express to you her Majesty's cordial acknowledgment for the zeal with which you have performed your important duties during the session, although shorter than usual, nevertheless being unusually laborious.

"Her Majesty commands us to express to you her satisfaction that the present state of affairs in Europe inspires well grounded confidence in the continuance of peace. Arrangements connected with the execution of the stipulations of the treaty of Paris have, from various causes, not yet been completed, but Her Majesty trusts that by the earnest efforts of the contracting parties to the treaty, all that remains to be done with reference to the stipulations may ere long be satisfactorily settled.

"Her Majesty commands us to inform you that the extensive mutinies which have broken out among the native troops of the army in Bengal, followed by serious disturbances in many parts of that Presidency have occasioned Her Majesty extreme concern; and the barbarities which have been inflicted upon many of Her Majesty's subjects in India, and the sufferings which have been endured, have filled Her Majesty's heart with the deepest grief; while the conduct of many civil and military officers, who have been placed in circumstances of much difficulty, and who are being exposed to great danger, has excited Her Majesty's warmest admiration.

"Her Majesty commands us to inform you that she will omit no measures calculated to quell these grave disorders, and that she is confident that, with the blessings of Providence, and what with the full power at her disposal, she will be enabled to accomplish that end.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons: Her Majesty commands us to thank you for the liberal supplies which you have voted for the service of the present year, and for the assurance which you have given to your intention to afford Her Majesty whatever supplies are necessary for the restoration of tranquility in India.

Her Majesty has been gratified to find that you have been enabled to provide the amount required to be paid to Denmark for the redemption of the Sound Dues without on that account adding to the National Debt.

Her Majesty commands us to inform you of the most heartfelt acknowledgement for the provision you have made for her beloved daughter the Princess Royal on her approaching marriage with his Royal Highness Prince Frederick William of Prussia.

Her Majesty commands us to inform you that she has seen, with satisfaction, that although the present session has been short, you have been able to pass many acts of great importance, and to which Her Majesty has given Her most cordial assent.

The Acts for establishing more effective jurisdiction of Proving of Wills in England and Ireland, correct defects which have for many years been complained of.

The Acts for amending the law relating to Divorce and to Matrimonial Causes, will remedy evils which have been long felt.

The several Acts for the prevention of Breaches of Trust, for amending the law relating to Secondary Punishments, for amending Joint Stock Banks, and for consolidating and amending the law relating to Bankruptcy and Insolvency in Ireland, for the better care and treatment of Pauper Lunatics in Scotland, with other Acts of less importance, but likewise tending to the progressive improvement of law, have met Her Majesty's ready consent.

We are commanded by Her Majesty to express to you her confidence that on your return to your several counties you will allow that influence which justly belongs to you to promote the welfare and happiness of Her Majesty's loyal and faithful people: she prays the blessing of Almighty God may attend and prosper your endeavors."

BALTIMORE, Sept. 19th.

The boat which left Norfolk yesterday evening arrived here this morning. The agent of the associated press boarded her last night from the p. m. boat and came up here with several of the passengers, U S Mail Contractors, Fall River; Gabriel Brush, Baggage master, N Y; Chas Taylor, N C; Samuel Shreve, San Francisco; Dr Bijansi, do; Dr Gibbs, and Mr. Mavin, California; Mr. Barker, San Francisco; Mr. Brooker, Boston; Purser Dobbin, Mr. White, Sacramento; Purser Hall, of the steamer Cambria, N Y; Mr. Hall, brother of the purser, California; Mr. Vankenseleer, 1st officer of the steamer; Captain Heenbin, U S N: Commander of the steamer, and Jas T. Tennyson, doctor of the steamer. The Norwegian bark, at Norfolk, is the bark "Ellen," Capt. A. Johnson, Batisee Honduras, and not the bark "Eloise," as was reported.

Oliver P. Maurice, passenger, gives the following information:—The brig "Marvine" was lying nearly a mile off, and by the time the three boats reached her, it became evident that the ship must go down before they could get back; all hands then seized pieces of spars, chairs and life preservers, while others rushed below to procure their treasure. Now the vessel gave three lurches, some of the passengers jumped off at each lurch those who jumped off at the first and second lurches, swam off some distance, but the great mass remained on deck until the vessel went down, which was a minute or two afterwards. We were all drawn under the surface at least twenty feet, and when we rose were nearly stifled. The rapidity with which I was drawn down tore the gear from my hands, and the life-preserver from my body, and when I reached the surface my clothing was almost all stripped off. I however met a friend who had two life-preservers, who gave me one, and we also seized on pieces of the wreck, which helped to sustain us. About one hundred of the passengers were struggling about, most of them having lost their life-preservers, and others seizing the pieces of wreck which came up with us. The captain had cut away the upper works of the vessel, so that when the hull sunk they would float off; but they were all dragged down and came up in fragments. Many persons were killed, stunned and drowned, by being struck by pieces of the wreck, whilst the pieces of others were their ultimate means of safety. An occasional flash of lightning showed us to each other a sea of struggling forms—each strove to encourage his friend with hopes which he scarce felt himself. At once we were altogether in a mass, but soon the waves separated us, and at each successive flash of lightning we discovered that the groups were being scattered over a wide area, and soon found ourselves entirely alone on the boundless ocean.

Tricks upon Travellers in New York.

Counterfeiters have been very active of late, and it behoves strangers to be cautious. The baggage smashers, emigrant runners, and other licensed highwaymen who surround him on his arrival—at the wharf or depot, are always provided with what they call "queer," and are always willing to accommodate him with change for a ten dollar bill. Ticket swindling is an art that has attained perfection and is here carried on by hundred adepts, with the utmost boldness, very often at the expense of Canadians on their way to Europe. The other day a stranger was charged thirty-five instead of 18 dollars for a steerage passage in a vessel, which he was falsely told was on the point of sailing—another having offered a hundred dollar bill—requested the balance in gold. It was handed to him with a whispered request, that he would not count it in the office, as another passenger was present who had paid more. On reaching the street, the intended victim found his change forty dollars short. He immediately made his grievance known to a police officer, who quietly caused the villains to refund, and probably had to pay a suitable amount of hush money. These events occurred in a sham passage office.

Runners are licensed on payment of a few dollars yearly to the city; and, are therefore, to be classed among our institutions. They serve be their vested right to its full extent in plundering and abusing the ignorant and the stranger. I have known a poor Dutchman to be taken by these gentry into a warehouse; and weighed together with his poor vrow and half a dozen sons and daughters. The sum total added to the weight of the family luggage, make up a heavy freight item, in addition to the passage tickets.

The utility of runners like that of musquitoes or alligators is not easily discovered—but they vote—and for that reason their numerous peccadilloes are tolerated—as are those of stock auctioneers, lottery-dealers and other similarly enlightened and patriotic citizens. Mayor Wood understands thoroughly the mechanism of a city election, and cannot afford to throw away voters whether they be runners or dead rabbits. These gentry are more influential in carrying a city election, than three times their number of respectable citizens, whom they deter from voting by systematic ruffianism.

A PONY STUD WITH GOLD.—There are now on view, in Sydney, a set of shoes made of solid native gold, weighing 24 ounces, and worth about £100. They were made for the favorite pony of a gentlemen (now deceased) who resided in New South Wales and bear evidence of considerable wear. The precious metal of which they are composed was found on the land where the pony used to graze.—Sydney Morning Herald.

IMMENSE CASTING.—On Tuesday afternoon, between twelve and one o'clock, a casting of gigantic dimensions was executed at Messrs. James Binnie and Co's Caledonian Foundry, West Street. It measures 18½ feet in length by 16 in breadth, and 6 feet in depth, and weighs 48 tons. The mould has been five weeks in preparation, and was bound by cramps, &c., to sustain a pressure equal to 340 tons. This monstrous piece of metal is the sole plate of a marine engine.—Glasgow Herald.

SANDWICH, SEPTEMBER 24, 1857.

The Southern Railway.

After a lull of some months in railway matters, we have the subject again brought before our vision, in the shape of an amalgamation with the Grand Trunk; through whom or by whom has not yet appeared. The Leader was the first to break the ominous silence that had lasted so long a time, with any degree of boldness, and took all by surprise, in publishing that the Southern Railway, owing to the efforts of Mr. Isaac Buchanan, has ceded its interests to the Grand Trunk Company, and that in all probability the line will be gone on with immediately. The intention, it would appear, is to make the Southern Road, or the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway, the Western extension of the Grand Trunk to Amhersburg, using the London and Port Stanley Road, as a connection between St. Thomas and London, which is now the westerly limit of the Grand Trunk. This line being completed, there will be a continuous one from Portland to the Detroit river.

If the statement be true, and we have no doubt at present of its correctness, our prospects of having a railway are far better than they have yet been. There can be no doubt, but that the Grand Trunk Company will prosecute the works more speedily, and with more certainty than if the road were left in the hands of the parties, who have made themselves already so conspicuous in railway matters.

It should be the desire of all parties in this county, to see an arrangement effected which will secure to us an early completion of the Southern Line, and to this end it behooves all who are interested in the undertaking, to render what assistance may lay in their power, towards so happy an issue, and to lay aside all selfish motives in order that the amalgamation, if not already effected, may be at as early a date as possible. We have often hoped that the Grand Trunk would take our Southern Line in hand, and build it; for, from the many complications into which it has been thrown by the contending parties, its completion had become almost hopeless. But now there is hope, that a new era has again dawned upon our railway affairs, and that they are placed beyond the reach of those who have speculated, and who would again, no doubt, if the opportunity were afforded, at the expense of the public good.

Regarding the matter as one of expediency, we must take into consideration, the facilities which the Grand Trunk Company possess for the completion of our line, as well as the great advantages that would be derived by that company, in possessing so good an outlet for their traffic, as well as a feeder to their already extensive railway. It is natural to suppose that a company, possessing the influence that the Grand Trunk necessarily must, they will have no difficulty in securing the required means, wherewith to build it; and when we consider the benefit to the Grand Trunk, by securing a direct communication with the lines of railway, that lead to the great West, all will see at a glance, that to secure this, must be a boon of no small importance to them, and the wonder is that exertions were not made long before, to secure this line as a Western extension.

Our great interest in the completion of the Southern Road may have made us over sanguine in believing the report to be correct, of the amalgamation having taken place; for in reality there is nothing definite given, in any of the papers that profess to be deep in the secret, nor is there any authority given for the report. We have merely the assertion of two or three journals of the fact, and even these differ in their reports. The Leader, we must take for granted, is the best informed among the number, as being the Government organ, and whose information no doubt was received through the Premier, who is also reported as having been instrumental in effecting the amalgamation. The Woodstock Times, and its echo the Canadian, hinted most mysteriously at some compromise, as if they alone knew the full details, but would not make them known to the public; for being of so nice and delicate a nature, all might be spoiled, by a premature exposure to the vulgar gaze. Whether all this mystery arose from the fact, that they were unable to assert that Mr. Rankin was taken care of in the compromise, or were unwilling to admit his absence in the arrangement, remains yet to be explained. But if they are in the secret, and all arrangements are conducted in a straightforward manner, there could be no necessity for this extraordinary mystery, and it would have been nothing but fair, to have given the public an opportunity to canvass the subject, more particularly as it is one of the greatest general importance. But we fancy, if the truth were known, they are as deep in the secret as we are, and perhaps know just as much; and that is, what we have gleaned from the Leader and the Hamilton Spectator, and nothing more. The Woodstock Sentinel, after giving the Times a rap over the knuckles, for his would-be mysterious conduct, thus speaks of the amalgamation:—

"The real truth of the matter is, that there is a scheme on foot, as fallacious as it is impudent and dishonest, and the names of the parties are not so great a secret as the Times would have the public to believe. We are not in the secret of the gang, but we do occasionally, without the aid of a Spirit medium, get a peep behind the scenes, and are favoured with a glimpse of the notorious railway chissellers, Farmer, deBlaquiere, & Co., flitting on the stage like Banchio's ghost, and we assure the Times that it will require but a few days to shift the scene, and the actors will find themselves in a far different position."

Now from among the mass of mystery and contradiction it would be hard indeed, to gather anything like facts, with any certainty; we must therefore wait patiently, until the clouds that hang so heavily around our railway affairs are dissipated, and they shall gain a peep at the light of day.

We certainly hope that the rumours are correct, and that an amalgamation has really taken place, for until then, we fear, the prospect of having a Southern line is poor indeed.

On Thursday last, a most distressing accident happened upon the river, opposite Sandwich, which caused the death of three men. A wood boat was struck by a sudden squall which capsized her, and all on board were drowned, before any assistance could be rendered them, although every effort was made by Messrs. Thomas and James McKee and Mr. Maynard in one boat, and Mr. Leech in another, to rescue them. When the boats reached the wreck, no one could be seen, all on board having perished. We have not been able to learn the name of the boat, or the names of the three men who were drowned.

☞ We have again to remind our readers of the Sale of Lots to take place on Saturday next, the 26th inst., upon the McKee Farm it this Town, (Plans of which have been published,) present to parties desirous of securing a pleasant situation for a residence, an opportunity not often to be met with. The land is rich and well adapted for gardening. The situation is picturesque, and has a number of pleasant groves interspersed through the property.

Remember, the Sale takes place on the 26th September, at 11 o'clock, upon the ground.

☞ We have received the prospectus of a work published upon the Geography and History of British America, and of the other Colonies of the Empire, in which is added a sketch of the various Indian tribes of Canada. Brief biographical notices of eminent persons connected with the history of Canada, and a chronology of British America, illustrated with 74 engravings. By J. G. Hodgins. This work should be upon the shelves of every Canadian library. Published by McClear & Co., Toronto

AGONY OF DESPAIR.—A young and lovely belle, who had watched anxiously—though in vain—for the coming of one of her many beaux, at length delivered herself of the following poetical and heart-rending rhyme:—

"I looked in vain—he did not come,
And so mighty sad was I,
I stuck a pin right in my thumb,
Which did nearly make me die."

Friend Bartley perpetrated the following pun the other evening, from the effects of which he has not yet quite recovered:

"Why is the 'Maple Leaf' newspaper like the forest Maple in the autumn?"

"Because its leaves always get read!"(red)

A man named Archibald Neal, or Neil, was killed on the line of the Great Western Railway, one mile east of the Bell River station, last Sunday morning. He had formerly been in the employ of Mr. Pierre Desjardins, at Stony Point, as a shoemaker, and had left on Saturday morning for Detroit to purchase a few things, and had reached Bell River Station on his way home; but unfortunately, he had imbibed enough of strong drink to render him oblivious, he therefore laid down on the track, doubtless to rest, and was run over by the train. His right hand and both legs were severed from his body. An inquest was held by Mr Alex. Bartlet, coroner, and a verdict returned in accordance with the foregoing facts.—Herald.

The "pepper dodge" is the latest refinement of street robbery in New York. A fellow meets you and throws Cayenne pepper in your eyes; his confederate comes up incquires the cause of your agony, assists you all in his power, picks your pockets, throws in a fresh handful of pepper, and leaves.

Yesterday's Colonist says:—"It is stated that Dr. Wood has voluntarily given himself up to the authorities of Michigan, and that they have accepted bail for him to stand his trial in November. The bail is $1,500—$1,000 by himself and $500 by Colonel Prince."

As a farmer named Shannon was attending a thrashing machine in the township of Blenheim on the 5th inst., his hand became entangled in the machinery and was greatly lacerated. One of his children ran into the house and told his mother what had happened. The circumstance so shoked her nervous system that she died soon afterwards.

The Kingston Whig, speaking of the Penitentiary, says:—"In Dr. Dill's cell were recently found, a cord of rope, a long file, a knife, and two iron bars! He is in the Black Hole, of course is to be flogged too! Had proper precautions been taken, these things never could have been gathered together—a word of time.

The ship Elizabeth Jane, which arrived in Quebec a few days ago from Plymouth, has on board 90 head of prize cattle, consisting of horses, horned cattle, sheep, and pigs, of the most valuable description, mostly purchased at the Royal Agricultural shows which were held this year at Salisbury and York, and which stock is destined for Canada and the States. The estimated value of the cattle is about £6,000.

THE ORDER OF FREEMASONS.—At the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Canada West, in this city, on the 9th inst., Sir Allan Napier McNab, Provincial Grand Master, presiding, the lodge declared itself independent of the Grand Lodge of England. A Grand Lodge was immediately organized under the name of Ancient Grand Lodge Free Masons of Canada, when M. W. Sir A. N. McNab was elected Grand Master; R. W. Thos. G Ridout, was elected Deputy Grand Master; V. W. Samuel D. Fowler was appointed Grand Senior Warden; V. W. Bro. Harmar was appointed Grand Registrar; Worthy Bro. Jamison was elected Grand Treasurer.

A Monster Reptile.

A correspondent of the Abingdon (U.S.) Democrat, writing from Walnut hill, Lee County, Va., who is, as the Democrat assures its readers, "a gentleman in whom implicit confidence may be placed," gives the following account of the killing of a monster reptile in Harland county, Ky He says:—

"About three weeks ago, five men went to gather whortleberries in the mountainous part of Harland county, Kentucky, and in their travels came to a small branch at the foot of a steep ridge, where they discovered a smooth beaten patch, or rather slide, that led from the branch up the ridge. Curiosity tempting them to know its meaning, they followed the trail to the top of the ridge, where, to their astonishment, they found about an acre of the ground perfectly smooth and destitute of vegetation, near the centre of which they discovered a small sink or cave, large enough to admit a salt barrel.

"They concluded to drop in a few stones, and presently their ears were saluted with a loud rumbling sound, accompanied with a rat ling noise, and an enormous serpent made i s appearance, blowing and spreading his head, and his forked tongue protruded. The men were struck with wonder and affright, and suddenly the atmosphere was filled with a smell so nauseating that three of the five men were taken very sick; the other two, discovering the condition of their companions, dragged them away from the abode of death. About two feet of the snake had, to their judgment, made its appearance, when they hurried home and told what they had seen to their neighbors.

"The next day were mounted some ten of the hardy mountaineers, armed with rifles, determined to destroy the monster. On approaching within one hundred yards of his snakeship, their horses suddenly became restive, and neither kindness nor force could make them go any nearer. The men dismounted, and hitching their horses, proceeded on foot with rifles cocked, to the mouth of the cave. They hurled in three or four large stones, and fell back some fifteen steps, when the same noise was heard as before, and out came the dreaded reptile, ready as his looks indicated, to crush the intruders.

"About the same length of the snake had appeared from the hole, when eight or ten bullets went through his head, and, as the monster died, he kept crawling out, until twenty feet of it at huge boa lay motionless on the ground. It was a rattlesnake with twenty-eight rattles—the first was four inches in diameter, the rest decreasing in size to the last. With difficulty the men dragged him home, and his skin can now be seen by the curious, in Harlan county."

THE STRENGTH OF DELHI.—The Pays gives the following account of the strength of Delhi as coming from a certain officer:—

"Delhi, at the moment of the breaking out of the insurrection, contained in depot the products of the cannon foundries of Kossipore, and the gun carriages and artillery material manufactured at Futteyghur, and those of the celebrated powder mills of Ichapooree. Independent of the heavy ordnance on the ramparts, it had in store 640 heavy guns, of the calibre from 18 to 24, intended to supply the different forts of the Calcutta Provi ence, besides 480 pieces of field artillery of the calibre of from 7 to 9, and 96 couses and 70 mortars. The store of projectiles and munitions was also very considerable. The Indian artillery has a well merited reputation, and all these guns are in excellent condition. At the time of the insurrection, there was not a single English regiment in Delhi. The native regiments of artillery and engineers did garrison duty, and this explains how it happens that the defence of the place is organized in such a regular manner. General Barnard went to a few days before his death. I cannot disguise from myself that I am before a new Sebastopol."

Jumped over Niagara Falls

CLIFTON, Sept. 12.

The curious visitor to the Clifton House may see written in the register book there, in a large but almost illegible handwriting, the name, W. T. Allen, England," and appended to it, in another hand, the words, "jumped off Table Rock, 11th." Such is the brief record of the latest tragic tale connected with Niagara Falls, which I shall endeavor to supplement with a few details.

W. T. Allen came hither yesterday by the afternoon train from Hamilton. He had it is thought, come through from Montreal.

The bar-tender remarked something singular in his manner, as if he had been drinking rather too freely; but judged it advisable to send up the champagne, and save annoyance.

Mr. Allen drank the wine, and was then furnished with paper, envelopes, pen and ink. He wrote two letters, folded them, and enclosed them in envelopes, which he addressed in a handwriting very different from that in the visitor's register,—blurred and almost illegible. One is for "Messrs Carter, Kerry & Co., Montreal, C. E." The other for Miss B. Allen, and I think the address is Spring Hall, Portugal (or Portland) Place, Dublin, Ireland. The poor man after this went to Table Rock, near to where the well known log is and walked into the water where it glides over the rocks in a sheet a few inches deep. He took off his hat, whirled it around his head, and flung it away into the mighty stream.—Then he was either himself carried away by the current, or, more probably, threw himself into it, in view of several spectators. The body has not yet been discovered.

Mr. Carter, of Montreal, was telegraphed for, and is expected to-night by the lightning train. He will probably take upon himself to open both letters, and we may then learn the reasons which prompted the poor young man to commit so deliberately this dreadful act.—Cor. of the Hamilton Spectator.

RUSSELL & RICHARDSON have in press a work entitled

THE MUSICIAN'S GUIDE;

Edited by Nathan Richardson, author of the Modern School for the Piano Forte, which recently took the first Prize Medal, and is so highly recommended by Thalberg, Dreyschock, Jewell, Dr. Mason, Wm. Mason and others as being superior to all other Instruction Books published.

The Musicians Guide will be ready this month. The engraving of some of the most important plates is the cause of its delay. It is a large quarto of 55 pages, containing many beautiful engravings, and a descriptive index to the ideas of over 600 different composers of music. It is an invaluable book for teachers of music, amateurs, and all players and singers.

From the Fruit Garden.

Gathering, Packing, and Preservation of Fruits.

This is a branch of the general subject of fruit culture and management that requires the most careful attention; for it is quite useless to take pains in producing fine fruits, without taking equal pains in gathering, preserving, and sending them to the table or the market in a sound, sightly, and proper condition. Very few fruit growers seem to appreciate this part of their business. Fruit dealers at home and abroad complain of the careless and slovenly manner in which our fruits are gathered, packed and presented in the market, and would gladly pay a double price for them in a better condition. The first consideration is—

The period of maturity at which fruits should be gathered.—The stone fruits generally are allowed to reach perfect maturity, or within four or five days of it, on the tree. In moist, cool seasons particularly, they are benefitted by being gathered a few days before maturity, and allowed to ripen in a dry, warm room; they part with the water contained in their juices, which thus become better elaborated and more sugary and high flavored.

Summer pears, too, on the same principle, require to be gathered, as a general thing, from a week to a fortnight before their maturity. Sweet summer pears such as are inclined to become mealy, are entirely worthless when ripened on the tree, and many very excellent varieties are condemned on this account. Such as these should be gathered the moment the skin begins to change color in the least degree.

Summer Apples, too, and especially those inclined to mealiness, should be picked early; as soon as the skin begins to change color, otherwise they part with their juices, and become worthless. Ripeness is indicated by the seeds turning dark colored, and by the stem parting readily from the tree when it is lifted upwards.

Winter Apples and Pears should be allowed to remain on the trees as long as vegetation is active, or until frosts are apprehended.

Grapes, Berries, &c., are allowed to attain perfect maturity before being gathered.

Mode of Gathering.—Unless it be a few specimens wanted for immediate use, which may be taken with some of the contrivances mentioned under the head of implements, all fruits should be gathered by the hand. The branch to be gathered from should first be taken off, one by one, with their stems attached. (For fruits neither keep so well, nor look so well, without the stems.) They are then laid carefully in single layers in broad shallow baskets, the bottoms of which should be covered with paper or moss, to prevent bruises.

When more than one layer of fruit is laid in the same basket, some soft paper, dry moss, hay, or other material, ought to separate them; for it is difficult to place one layer immediately upon another, and especially if the fruits are approaching maturity, without bruising them more or less. Fruit should only be gathered in dry weather, and in the dry time of the day.

Disposition of the Fruits after gathering.—When they are thus in the baskets, if summer fruits, they are carried in-doors to the fruit room and arranged on shelves or tables in thin layers, or they are carefully transferred one by one into market baskets and carried to market on an easy spring wagon, if not by steamboat or railroad, by which jarring or jolting will be avoided. Treated in this manner, they will be in fine marketable condition, and one basket will sell for as much as four, carelessly picked, thrown into baskets, and tumbled out of them into a barrel or wagon box.

Ripe fruits may be kept in good condition for a considerable period of time, in an ice-house, or in some of the recently invented fruit preservers, and even in very cool dry cellars. The vessels in which they are deposited, should be perfectly clean, that no unpleasant flavor may be imparted to them.

Winter Fruits intended for long keeping are transferred by hand from the baskets in which they are gathered on the tree, into large ones in which they can be carried into a dry cool room, where they are laid in heaps, which may be three or four deep, where they may remain for a couple of weeks, during which time they will have parted with considerable moisture and be quite dry. They will then be fit for packing.

Clean, new barrels should be procured and the fruits should be carefully assorted. For shipping to distant or foreign markets, the best only should be selected; all bruised, wormy, knotty specimens being laid aside for home consumption. They are then placed in the barrels, by hand, arranged regularly in layers, so that no spaces will exist, by which the fruits may shift, roll, or knock against one another. The barrels are then tightly headed up, so that the head presses firmly on the fruits; some people recommend placing a layer of clean moss or soft paper, both on the bottom and top of the barrel; but this is not necessary where the packing and heading are performed carefully. After packing, the barrels must be sent to market in such a manner as never to be jolted or rolled, any more than they would be on men's shoulders, or an easy spring waggon or sled, or by a water conveyance.

Fruit Rooms.—A fruit room is a structure set apart exclusively for the preservation of fruit. Its great requisites are, perfect security from moisture or dampness, exclusion from light, and a uniform temperature. If these points are obtained, no matter where, how, or of what material the fruit room be constructed. It may be built of stone, brick, clay, or wood, above or below ground, as circumstances or taste may dictate.

A good, dry, and cool cellar, is as good a place for keeping fruit in as can be provided; but the great objection to cellars used for other purposes is, that currents of air are frequently admitted, and too much light, by which the temperature is changed, decay promoted, or the fruits dried and shrivelled. There are, also, other objects that unavoidably saturated the air more or less with moisture.

Where a fruit room is built on the surface of the ground, it should be on the ice house principle of double walls and doors, to prevent access of either heat or cold from without. A good cellar or cave, built in a dry, sandy, or gravelly bank, or side hill, will answer every purpose. The walls may be of stone, brick, or timber; the roof should be thick, with a slope sufficient to throw off water freely, and the earth above should also be so graded that water will flow away as fast as it falls. Provision may be made for lighting and ventilating in the roof, and the door or doors should be double.

The interior should be fitted up with shelves and bins, with places for barrels or other articles, in which fruits are packed.

Attention to fruits in the cellar or fruit room.—The decay of fruits is caused either by bruises or by a fungus, or species of mould, that increases rapidly and attacks all decay that increases rapidly and attacks all fruits within its reach. It is, therefore, necessary to examine fruits frequently, and remove all that show any symptoms of decay, before they have either affected others or tainted the atmosphere of the room.

Important Improvement in Selecting Seed Wheat.

In the selection of seed wheat, take at least six bushels of a good quality, then take a sieve or screen with holes sufficiently large, so that 5 bushels of the 6 will pass through it. The one bushel that remains will be kernels of the larger size, and this should be used for seed. When this seed is sown and germinates, it will be found that the blades which spring from it will be uniform, and possess the same healthy appearance, and will maintain the same equality until the time of harvesting. Thus instead of having so great a proportion of small weakly stocks stat from diseased or pinched kernels, which can never produce any thing but small straw and consequently wheat of an inferior quality, the whole will stand a fair chance to come to maturity, divested of many evils which attend the sowing of grain where sifting is neglected.

But, says the reader, this important discovery of which you speak, don't amount to anything after all. It has been known for years, that to sift out the small grains from seed-wheat is a good idea, and is now generally practised among our best farmers. I will respectfully ask such, have you ever known sifting carried to the extent I propose? If you have not, you know but little of the real benefits that will result from this discovery and practice in accordance with its reasonable theory.

I am informed that Isaac Bowels, Esq, of this town, tried the experiment the past season, and the result was what we had good reason to expect, the most perfect growth of wheat he has ever raised. I believe if this practice should be adopted generally by the farmers of this State, the quality and quantity of the wheat crop would in a very few years be increased one quarter by the simple process of sifting seed in the proportion I have named, and no farmer need be afraid of injuring his seed by using the principle to too great an extreme. The improvement is within the reach of every farmer, and he can satisfy himself on this point.—Maine Farmer.

TOMATO FIGS.—Take six pounds of sugar to one peck, or sixteen pounds of fruit. Scald, and remove the skin in the usual way. Cook them over a fire, their own juice being sufficient without the addition of water, until the sugar penetrates, and they are clarified. They are then to be taken out, spread on dishes flattened and dried in the sun. A small quantity of the syrup should be occasionally sprinkled over them while drying; after which pack them down in boxes treating each layer with powdered sugar. Boil the remainder of the syrup, and bottle it for use. They will keep from year to year, and retain a nice flavour. The year should, or single tomatoes, answer the best purpose.

BLACKBERRY SYRUP.—We are indebted to a friend for the following receipt for making blackberry syrup. This syrup is said to be almost a specific for the summer complaint. In 1832 it was successful in more than one case of cholera:

To two quarts of juice of blackberries, add one pound of loaf sugar, ½ oz of nutmegs, ½ oz. cinnamon, pulverised, ½ oz. cloves, ½ oz. allspice, do. Boil all together for a short time, and when cold, add a pint of good proof brandy. From a tea-spoonful to a wine glass according to the age of the patient till relieved, is to be given.

HOW TO MAKE TEA PROPERLY.—The proper way to make a good cup of tea is a matter of some importance. The plan which I have practised for these twelve months is this: The teapot is at once filled up with boiling water; then tea is put into the pot, and is allowed to stand for five minutes before it is used; the leaves gradually absorb the water, and as gradually sink to the bottom; the result is, that the tea leaves are not scalded, as they are when boiling water is poured over them, and you get all the true flavor of the tea. In truth much less tea is required in this way than under the old and common practice.

BUTTERMILK.—It is not generally known that buttermilk can be used for many purposes in domestic affairs; and in consequence it is often thrown away or given to pigs.—New buttermilk, as a drink, is cooling and moist, the best remedy for a hot, thirsty stomach, good for hoarseness, excellent in consumptions and fevers, and also for constipation of the bowels. When stale and sour, it may be used in combination with bi-carbonate of soda for the making of bread, pastry, &c. The bread, buns and rolls made with it are excellent, keeping moist and good much longer than those made with yeast.

A HINT.—The weather destroys more tools than hard work, with some farmers; and more valuable time is lost hunting up and repairing lost implements than their original cost.

SCOTCH BUNS.—Take, of white flour, two pounds; bicarbonate of soda, 2 drachms; salt, quarter of an ounce; sour buttermilk, one pint or twenty ounces. Mix and bake the same as for tea cakes.

Six of the most beautiful names of the English language, begin with an H, which is just a little breath; heart, home, health, hearth, happiness and heaven

Mirth and Wit.

BUSINESS NOTICE.—A Western editor and his wife were walking out once in the bright moon light one evening. The wife was of an exceedingly poetical nature, and said to her mate, "Notice that moon—how bright, and calm, and beautiful!" "Couldn't think of noticing it," returned the editor, "for any thing less than usual rates—a dollar and fifty cents for twelve lines."

There is a big streak of truth in the following: "Good nature is good policy We frequently see a small measure of talent, but associated with kind manners and a genial disposition, rapidly making its way to fortune or distinction while a much larger measure of ability, but clogged with a churlish temper and an ungracious deportment lingers in the back ground, neglected and disparaged."

An Irishman remarked to his companion, on observing a lady pass: "Pat, did you ever see so thin a woman as that before? "Thin" replied the other, "Botherashen I seen a man as thin as two of her put together, I have."

The best description of weakness we ever heard is contained in the young query to his wife, when she gave him some chicken broth if she would not try to coax that chicken just to wade thrugh the soup once more!

To a fond mother, whose children were at the time making themselves disagreeable, a gentleman observed: "I have a decided preference for bad children, madam." "How strange—and, pray, for what reason?" said she. "Because they are always sent out of the room."

It is said that the kind mothers of the East are grown so affectionate that they give their children chloroform previous to whipping them.

It has been thought that people are degenerating, because they don't live as long as they did in the days of Methuselah; but the fact is, provisions are so high that nobody can afford to live very long.

I think, said a farmer, I should make a good Legislator, for I use their language. I proceed to-day, this other day, with a request for immediate payment; one I ordered to be laid on the table, and the other to be read that day six months.

If you wish to undertake any important enterprise, be sure and consult your wife. If she agrees with you, fly into her arms; if she does not; into a passion. What's her judgement good for, except to ratify the opinions of that Solomon, yourself?

An Irishman, seeing a crowd of people approaching asked what was the matter. "A man going to be buried," was the reply "Oh replied he'll stop to see that, for we carry them in our country."

There is a Quaker in Vermont who is so attached to the principles of the Peace Society, that he will not have a single flower in his garden; for "It's terrible," he says, "to walk out in the Spring and to see the flowers in all directions with shooting pistols!"

"Sammy, my boy, what are you crying for?" Bill throwed the Bible at me, and hit me on the head." "Well, you are the only one in the family on whom the Bible ever had any impression."

A person seeing a mischievous boy busily employed in throwing stones at the gallows, called out lustily. "Go it my little fellow, I warrant you you'll come to the mark at last."

A SCRIPTURAL WIFE.—A story is told of a grave divine on Cape Cod, who, not long since, awoke from a comfortable nap in his chair, and discovered his valuable helpmate mending his trousers. Inspired with a love of fun which seldom affected him, he inquired. "Why are you, my dear, like the evil adversary spoken of in Scripture?" Of course she was unable to discover any re semblance. "Because," said he, "while the husbandman slept, you sawed the tares."

A young and beautiful, but poor widow was about to marry a rich old widower. Her friends wished to know why she want ed to marry him. She replied, "for pure love; I love the ground (meaning the farm probably,) on which he walks, and the very house in which he lives." There is a platonic love for you! There is none of your school girl romance in that.

Boswell was talking one evening in St. James' Park, with much vanity; said his friend Temple, "We have heard of many kinds of bobby horses, but, Boswell, you ride upon yourself."

A fellow went, a few weeks since, into the store of a fashionable milliner. "Have you any shirts, madam?" asked he.—"Yes you fool! all kinds." "What do you ask a cord?" said the chap. "A cord!" replied the woman. "Yes, I want about a cord. Up in our diggins the petticoats has gin out I see you advertise corded shirts," and I thought while my hand was in, I'd take what you had corded up." The milliner fainted.

"Are you fond of Hogg's Tales?" said a rather verdant lady to a shepherd. "Yes, I like'em roasted or salt on'em," was the response. "No—but I mean have you read Hogg's Tales?" Now," said the bumpkin, "our hogs are all white or black—I dont think there is a red one among 'em."

About the hardest case ever heard of was a murderer named William Stone, executed many years since in Exeter, N. H. Just before the rope was placed around his neck he requested the Sheriff to give him a mug of ale. The request being promptly acceded to he took the mug and commenced blowing the froth from the ale. "What are you doing that for?" nervously asked the Sheriff. "Because," returned the scoundrel, "I don't think froth is healthy."

The editor of the Lynn (Mass.) News thinks children's game are becoming popular with older persons now-a days, as he has seen, recently, "a large number of full grown men chasing hoops in our streets."

A young lady being asked by a warm theologian which party in church she was most in favor of, she replied that she preferred a weddinn party.

GREEN'S

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighbouring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supportedhim since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

Farmers

Call at the Great Western Boot store, where you will find every article in the Boot and Shoe trade to suit you.

N. B.—Customer's wear of all kinds made to order on the shortest notice.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

True Blue.

[TUNE: "I've kissed and I've prattled with fifty fair maids."]

There are fifty fine colors that flaunt and flare,
All pleasant and easy to see;
But of all the fine colors that dance in the air,
True Blue's the color for me.

True Blue is the color of good true love,
For it melts in woman's eye;
True Blue is the color of Heaven above,
For it beams in the azure sky.

True Blue is the vest that Nature free,
Has spread round the joyous earth;
True Blue is the hue of the dancing sea,
As it gave to beauty birth.

True Blue, it flows in the soft blue vein,
Of a bosom that's fair and true,
As the tint, softened by Heaven's own rain,
Is tinged by the Heavenly hue.

True Blue, it flows in the soft blue vale,
Where the fond hearts love to roam,
It curls in the smoke from the sheltered dale,
As it guides the wanderer home.

True Blue hangs glorious over the wave,
From a thousand ships unfurled;
It clothes the breast of the British brave,
As they bear it round the world.

And when skies grow dark and wild winds yell,
If he sees but a streak of blue,
The steersman is glad, for he knows all's well,
And his guardian angel's true.

Then let all the gay colors go flaunt and flare,
All pleasant and gay to see,
True Blue's the color alone to wear,
True Blue's the color for me.

The Night Before the Wedding.

"This must be the last of your wedding gifts, Vanika," said madame Brentano, handing a small package to her daughter.

"As you are to be married to-morrow, and it is now quite late in the evening, I think there will be no more."

"Mother!" said the young girl, in a frightened tone, bolting on a small jet neck lace, the contents of the package, "see it is black! It is ominous. Oh, what grief can be in store for Henry and me!"

"None, none, Vanika!—this is mere folly," said her mother in a kind tone of rebuke.

But it was some minutes before the young maiden recovered her calmness. Then conquering her weakness by a violent effort she said lightly:

"Am I not silly, mother? You will laugh when I tell you it, but my blood ran cold, and my flesh seemed to creep, as I touched this bauble, as it had been a serpent. See, I do not mind it now!"

Vanika Brentano was the only child of wealthy Prussian commoners. She had long been betrothed to Henry Werder, a young officer in the Prussian army, but, owing to the war in Europe, their wedding had been long delayed. Now, however, there was peace, and the lovers were to be united the day after the one toward the end of which my story commences. Vanika was devotedly attached to her betrothed, and too happy at the near approach of their nuptials to allow the black necklace to disquiet her long. Her parents left the room, and, throwing herself into a chair, she leaned her head against its back, and sank into a reverie, her fingers mechanically playing the while with her last gift. It was easy to see that her reflections were of a pleasant nature, for, ever and anon, a beautiful smile stole over her features, and fading gradually away, still left the same expression of quiet happiness. She had been sitting there some time, when another person entered the room. The intruder was a young handsome man dressed in the Prussian uniform. His face was pale, and wore an agitated look, strongly contrasting with the peaceful smile on Vanika's lips. She did not hear him enter, and he stood for a moment looking with his eyes beaming tenderness upon her; then, with the air of a man who had a distressing duty to perform, he advanced and stood before her.

"Henry!" she exclaimed, starting to her feet. "I did not expect you this evening. Has anything happened?"

"Much, much, Vanika. Sit down again, and I will take this stool at your feet. My own beloved, I come to tell you that our wedding must be postponed."

"Our wedding!" cried the astonished girl.

"Even so! You are astonished, perhaps hurt; have I told you too abruptly? Look in my face, Vanika, and see what I suffered before I would grieve you with my bad news."

"But, Henry, I do not understand. Why must we wait still longer?"

"Because I must leave you in twenty minutes."

"Leave me."

"Yes! Napoleon, has left Elba, and is even now in Paris. Our troops leave the city in half an hour."

"Henry! am I awake? No, no, Henry; you are not in earnest. Ah!" she said, shudder ing, as she caught sight of the necklace, "I said it was ominous! I—I—Henry, you cannot leave me. Too night, too! the very night before our wedding!"

"Vaninka, do not tremble and sob so! Vanika!" he cried, straining her to his breast, "I must go; see the clock points to the time I set to leave you, Vaninka! She has fainted. Better so!" And kissing her pale face again and again, he laid her on the sofa, and went in search of her parents. A few words told them all, and bearing their fervent blessing, he departed.

Weeks passed, and Vaninka heard nothing from her lover. She grew pale and thin, her movements were languid, and her former light step grew slow and heavy. She no longer sang at her work but would let her hands fall listlessly into her lap, and heave deep sighs, while sometimes the great tears rolled unheeded down her cheeks.

At length there came the news of the battle of Waterloo. Napoleon had been defeated, and all Europe was ringing with the tidings. Vaninka's suspense now amounted to perfect agony. "Henry!" she would cry. "Is he killed! Oh, when will he come!"

One morning, when she was seated with her mother, sewing, she was told that a Prussian officer waited to see her. With her heart trembling between fear and hope, she obeyed the summons. As she slowly entered the room, a stranger rose, and advanced to meet her.

"Mademoiselle Brentano," he inquired, bowing.

"The same. Will you be seated, sir?"

"I am Frederick Listen. I served in the battle of Waterloo, in the same regiment with Henry Werder, and he requested me to deliver this to you." As he finished he placed a small package in her hands.

"Why does he not come himself? He is not dead! Oh, say he is not dead!" she said in a voice of such imploring agony that the young soldier felt the tears rise in his eyes.

"Lady," he said, in a sad tone, "Henry fell at Waterloo."

She did not scream nor faint, but sank into the chair near her with only a moan of agony. He mistook her silent, tearless agony for calmness, and began to relate the particulars of his comrade's death, and delivered his sad message to his betrothed. Vaninka heard every word, but she neither spoke nor stirred, but sat with her eyes fixed on the little package he had given her. He left her, and her mother found her, half an hour after, still in the same position.

"Vaninka," she said, "who was your visitor?"

There was no answer.

"Vaninka!" she said again. "Are you ill?" and she laid her hand gently upon her arm.

"Dead, mother, dead!" she said, now raising her eyes.

"Who is dead, darling?" asked her mother, frightened at her strange tone.

Vaninka slowly opened the package, drew out the ring and hair it contained, and murmured, "Henry! Oh, mother, he is dead!" She fell sobbing into her mother's arms.

* * * * *

We change the scene now to Waterloo, in the latter part of the battle between the armies of Napoleon and Wellington. The moment we choose was the one in which the Imperial Guard of the Emperor threw themselves with desperate valour between the advancing Prussian forces and the English army, to prevent their joining their strength. Henry Werder, at the head of his regiment, felt his heart throb with intense excitement, as the two immense columns the flower of the French army, advanced upon the English troops. They came on in silence, until within range of the batteries prepared to receive them; then a terrible discharge, seeming to rend heaven and earth, scattered death among their ranks.—Still the veterans advanced; the honor of the nation was in peril; they could die, but not turn before the enemy. Another discharge and the Prussian troops, who had been rapidly nearing the scene of action, then dashed amongst them. The Garde Imperiale de Napoleon was utterly annihilated. One exultant shout was raised by the allied armies as this fearful crisis was decided in their favour.

But where in the moment of victory, was Henry? Stretched upon the field, his head supported by his fellow officer, Frederick Listen, and the life blood flowing from a wound in his breast.

"Frederick!" he murmured, in a dying voice, "you will see Vaninka?"

"If I live," answered his comrade, with deep emotion.

"You will give her this ring, and cut some of my hair off for her. Tell her my dying thoughts were all of her. Heaven bless you, my comrade. Farewell!" and his head fell heavily back.

"Dead!" said Frederick, "and I must leave him here!"

Frederick was mistaken. Henry was mistaken. Henry was not dead; he had only fainted. Some hours afterwards he was lying on a hospital bed in a raving delirium. For weeks life and death were in the balance; then a young strong constitution triumphed and he began to mend. His Physician positively forbade his returning to Prussia, and, warning him that his lungs were much affected, he recommended a winter in Italy. Writing a long letter to Vaninka to explain his long absence, Henry made his preparations, and, after an illness of over three months, started in the early part of October for Naples. He remained there, gaining health and strength, until the next June, and then started for home. During his residence in Italy, he had written again and again to both Vaninka and Frederick, and wondered why he had received no letter in answer. His epistles never reached them.

* * * * *

We now return to Vaninka. Contrary to the fears of her friends, she had seemed to bear her loss with calmness. She had been so long in a state of agonizing suspense, that any certainty, even this direful one, was a relief. Still her step did not regain its elasticity, and her grief if not loud, was deep. Her friends mistook despair for calmness.—She grew paler and thinner, and now frequently kept her room for days together.

Her lover had been gone some eight months when her hand was again sought in marriage. George Weimar was a gentleman old man, and of about seventy years of age wealthy, and of large influence in his native town. He was an old friend of Vaninka's father, and had long thought of seeking Vaninka for his bride. When, however, he had seen the place so coveted about to be worthily filled, he had kept quiet on the subject of his desires, and cultivated the acquaintance of his lady-love's betrothed.—Now, deceived as others were by Vaninka's quiet demeanour, he advanced his suit. Her parents, knowing that he would spare no pains or expense to make her happy, urged their child to accept his offer, and she consented to see him.

"Mr. Weimar," she said, "I wished to tell you how grateful I feel for your kind and flattering offer, and to place my situation full before you. God alone knows how entirely my heart is occupied by my dead love. Since I heard of my irreparable loss, I have felt that I should ere long join him; still, I endeavored faithfully to perform the duties left to me. I do not think I shall live long, but, if I can by any means add to the happiness of another, God has granted me the will to do so. If you will accept my hand, knowing that my heart is in Henry's grave, it is yours, and I will endeavor to fulfil my duties as a wife, trusting in your love and indulgence to forgive me if I fail in making you happy while I am with you."

The good old man was too happy to have his offer accepted on any terms, and he thanked her warmly. A day was soon set for the wedding, and all things were making ready.

Mr. Weimar hoped, by travelling and other diversions of her mind, to raise the bride's spirits and prolong her feeble life.

* * * * *

Again it was the night before Vaninka's wedding, and again she was seated lost in thought, in the same chair that we first saw her in. Now, alas, the reverie was a very painful one, and low, choking sobs took the place of her former happy smiles. She was sitting painfully reflecting on the past when a shadow fell on the ground before her. He stood with his back to the lights; she could not see his face, but something made her heart stand still as she arose to greet him. He only said one word, "Vaninka!" and, exclaiming, "Henry!" she sprang to his embrace. He caught her passionately to his breast, and held her there as if he feared another separation.

"So," said a pleasant voice at the door, "there is a change of bridegrooms," and Mr. Weimar entered the room. Vaninka stood a moment confused, but, taking her hand, he placed it in Henry's saying, "Take her, Henry; she is too young, good, and handsome for an old man like myself. I was an old fool to think of it. Take her, and my warmest blessings attend your union."

This time Vaninka's wedding was not postponed, and she wore a white dress in the bridal morning. Henry stood before the altar, Mr. Weimar, watched the happy, blushing face of the bride, owned that he could not have called up, with all his devotion, such an expression of perfect love and joy.

A COSTLY AND SWORDISH FASHION.—When will ladies learn that it is neither elegant nor fashionable to trail a quarter or half a yard of costly silk after them in the mud and dirt of our streets? When will they learn that it is nothing but a vulgar, ostentatious and ridiculous display, a coarse, vain mind, too selfish in the gratification of folly, to reflect upon the toil and care by which the money was earned that purchased the expensive dress to be thus wantonly abused. In Paris and London none but the most abandoned and vicious dress in this ridiculous way. Gentlewomen and all women who wish to be thought respectable, have their dresses carefully made to nearly reach the ground, only without touching it, reserving for the drawing-room exclusively, their trailing dresses.—Buffalo Daily Press

A LIVE "DEAD HEAD."—The Detroit papers, a few days ago, stated that the locomotive upon the Express train over one of the roads to that city, came into the depot with a "dead head" in front, in the shape of a large ram. But we have a more remarkable instance of the "free pass" system to record. The engine "Rochester," two or three nights ago, drawing the Express train which reached the city at 4 o'clock on night arrived at the depot of the Central road with a yearling heifer snugly deposited on the bumper over the pilot. One leg had been broken, but otherwise it was "alive and kicking." Where it came from, or whose property it was, no one knew. The engineer of the train was not aware that he had a dead head passenger in front until the train arrived in the depot.

MASTER WATERLOO.—A somewhat curious case is about to be submitted to the Civil Tribunal of Amsterdam:—An inhabitant of that city presented himself on the 18th June last at the office of the registrar of Births and stated that having had a child born on that day, anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, has given it the name of Peter Henry Waterloo, and wished him to be so registered. The official remarked that Waterloo, was not a regular Christian name, and that consequently it must be considered as a surname; he therefore declined to register that name on the ground that by article 63 of Dutch Civil Code no one can change or add to his surname without the authorisation of the king. The father of the child has taken legal proceedings to compel the registration of the names he has chosen, and decision of the tribunal is looked forward to with interest.

IMAGINATION.—Thomas Fuller relates a curious incident which is truly characteristic, and shows how fancy will put life into young limbs. "A gentleman," he says, "having led a company of children beyond their usual journey, they began to be weary, and jointly cried to him to carry them, which, because of their multitude, he could not do, but he told them he would provide them horses to ride on. Then cutting little wands out of the hedges as nags for them, and a larger one for himself, they mounted, and those who could scarce stand before, now full of mirth, bounded cheerfully home.

PATENT POCKET BOOK.—We were shown samples of a new style of Pocket Book, which was invented by D. C. Smith of this place, who is the Patentee. This book will destroy the pick pocket business. It is so constructed as to fasten at the option of the owner, to any portion of his pockets, and cannot be removed without warning the owner. This valuable book will command the attention of the public at large and will find a ready sale. It has long been needed by travellers who have valuable papers to carry.—Tecumseh Herold.

A RAILWAY CONVENIENCE.—A gentleman in Milwaukee, as we learn from the Sentinel, has invented an ingenious and simple affair which he calls a "Railway Indicator." The invention consists of a small box placed within the car, containing the names of the stations, and having a bell, and a wire leading to the outside of the car. On approaching the station, the brakesman pulls the wire, the bell is struck, and the cylinder revolves once, exhibiting the name of the station.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Persons of plethoric habit, subject to a temporary loss of consciousness from a sudden determination of the blood to the brain, will find great benefit from a course of Holloway's Pills. Epilepsy, spasms, convulsions, hysterics, palpitation of heart, and all affections arising from disordered action of the vascular and nervous systems, are cured by a steady and persevering adherence to this mild cathartic. It regulates the action of the great internal organs, and thus equalizes the circulation.

Some idea of the extent of the great wall of China may be gathered by a remark of Dr. Bowring in a lecture on that country recently delivered in England. He said that if all the bricks, stone and masonry in Great Britain were gathered together, they would not furnish materials enough for such a wall as the wall of China, and that if all the materials in the buildings of London were put together, they would not make the towers and turrets that adorn it.

Letters from England say that an attempt will be made to launch the Great Eastern steamship about the 5th October, the tides at that date being the highest of the month.

AN ORIGINAL SENTIMENT.—A Durham paper reports the speech of a gallant gentleman who, proposing the health of the ladies, remarked that if he might be allowed to couple with the toast a sentiment, which was peculiarly proper in the present day, he would say—"May their virtues be ample as their petticoats, and their faults be smaller than their bonnets."—(Immense laughter.)

NOVEL TIMEPIECE.—A watchmaker of Newport has in his shop-window a timepiece of peculiar construction and recent invention, showing the hour not at Greenwich alone, but in all parts of the world. The names of places of note are arranged in a circle, according to their respective longitudes. The clock, which has been registered, will save captains and others much trouble.

Sir Edmund Walker Head, Bart., Governor General of British North America, is gazetted as Privy Councellor. This entitles him to prefix "Right Honourable" to his name.

THE MAYOR OF CHICAGO.—The Mayor of Chicago is thus described by a correspondent of the Boston Journal. A look at his picture may convert many to Greeley's belief that "fops" are wanted very much in this country just now. "He stands six feet in his stockings. Old straw hat turned down all around like cotton umbrella—no neckcloth—short, bad-fitting linen coat—loose unmentionables, which looked as if he had jumped too far into them and hadn't time to get back—unblacked, untied shoes, three times too large—and a slight stoop to the tall figure, and the picture is complete. You see him?—Well, sir, that shabby, elephantine individual, who looks as if he had not a cent in the world, is Johannes Longatus, Mayor of Chicago, and he is worth five hundred thousand dollars."

The Baltimore Clipper gives the following euphonious names under which the clubs of the so-called "American party" are rallying for the campaign: Diggers, Black Snakes, Stay Laces, Plug Uglies, Rough Skins, Hard Times, Little Fellows, Blood Tubs, Dips, Ranters, and Rip Raps.

WILL ENGLAND PUT DOWN THE INDIAN REVOLT!—The question has been asked, will England be able to put down the Insurrection? We ask, in turn, why not? She is the most powerful nation on the face of the globe—she has not only her own wealth, but the wealth of the world at her command; she has no enemies in Europe to disturb her tranquility at home, and she has, also time, confronted all Europe in arms from 1793 to 1801, she subsidized all Europe to fight her battles against republican France. From 1803 to 1809, she had no less than three coalitions against her, of Austria, Prussia and Russia. From 1809 to 1812, she stood alone with her allies—Spain and Portugal—against all Europe and even that time till 1815, she was at the head of the European coalition against Napoleon. In 1812 her expenditure was £96,000,000 sterling, in 1813 it exceeded £100,000,000, in 1814 it swelled to £118,000,000, and in 1815 it reached the incredible figure of £126,000,000. There is nothing like this in all history. Those who think that the great public debt with which she is burthened will prevent her in future from making such exertions as she did in times past, have not reflected that she is now much more able to sustain a war than then; that the value of her private property is three times as great; that her tonnage has more than doubled itself—that from the increase of gold and silver money, is not worth more than half what it was at that time—that, consequently, had everything else remained precisely as it was, the debt would be only half its nominal value, and that her advancement in all other respects being considered, she has three times the ability to pay. Above all, her sons are disciplined to the race the most persevering, the most indomitable, the most energetic of which there is any account.—She will not only conquer, but she would do so in spite of all Europe, and with all Europe leagued against her. It has been suggested that she will meet with difficulties in raising troops, as she did in the Russian war; but the English people had no particular grudge against the Russians, and no particular partiality for the Turks. The case is different here. India is their own soil.—They will enlist thousands to defend it. If necessary, Parliament can alter the constitution, so as to allow the militia to be sent out of the kingdom, and the nation will sanction the act. England will take severe vengeance for the atrocious cruelties to which her children have been subject in India, and she will lay the foundation of her power too deep to be shaken again.—Richmond Whig.

A White Girl kidnapped and sold as a Slave.

The New Orleans correspondent of the St. Louis Leader gives the following account of the kidnapping and sale of a white girl:

"One of the principal sensations in this vicinity since my last, has been the flight of a young and beautiful girl, claiming to be white, from the domicile of a negro trader in Carrollton, and her claiming protection from the authorities, at the prison of our adjoining parish. The case is one of the most mysterious that has occurred in a long time, and there is very little doubt in the minds of the public, that a large amount of criminality is, as yet, lying quietly at the bottom of it. To all appearances, the girl is of pure Caucasian blood; which is what she asserts, and her story is, that she was left an orphan by the death of her parents in Kansas, and was placed in charge of a negro trader, who says that the latter has been for some time in California, and that she was induced to leave Arkansas by the representation of a man that he had received instructions from her guardian to bring her to New Orleans and send her on to him. It is a matter of fact that the man who brought the girl from Kansas, sold her as a slave, and that she was purchased by a trader who placed her in a house in Carrollton. That he originally intended her for his own private purposes, there is little doubt, and it was after successfully resisting his first attempt to consummate his wishes that the girl took refuge in the parish prison of Jefferson. The trader, whose name is White, has published a card, stating that he purchased a girl in good faith from a man named Hallibarton, but that he is not disposed to throw any obstacles in the way of her obtaining her freedom, if she is entitled to it. The matter, has not been brought before any legal tribunal, and I am inclined to believe that such a step is not strongly desired by certain parties interested in it. Taking all the circumstances into consideration, I am not inclined to place implicit faith in the statements of the girl, and yet they may be religiously true. As I said before, there is a mystery about the transaction that renders it peculiarly interesting. The youth and beauty of the girl enlists the sympathies of all who see her and hear her story, and if she has been wronged every effort will be made to right her."

If the beautiful young girl happens to have a tinge of negro blood in her veins, the Leader and Sham Democrats generally will consider this sympathy all wasted.

The Black Ball Clippers.

The most celebrated ship of this line of clippers, the Lightning has been daily visited by some hundreds during the short period she has been anchored off Tilbury Fort. Our readers will scarcely require to be reminded of who or what the Lightning is, the almost marvellous rapidity of her passage between this country and Australia having made her name familiar as a "household word." She has the true clipper look—long, low, and apparently narrow, with a stern like a yacht, and her bows as sharp and clear as those of a mail steamer—rather heavy aloft, and with yards sufficient to slum-at overpower her with canvass. In fact, she is a perfect clipper, and one in which the builders have thrown aside the minor points of symmetry and trim to produce a fleet and useful vessel. Her appearance from the water is by no means comparable to those of either of her sister vessels, the James Baines or Champion of the Seas, to which it will be recollected Her Majesty and the Court recently paid a visit while the ships were waiting to embark the troops at Portsmouth. Both the latter vessels are larger and have three decks while the Lightning is considerably lower in the water and has only two decks. Nevertheless, in capacity for stowage, height between decks, and as a safe and rapid vessel the Lightning is generally considered as without a rival in our commercial marine. Her first homeward voyage from Melbourne to Liverpool was actually accomplished in 63 days, which including stoppages, dead calms, and contrary winds, gives the extraordinary average of 11 miles an hour on the whole run. During one week of this voyage she ran 2,353 statute miles or at the rate of 15½ miles an hour for seven consecutive days, and at another period she attained her greatest speed, which being by observation no less than 430 nautical miles in 24 hours or 20 miles an hour—the rate of travelling of our Parliamentary trains. As is always the case with these very fast vessels, there is nothing peculiarly smart or showy, in a technical sense in her appearance. On the contrary, there are few landsmen, who would not be inclined to give the preference to many vessels now near the Lightning, but which, nevertheless, would stand no more chance in a contest of speed with the latter than with a first-rate steamship itself. Her extreme length is 243 feet; breadth 44 feet; depth of hold, 24 feet; burthen, 2,023 tons. She has been chartered by the East India Company for the conveyance of cavalry, and 650 men and officers will be on board of her this evening. This force includes the whole of the 7th Hussars, and reinforcements for several of the regiments already in India.—The whole of the men will be accommodated on the troop-deck, which is unusually spacious and well ventilated, being 176 feet long, 40 feet broad, and 8 feet high with wide hatchways and ventilators. The vessel can accommodate a very large number of officers, even more probably than are likely to go out this trip.—London Times, Aug. 1st 25.

Defalcation at the Gore Bank—The Teller Absconded.

It was known on Tuesday that Mr. Lucas the Teller of the Gore Bank, was absent from his post without leave, and surmises were at once indulged in that a screw was loose somewhere in the conduct of that institution. What it was, but a few of the initiated knew, and it was not till yesterday morning that the full truth became public that Mr. Lucas had proved a defaulter to a large amount—hundreds of dollars—and had decamped. People were startled at this intelligence, for the absconding individual had ever been regarded as a man of estimable character, and possessing none of those extravagant follies, which have so often led the McGuffies and Cummings' of the world astray. He seemed, in fact, to be a model of a bank clerk; quiet, precise, orderly, punctual, and the very last person in the world who would have been charged with embezzlement or misappropriation. That Mr. Lucas did not spend the amount which his accounts prove him to be deficient in, every one knows, and we must look farther afield for a reason.

The fact is, he had been drawn into speculations, and had lent the funds of the bank to shave notes for other speculators, the proceeds of which were reinvested in similar operations, in Toronto, in Goderich, and elsewhere. These deficiences were covered from week to week, by drafts of short dates, drawn on the very parties who were receiving the irregular accommodation at the hands of Lucas. These drafts were honored from time to time, and passed into the mind of the public, that a large amount of criminality is, as yet, lying quietly at the bottom of it. To all appearances, the girl is of pure Caucasian blood; which is what she asserts, and her story is, that she was left an orphan by the death of her parents in Kansas, and was placed in charge of a negro trader, who says that the latter has been for some time in California, and that she was induced to leave Arkansas by the representation of a man that he had received instructions from her guardian to bring her to New Orleans and send her on to him. It is a matter of fact that the man who brought the girl from Kansas, sold her as a slave, and that she was purchased by a trader who placed her in a house in Carrollton. That he originally intended her for his own private purposes, there is little doubt, and it was after successfully resisting his first attempt to consummate his wishes that the girl took refuge in the parish prison of Jefferson. The trader, whose name is White, has published a card, stating that he purchased a girl in good faith from a man named Halliburton, but that he is not disposed to throw any obstacles in the way of her obtaining her freedom, if she is entitled to it. The matter, has not been brought before any legal tribunal, and I am inclined to believe that such a step is not strongly desired by certain parties interested in it. Taking all the circumstances into consideration, I am not inclined to place implicit faith in the statements of the girl, and yet they may be religiously true. As I said before, there is a mystery about the transaction that renders it peculiarly interesting. The youth and beauty of the girl enlists the sympathies of all who see her and hear her story, and if she has been wronged every effort will be made to right her."

If the beautiful young girl happens to have a tinge of negro blood in her veins, the Leader and Sham Democrats generally will consider this sympathy all wasted.

The Black Ball Clippers.

The most celebrated ship of this line of clippers, the Lightning has been daily visited by some hundreds during the short period she has been anchored off Tilbury Fort. Our readers will scarcely require to be reminded of who or what the Lightning is, the almost marvellous rapidity of her passage between this country and Australia having made her name familiar as a "household word." She has the true clipper look—long, low, and apparently narrow, with a stern like a yacht, and her bows as sharp and clear as those of a mail steamer—rather heavy aloft, and with yards sufficient to slum-at overpower her with canvass. In fact, she is a perfect clipper, and one in which the builders have thrown aside the minor points of symmetry and trim to produce a fleet and useful vessel. Her appearance from the water is by no means comparable to those of either of her sister vessels, the James Baines or Champion of the Seas, to which it will be recollected Her Majesty and the Court recently paid a visit while the ships were waiting to embark the troops at Portsmouth. Both the latter vessels are larger and have three decks while the Lightning is considerably lower in the water and has only two decks. Nevertheless, in capacity for stowage, height between decks, and as a safe and rapid vessel the Lightning is generally considered as without a rival in our commercial marine. Her first homeward voyage from Melbourne to Liverpool was

Messrs. Jones' property alone falling a sacrifice. In the attempt to arrest some of the fugitives, constable Robinson received three violent blows on the head, and it was necessary to take him to Dr. Hallowell's, where his wounds were attended to. The police afterwards arrested William Kelly a cabman, whom the constable alleges to be the party who assaulted him. The watchman, Patrick Conlin, has also been arrested. It appears that the principal suspicion against him is the fact that he gave no alarm. He, however, asserts the contrary, and says that, about half past twelve o'clock, he was on the corner of George and Duchess streets, when he saw two men coming from Queen towards Nelson street; they stood for about ten minutes, and then walked away. Conlin states that he then sat in front of the door, and that upon hearing one of the horses make a noise, he went in and fed the animal, it being loose. He then heard an explosion, and upon going out, saw two men pass the door. He followed to watch them, and observed a man with a blackened face holding a pistol in his hand. The man appeared to be about 5. 6 or 7 in., and wore black clothes. The last man disappeared.—Conlin next noticed a light on west side of the sheds; called fire, and went as far as Duchess street, and on his return found the flames had completed possession of the premises. The constable having given a description of the escaped fugitive, suspicion fell upon Kelly. He is a driver for McKay, Queen street, and was arrested there. The police found Kelly in bed with trousers and boots on. In his coat was found a heavy stone. He accounted for this by stating that, he was at the Humber the previous evening, and on his return home having observed several drunken men, he picked up the stone for self defence.

The following information was sworn to by the Chief of Police:—"On the morning of the 26th, a fire broke out in the stable of Elias Jones & Co., consuming the same, together with several omnibuses and other property; that one Patrick Conlin was engaged as night watchman, and that he allowed said fire to proceed without giving any alarm; and that Thomas Caldwell was caught in the act of running away from the said fire. And that another supposed to be Rickaby made good his escape; and complainant further saith he is informed, and believes, that said fire was the work of an incendiary. He therefore prays that said Patrick Conlin and Francis Caldwell may be arrested and detained until justice is done in the premises." And this day sworn to. Sworn before me, GEORGE GURNETT, P. M.

The prisoners already made amenable, viz: Patrick Conlin, Thomas Caldwell, and William Kelly, were brought before the Court, and stoutly denied their guilt. They were remanded until Monday. Of the six of the omnibusses, only partly injured, were found three bottles of burning fluid, and one of turpentine, plainly demonstrating the means of the incendiaries adopted to accomplish their purpose. Warrants have been issued for several parties suspected to be implicated in the outrage.—Globe.

FRENCH TRIBUTE TO BRITISH VALOR.—In an article on the late events in India, the Constitutionnel pays the following tribute to the noble qualities there displayed by our intrepid countrymen:—"Nothing could soften the bitterness inspired by the sad news from India, it is assuredly the spectacle presented by the gallant men who have fallen victims to the rebellion.—The dignity of the British character, and the admirable strength of the Anglo Saxon race, which has performed so great a role in the history of the world, shine forth with splendour. Among the officers of the revolted regiments there were many young men who, by their youth and inexperience may have contributed to the events which have swept them away. But they have wiped away all faults by the firmness, free from ostentation, which they exhibited in late events. We have described more than one deed of heroism worthy of the admiration of posterity. In the midst of torments, and on the brink of the grave, they have displayed that modest courage which characterizes in our days the men ennobled by the influence of Christian civilization. The cruelty of the murderers has only been equalled by the courage of the victims. A nation which loses such men must doubtless bewail their martyrdom, but it has the right to be proud of them."

ENGLISH INVASION OF SCOTLAND.—The extensive improvements at Holyrood, and the great embarkment of the operations of the Court of Balmoral, attract attention. The fact is, the Scotch are the most loyal people in Europe, and the Highlanders the most loyal of the Scotch. Such romantic vicissitudes have overtaken the crowned heads of Europe, that foresight prompts even the most secure to see where they will be safest. It is strange to see how fast the English nobility and gentry are buying up all the Highland fastnesses. The expenditure of capital upon these regions is prodigious, and we are assured that the agricultural and productiveness of the northern counties of Scotland is incredibly great. The fact is, the natural capabilities of Scotland are not comprehended. Her climate is bad because her soil is uncultivated. But her soil is naturally rich and productive, and drainage and culture and plantation work miracles on her. Fifty miles from London, the land under plough is actually little more than one-fourth the rent of Morayshire or Rossshire. Much of the land in Sussex is let at 10s. per acre; not a little in Morayshire and Rossshire brings £1, aye, even £3—Weekly Dispatch.

ANCHORS FOR THE GREAT EASTERN STEAMSHIP.—One of the set of anchors for the leviathan steam ship Great Eastern, building on the Thames, arrived here (Liverpool) on Wednesday, and is now lying at the George's Basin, near the landing-stage. It weighs 6 tons 19 cwt. 2 qrs, and being of Trotman's patent is equal to an ordinary anchor of ten tons. The largest size used in the British navy is 4½ to 5 tons, but of the ordinary description. The manufacturers are Messrs. Wood and Co., of Saltney Ironworks. "Trotman's anchor" is on the swivel principle, and was selected by Mr. Brunel from a host of competitors as the one calculated to give the greatest security, combined with other minor advantages. The largest ships afloat have Trotman's anchors—the Cunard Company's, the Australian Companies, H. M. S. Himalaya, &c., &c., and to the number of these is now to be added this monster ship.—Liverpool Times.

TOWNSEND'S TRIAL.

This trial has at length come off, at Cayuga, and the jury being unable to agree upon their verdict, were discharged. We copy the following from the Colonist correspondent:—

GRAND RIVER, Sept. 28, 1857.

A trial of so extraordinary a character as that just concluded, can scarcely be found in the criminal records of any country in the world. The nature of the crime—the character of the chief criminal—his escape after its perpetration—are all sufficiently remarkable. The murder of Nelles was indeed, so unprovoked, so wantonly cruel, that it could scarcely be committed but by the most hardened ruffian. The murderer was a lad of two or three and twenty, who, so far as our knowledge of him extends, could have received no apprenticeship in guilt so heinous, and yet we find him the leader of a gang of desperate ruffians; and while surrounded by four well-armed fellows, deliberately taking the life of an inoffensive, defensive man,—a punishment, as he tauntingly said to his dying victim, for slamming the door in his face. As has been generally supposed hitherto, he made his escape from justice by shooting the officer who attempted to arrest him, and, as was unwillingly admitted by one of the witnesses for the defence during the recent trial, he remained concealed in the County of Haldimand, undoubtedly with the knowledge of a considerable number of persons, during a period of nearly four months, and that too, with a reward of $6000 offered for his apprehension. Nearly three years elapse —one of the gang has been shot in self-defence by the others, and failed to arrest him—and of the remaining three who were concerned in the robbery and murder of Nelles, two have been hung and the other a lad of nineteen, a convict for life, has lived to give evidence a second time against his former accomplices. Rumors of Townsend are heard from time to time, but the matter is well nigh forgotten, when it is positively affirmed that the murderer has been arrested in Cleveland, on the information of a man who should have been able to identify him with scarcely the possibility of a mistake; a long examination takes place. The man is identified by a number of most respectable persons, and is brought to be tried within five miles of the house which had been nominally his home for ten or twelve years previous to his escape after the murder, and in the very centre of the country in which his numerous crimes were committed. Months elapse before the trial actually takes place, and in the meantime the whole surrounding country is aroused. The prisoner is visited in his cell by almost all those who like to see and who are not anxious to satisfy themselves whether that notorious villain is really again among them. Opinions are divided—many of the oldest and most respectable inhabitants of the County declare positively that he is the man —others again are equally positive that he is not. The Solicitor General himself takes charge of the procedure, and aided by the relatives of the murdered Nelles, as well as by those who, if a conviction is found, would be entitled to the Government reward, he brings down a mass of evidence, positive and circumstantial, which it seems impossible to rebut. The fact of the murder is easily established. It is not even denied by the counsel for the defence that Townsend was the guilty man. The only question is, Is the prisoner Townsend? Twenty-six witnesses of all classes—from some of the oldest and most respectable men in the County, upon whose integrity no shadow of suspicion could be thrown, to convicts and prostitutes who had been the associates of Townsend—swear distinctly that the prisoner is him, and they also identify certain marks on his person; and in support of this there is the story of the stolen boat, related by Higgins and Sherwood, as well as other circumstances which prove beyond a doubt that the prisoner is at least no stranger to the County of Haldimand.—So much for the prosecution, which was conducted with ability and care, and with the utmost fairness. The proof seems complete, and the most searching cross-examination by one of the ablest lawyers upon the Western Circuit, has not shaken the evidence of a single witness.

Now for the defence. During the interval that elapsed between the arrest of the prisoner and his trial, a large party, including the family and connections of Townsend had constantly declared their conviction that the prisoner was not him—they backed up their opinion by wagers, and over thirty of them were called into the witness-box for the defence, when they swore positively that not only was the prisoner not Townsend, but that he was not even like him. Townsend, they said, had black, straight hair, small black eyes, a low forehead, and heavy eyebrows. The prisoner's hair, on the contrary, they pointed out, though very dark, has a slight curl, his eyes are blue and tolerably prominent, his eyebrows are not remarkable, and his forehead is high. They also most of them swear that they are not aware that Townsend had any such marks as those visible on the prisoner. The mother and sisters of Townsend were examined, and they gave their evidence with a degree of coolness scarcely credible if the prisoner before them was the son and brother, absent from them for years, and with the absolute certainty that if his identity was proved, a horrible and degrading death awaited him. The writer watched their countenances closely while they gave their evidence. The mother calmly looked the prisoner in the face, while she swore that he was not her son; no muscle moved, no glance of recognition, of pity, or affection escaped her eye. The sisters were almost equally unmoved. Though bold enough in appearance, they doubtless felt more or less the peculiar position in which they stood, and knew the suspicion with which in any case their testimony would be received; but there was nothing in their appearance to show that the prisoner was any thing but a stranger to them.

In the face of such evidence as this, a conviction could scarcely be expected. The jury being unable to agree, were discharged —seven being for acquittal and five for conviction. The result having been declared, the prisoner was at once arrested upon a warrant which was waiting for him from the county of Welland, where he will be tried for the murder of the constable Ritchie under any name that he chooses to be called by.

HORRIBLE MURDER.

On Saturday last, one of the most cold-blooded murders that we have ever heard of, was committed by a negro, named Young, at Windsor. Young had lately arrived from Paw Paw, in the State of Michigan, with his wife; and it would appear, that they were last seen together upon the steamer Argo, crossing the river, on the Saturday afternoon.

On the Sunday morning, a colored man, who was out shooting, discovered the body of a woman lying near a fence, at a short distance back of Windsor, with a wound produced by a slug or ball, which entered the posterior portion of the head on the right side, and proceeded forward, lodging just below the cheek bone. He summoned a Mr. Moore, who was residing near the place, and upon examining the body, recognised it as that of Mrs. Young, whom she had known for some time previous. Young was discovered standing a short distance from the corpse, and upon being asked whether he knew the deceased, answered that she was his wife, but would make no further explanations. He said that his nose had bled during the night, which accounted for some blood on his boots.

Mr. Bartlett, coroner, as soon as advised of the murder, held an inquest upon the body, and a verdict was rendered, that she woman Mrs. Young came to her death from a shot wound on the right side of the head, and that said wound was wilfully and maliciously caused by her husband.

Young was arrested, and is now in the Sandwich Gaol.

A person from Paw Paw, who knows both parties, was sent for, and recognized deceased as the wife of Young.

COUNTY FAIR.

We beg to remind our readers that the County Fair will be held this year at Windsor, on Wednesday and Thursday, the 7th and 8th of October, when we hope to see a large turn out of Farmers and Stock.

A queer case is now before the New York Surrogate. Mr. McLoskey, a gentleman worth some $150,000, dying in Paris, left $6,000 to a niece in Dubuque, Iowa. The niece or legatee died on the same day as the testator. If the hour of her death preceded his, the legacy lapsed; if it succeeded his, the legacy is vested in her. The time of their decease was so nearly identical that it is supposed it will have to be determined by the difference between solar and true time, the legacy depending upon a question of longitude.

MURDER.—A horrible Murder, without the least mitigating circumstance connected therewith, took place in the village of Lancaster, on Tuesday night last. The unfortunate victim is a man named McLeod, who had his brains laid open with an axe, or some other sharp instrument. McLeod's wife and Dr. Beadle, the supposed guilty parties are in close confinement, awaiting their trial. We shall refrain from further remark on this dreadful subject till we hear more about the circumstances.—Cornwall Constitutional.

Two hundred of the passengers of the "Elizabeth Ann Bright," which arrived at Quebec a few days ago, preferred charges against John Clive, the Captain, for stinting them in the supply of provisions and water during the voyage. The charges were clearly proved, and the Magistrate only fined the offender in the mitigated penalty of £5, which, under the circumstances, amounted to no punishment at all.

FUEL ON THE RAILROAD.—It is stated that the amount of wood required daily on the New York Central Railroad is 1,000 cords, at a cost of $4 50 per cord when prepared for use. The annual outlay, therefore, for wood, is nearly a million and a-half of dollars! At Savannah, Wayne County, Mr. Lewis Bond, an American, has a sawing machine is in operation which cuts 100 cords of wood per day—sawing in two twice—and can be driven so as to cut double that amount.

Twenty dollar forged bills of the Commercial Bank are in circulation; they have been altered from fours. This counterfeit can scarcely be detected except by comparing the vignette and figures on the four, and twenty dollar bills. On the former the vignette is a railway train, and the figures two female portraits; while the vignette on the twenty dollar bill should be a single female figure between 2 and 0, and the portraits of the Queen and Prince Albert at the sides.

THE WHEAT AND CORN CROPS IN SOUTHERN WISCONSIN.—One of our associates has just returned from a trip into Southern Wisconsin, where he met a large number of the farmers and agriculturists of Jefferson, Walworth, Rock and Waukesha counties. The wheat crop has proved the best ever known in the State. He could only hear of two instances where the winter wheat was not fully as prolific as in any previous year. The corn crop is coming on finely. The ears are well filled out, that is not required to give a heavy yield is eight or ten days of warm weather.—Chicago Tribune.

A PLAN TO KEEP THE NORTH RIVER CLEAR OF ICE.—Capt. A Schultz, of New York, proposes to keep the North River navigable during the winter, that is to say, he proposes to give a heavy yield is eight or ten days of warm weather.—Chicago Tribune.

The London Times contains extended remarks in regard to the financial crisis in New York. It deprecates the spirit as exhibited by capitalists in the management of affairs, and speaks in the strongest terms in condemnation of the speculation on the American side of the Atlantic. Unlike those of any other country the majority of the leading speculators in New York are devoted to the task of deprecating national credit.

The London Advertiser says a well known Attorney has left England with debts to the amount of £150,000, including forgeries on a gigantic scale. Other journals say the figure is exaggerated and that the Attorney's name is Dean.

The Indian relief fund of London exceeds £20,000. Similar movements were taking place throughout Europe and Africa had been successfully united by a submarine cable of 145 miles long. It was submerged near New York two miles for a part of the distance.

Gen. Havelock and Neil were advancing upon Lucknow.

It was reported that Nena Saheb had committed suicide.

Three regiments Bengal Native Infantry revolted and fled to Reove river, pursued by Gen. Floyd.

Eight hundred mutineers killed. Mutineers also routed at Jinbalport. Other plans of mutineers' plots discovered at Benares and other places.

Gen. Havelock, after re-occupying Cawnpore, burned Behoor.

Sir Colin Campbell assumed command.

Details are given of further horrible atrocities by the Lefays.

Gen. Havelock, while marching upon Cawnpoort, defeated one hundred and twenty six miles in four days, fought four desperate battles against Nena Sahib, completely routing him. Nena Sahib's atrocities at Cawnpore beggar description. 400 persons, including seventy women and 120 children were massacred in cold blood in a courtyard fronting Sahib's headquarters.

Sahib escaped, but subsequently drowned himself, together with his family.

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature.

The laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of share - - -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years	96.
Total - - - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.

And for three years - - - 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each share.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eologized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion

An Invocation.

From the New York Albion.

Up, Saxon, 'tis thy crowning hour!
Land of the brave and free,
Though fast and thick the darkness lower,
It may not rest on thee!

The flashing of thy glittering steel
Shall pierce the traitorous gloom;
And now proclaim, loud and leal,
Wake with the cannon's boom.

Rise in thy might of centuries past;
Count not the Pagan horde!
The victory still is sure and fast,
To such as trust the Lord.

My native land! beats here a heart
Less than a host in might?
There's fame to win, there's life to part,
Still in the hottest fight.

Up, Saxon, 'tis thy crowning hour!
Fast by thy Colours stand!
Charge, with those words of magic power—
God, Queen, and native Land!

Mirth and Wit.

SUPERSTITION.—A worthy friend of ours, but who is imbued with very strong prejudices against the Irish, says that the failure of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable may be entirely attributed to the fact of its having started from Ireland. He alludes to the well-known habit of improvidence among the Irish, and asks the Directors, how, with the systems of "paying out" that is generally pursued in Ireland, they ever could expect to make both ends meet?—Punch.

ECONOMY IN FEMALE DRESS.—A miserable, stingy wretch of a husband complaining of the expense now rendered necessary by ladies' extensive dress, was very properly reminded by his injured wife that Crinoline is a set off.—Ibid.

PRUDENT GIRL.—"Margery, what did you do with that tallow Mr Jones greased his boots with this morning?"—"Please marm' I greased the griddle cakes with it." "Lucky you did, Miss; I thought you had wasted it."

A PARADOX.—Why is a barrister like a man who passes sleepless nights? Because he first lies on one side and then on the other, and is wide awake the whole time.

An imaginative Irishman gave utterance to this lamentation: "I returned to the halls of my fathers by night, and I found them in ruins! I cried aloud, 'My fathers where are they?' and echo responded, 'Is that you Pat McCarthy?'"

A country girl, writing to her friends, says, of a polka, "that the dancing does not amount to much, but the huggin' is heavenly."

A lady said: "When I go to the theatre I am very careless of my dress, as the audience are too attentive to the play to observe my wardrobe; but when I go to church I am very particular in my outward appearance, as most people go there to see how their neighbors dress and deport themselves." A pretty home thrust—wonder how many that cap fits?

NUTMEGS IN PLASTER OF PARIS.—When the French Ambassador had seen in Westminister Hall the designs for the Wellington Monument, he had rushed over to the Electric Telegraph Office, and in breathless haste, forwarded to Louis Napoleon the following lacone dispatch:—"Waterloo is avenged!!"—Ibid.

IRISH HOSPITALITY.—"Will ye dine with me to-morrow, Darby?"

"Faith an I will, with all my heart."

"Remember it is only a family dinner I'm asking ye to."

"Och! a family dinner is a mighty pleasant thing. What have ye got?"

"Jist an illegant piece of corned bafe an' pratties.

"By the powers! that bates the world! Jist me own dinner to a hair—barin the bafe!"

A countryman, while walking along the streets of New York, found his progress stopped by a close barricade of wood.

"What is this for?" said he to a person passing.

"O, that's to stop the yellow fever."

"Aye! I have often heard of the Board of Health, but I never saw it before."

An English paper winds up an elegant article on the evils of war by declaring that "England has never lost so many men by disease as by battles!" The compositor who changed the a of battles to the o of bottles did not thereby much diminish the truthfulness of the declaration.

A HARD HEAD.—A negro passing under a scaffolding where some repairs were going on, a brick fell from above on his head, and was broken in two by the fall; Sambo very coolly raised his head and exclaimed, "Hallo! you white man up dar, if you dont want your bricks broke just keep 'em off my head!

A young man in New York last week advertised for a wife. In less than two hours, we are told, eighteen married men sent in word that he might have theirs. Connubial bliss in that city must be at a discount, we think.

A CURIOUS COLLECTION.—In the museum at Hifalurin, is a flea skin containing seven miser's souls, seven rich men's consciences, the "principles" of seven leading politicians, seventeen old bachelor's hearts, the fortune of twenty three editors and all the remaining sweetness of seventy old maids.

Dr. Johnston in reply to a lady who asked him if he was fond of music said—"No; but of all noises, I consider it the least disagreeable."

PAUL PRY observed on the door of a house the name of two physicians, and remarked it put him in mind of a double barrelled gun, for if one missed; the other was sure to kill.

DOMESTIC POLITICS.—"Allow me," said Arthur, looking pleadingly at Angelica, the other morning at breakfast; "allow me to send you a little duck. Unless," he timidly added in a half whisper, "that is like sending coals to Newcastle?" The little sending coals to Newcastle?" The little duck answered that he was a great goose, but did not altogether look as if she thought so.

COLONIAL GOVERNORS AND BISHOPS.—A list of all the Governors and Lieutenant-Governors of our colonies, with their salaries and the date of their appointments, has just been published by order of the Commons House, on the motion of Mr. Clay, M. P. The highest salary is that of the Governor of Victoria, which is £10,000 a year, while the Governors of Canada, Ceylon, and New South Wales receive £7,000 a year each. There is also a list of colonial bishops salaried by the State; these receive stipends varying from £400 to £2,500. The Bishop of Barbadoes, Dr. Perry, receives £2,500 while the Bishop of Quebec and Toronto only receive £1,900 and £1,250 respectively.

TELEGRAPHIC.—From a telegraph map recently published in New York, it appears that there are about 80 Telegraphic Companies in the United States and British Provinces. The stations are over 1,680 in number, of which the free States have 1,062, British Provinces 218, and slave States 200. New England has 217, New York 170, Ohio 132, Pennsylvania 123, Illinois 100, Massachusetts 89, Vermont 40, Virginia 26, New Hampshire 24, Connecticut and Kentucky each 22, Newfoundland 12, Louisiana 10, South Carolina 4, &c.

The New York Tribune learns from Washington that filibustering is raising its head again in several parts of the Union. Three expeditions are said to be fitting out, one of them at New York, for the purpose of invading Nicaragua, and mending the fortunes of General William Walker. There is also an official report that Don Juan Rosa is on his land expedition for the conquest of a part of Mexico. The Administration will, according to the dispatch, enjoin the United States officials to strictly enforce the neutrality laws.

The New York Albion most deeply regrets to learn that Stephen Henry Sullivan, Esq., H.B.M. Charge d'Affaires and Consul General to Peru, was murdered in his own house at Lima, on or about the 16th of August, by a band of Peruvian bravoes. The particulars of this audacious crime have not yet come to hand; but it is surmised that Mr. Sullivan's negociation of a Treaty affecting the Chinchin Islands, had upon it the interests of certain dastardly speculators, who took this method of ridding themselves of his presence. The unfortunate gentleman was mortally wounded by a pistol shot. He was a nephew of Lord Palmerston, and had held his appointment for more than four years, having previously filled a similar one in Chili.

A FEROCIOUS RAT.—On Friday night Mrs. M'Kall, wife of Michael M'Kall, labourer, residing in a house at Maryhill, was in bed with her husband and child of two years of age, when she was awoke, about one o'clock, by her hand to her forehead it came in contact with a rat, which was fixed on her temple. Springing out of bed she observed one of her forefingers cut in two places, and on lifting her infant child the blood was streaming from its head in several places, which showed marks as if produced by the teeth of rats. One of its fingers was severely cut. The husband lied to sit up and watch his family for the rest of the night, to save them from any further attack from these ferocious vermin.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.—A spurious five dollar bill on the Niagara District Bank has been issued, which is evidently well calculated to deceive. It is an alteration from a genuine one, the necessary changes have been effected by the aid of acid and lithography, instead of the less artistic and more easily detected system of cutting and pasting. The only safe means of detecting this counterfeit is to observe that the plate is a fac simile of the genuine one dollar plates, having the figure of 5 at each end on the upper corners, whereas the genuine five dollar plates of this bank (we believe there are two differing altogether in their arrangement and design from the $1,00 plate.—Tribune.

THE INDIAN EMPIRE.—A Parliamentary return just published, on the motion of Col. Sykes, M. P., gives the following statistical details of the British Empire in East India:

It would appear that the gross annual area of all the Governments of India is 1,446,576 square miles—the British States occupying 837,412, the native State 957,910, and French and Portuguese possessions, 1,254, and that the gross total population is 180,-864,297 souls, viz: 154,990,991 in the British States, 48,876,247 in the native, and 517,149 in the foreign possessions of France and Portugal. The British States under the Governor General of India in Council cover an area of 246,050 square miles, and are peopled by 23,255,972 souls; the States under the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal occupy 224,993 square miles, and are peopled by 40,852,397 souls; the States under the Lieut-Governor of North West Provinces, the seat of the rebellion, occupy 105,759 miles, and are peopled by 33,955,193 souls; the States under the Madras Government occupy 132,090 miles and are peopled by 22,437,297 souls; and the States under the Bombay Government occupy 181,544 square miles, and are peopled by 11,710,-042 souls. The native States in the Bengal Presidency occupy 315,000 square miles, and are peopled by 38,7C2,206 souls; those in the Madras Presidency occupy 51,801 miles, and are peopled by 5,213,671 souls; and those in the Bombay Presidency occupy a space of 60,575 square miles, and are peopled by 6,440,370 souls. The French territory in India covers an area of 188 square miles, and is peopled by 203,887 souls; while the Portuguese territory occupies an area of 1,066 square miles, and is peopled by 313,202 souls.

A FACETIOUS OLD GENTLEMAN.—There is an old fellow named Ralph Fornham down in New Hampshire, who is one hundred and seventy years old. A strong effort was made to induce him to be present at the recent Bunker Hill celebration in Boston, he having taken a great part in the battle. He declined going on account, of the distance, and when his son, a lad of sixty or seventy years, proposed to accompany him, replied, "If he went he didn't want to be bothered with the care of children!" He says he doesn't remember of ever being sick, but "believes he had a fever or something, eighty or ninety years ago."

Agriculture and Science.

Plow the Field and Spade the Garden this Fall.

Every subsequent year's experience and observation, says the Editor of the American Agriculturist, has strengthened our conviction of the utility of this rule. Aside from the theoretical considerations we have known a great number of actual trials by different individuals, all, or nearly all of whom speak decidedly in favour of breaking up the ground, as deeply and thoroughly as may be, before it is closed by frost. Here is one to the point:

A reader of this paper, a farmer in Northern Ohio, who was 'set again' this fall plowing, called upon us in October 1858, and we had quite a discussion over this subject, the result of which was a 'compromise'—he agreeing to turn one half of a field after our plan, and the other half in the old way.

The soil was somewhat heavy, a clay loam, designed for a crop of spring wheat. The third week in November, a double team was put before a large plow, and the ground backfurrowed into narrow lands, only four furrows turned together. The intervening dead furrows were made as deep as the plow could be put in, and left open at the lower side of the field for the escape of the water. Three acres were thus treated, and three left untouched until spring.

On the 17th of May last, Mr. L. wrote us that the ground had pulled last fall very mellow, and so free from water that he actually harrowed it down nearly level, and sowed it to wheat, before the rest of the field was dry enough to commence ploughing.

A letter just received from him says: "I gave it up. I shall plow all my land for spring crops this fall. The spring wheat on the plowed portion started much earlier, grew better, and yielded almost one-third more. Stir up the farmers to plow all the land they can this fall; you can't do them a better service.

The experience of Mr. L's experience in one trial. His is a marked case. The snow continued on the ground quite late last spring, and every day gained, by having the ground previously plowed and drained, was important. Again, his soil is a heavy one, almost, and in some places quite a clay, and therefore most likely to be benefited by thorough freezing. It is not best to jump at general conclusions from a single experiment. But we have numerous other examples, enough perhaps, to establish a general rule in favor of fall plowing all heavy soils.

Last year we described the practice of a successful gardener of our acquaintance, who shades up nearly an acre every Autumn, throwing it into very high ridges.

We saw the same garden the past summer, and it continued to give evidence of the beneficial effects of such a course. The ridges freeze through and in thawing crumble down, while the frost penetrates down below the bottom of the furrows, and the whole soil is pulverised and improved, and enriched by the ammonia collected from snows, and rains, and the air during winter.

There are several advantages derived from fall plowing, part of which have been hinted above.

The teams are generally in better condition for work in the fall, than after passing through a long winter.

There is generally more time for plowing in fall than in the spring, when getting in the spring crops, carting manure, &c., all crowd together.

Ground plowed in ridges, with deep open furrows between, dries out sooner, and on wet ground several days may be gained, which is often enough to turn the scale in favor of a good wheat or oat crop. This was the case with Mr. L., described above.

The action of frost is very important in destroying and pulverizing the mineral elements of the soil. Nothing does so that fine impalpable state necessary to giving a good medium for the growth of roots.

Much poisonous matter in the soil is destroyed, since the frost and air penetrates a double depth where deep open furrows are left.

The organic or vegetable matter, such as roots of plants, are decomposed more rapidly when subjected to freezing and thawing, as in the case when the ridges soil is more thoroughly exposed to frost.

The roots of dock and other noxious weeds are more thoroughly exposed to frost, and insects that burrow deeply in the soil are killed by exposure to frost.

These considerations are enough, we think, to recommend plowing all heavy soils in autumn, where it can be done without serious neglect in the saving and thrashing. Light, dry, sandy soils, do not so strongly call for such fall treatment, though we think any soil will be benefited.

In the case of garden soils, or those submitted to a high degree of cultivation, we recommend in all cases to subject them to a thorough ridging and spading before they are frozen hard, such as to preclude the operation, and if it be neglected then let it be attended to during winter, if the ground chances to be thawed out at any time.

MUSHROOMS AND SALT.—An intelligent farmer of the parish of Forthampton, Glout cestershire, determined to give a heavy dressing of salt to a field of small wheat had been frequently flooded by a small brook that flows into the London market. His reason, he informed me, was "to take the scurness out of the grass." The field was dressed in the spring-time, and the following autumn a most astonishing crop of mushrooms sprung up. One person alone sold upwards of £20 worth, principally for pickling, and immense baskets full were gathered by many of the poorer neighbours who were fortunate enough to hear of this fungal development. I took some trouble to examine into their history, and cannot account for the circumstance in any other way than by the theory of a universal vitality of the thallus, which was developed by the salt. The field is an alluvial deposit, surrounded by many others of precisely the same soil, and also subject to floods, but which undressed with salt yielded no mushrooms.—Stones of the Valley.

VIRGINIA EGG BREAD.—Dissolve one tablespoonful of butter in three and a half pints of milk and one quart of Indian meal, half a pint of wheat flour, a little salt and two eggs well beaten; mix all well together, and bake in a buttered tin.

What grows less tired the more it works? A carriage wheel.

GREEN'S

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Belford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighboring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his first commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

Farmers

Call at the Great Western Boot store, where you will find every article in the Boot and Shoe trade to suit you.

Kisses.

Sitting to-night in my chamber,
A bachelor, frigid and lonely,
I kiss the end of my pipe stem—
That, and that only.

Reveries rise with the smoke wreaths:
Memories tender surround me:
Girls that are married—or buried.
Gather around me.

School girls in pantalets romping;
Girls that have grown to be misses:
Girls that liked to be kissed, and
Like to give kisses.

Kisses—well I remember them!
Those in the corner were fleetest:
Sweet were those "on the sly:" in the Dark were the sweetest.

Anna was tender and gentle:
To woo was almost to win her;
Her lips were as good as ripe peaches
And milk for dinner.

Nell was a flirt, and coquetish: [Sir!
"Twas—catch me and kiss me, if you can,
Could I catch both—but I wasn't, I
A happy man, Sir!

Anna has gone on a mission
Off to the South Sea sinners;
Nell is a widow, keeps boarders, and
Cooks her own dinners.

Charlotte, and Susan, and Hattie,
Mary, Jane, Lucy, and Maggie;
Four are married and plump, two Maiden and scraggy,

Barrie is dead? Bloom sweetly,
Ye mignonettes over the rest!
Her I loved dearly and truly,
Last and the best.

Thus I sat smoking and thinking,
A Bachelor fricid and lonely,
I kiss the end of my pipe stem—
That, and that only!

A Thrilling Tale.

BY SIR WALTER SCOTT.

It happened several years ago, that I was traversing the Highlands, alone with a much beloved, but now departed friend: one of the true men of the old school; one who was rich in classical and legendary lore, but still sterling and moral virtues. For it has been my lot to possess friends and companions from whom I was ever gaining, till my store has become somewhat bulky. Alas! there are so many deserters from the corps by this time, who shall no more return, that I wish to cherish the persussion, that to be gone and be with them, will be far better. My friend and I were among the thickly strewn mountains and rugged rocks of the wildest branch of the Highlands, where there is a remarkable natural ravine which we visited and explored. It is, rather than a ravine, a fearful pit or dungeon, descending deep among the yawning rocks. It is as if a volcano had boiled there, but in course of time spouted out all its lava, forming strange adjacent peaks all around; thus leaving the furnace dry and empty. It has a terrific throat, wide open, on the very edge of which one may stand and look down to the very bottom.

The get a mode of descent into its depths which visitors may comman!. This is by means of rope and windlass as it were into a coal-pit, which are fixed and worked from a prominent brow of the highest frowning peak. To the main rope a machine is attached, called a cradle, by four shorter ropes, that tie to its distinct corners. He that descends takes his stand or seat in the cradle, with the stretch of the four diverging cords that meet at his head.

A rough old Highlander presided at the windlass, who appointed my friend first to go down. Ere the cradle came up for me again, a presentiment of some horrid accident about to happen to one of us began to take hold of my nature, and I could not resist inquiring if all was right with my friend below. "Hoo, surely," was the answer. "And the cradle will be for you in a minute; ye are as heavy as twa o' him." "Is the rope frail?" No very rotten arva; the last one was rottener af re it brak, an' last a man fa,' was the alarming reply!—"Was he killed say you?" "Killed! though he had a hundred lives, he wad been killed; he was smashed to pieces, down on yonder jagged rock," quoth the hard-hearted Celt. I now examined the rope, and it appeared much worn out and to be old:—"How old is it?" inquired I. "Just five years auld." "But only a month sudder afore it brak," was his next peice of tantalizing information. With some irritation of manner I put it to him why a new one had not been provided before any risk could attend a descent, and to make things look worse, he provokingly announced, "We are to get a new ane the morn; ye'll likely be last to try the auld."

But already the cradle waited for me to step into it. I could not disappoint my companion by not going as he did; and ashamed to seem so heedless before the hardy Highlander, at once took my seat. It was perhaps to encourage me, that he said as he let me off, "A far heavier man than you gaed down yesterday." "Then he strained the rope," cried I; but it was too late to return, and after all I got safe down. The sun shone brightly, and made every intricacy, even the deep crator, clear and open to the eye. The floor might allow a hundred and fifty people to stand on at once, and consists of fine sand that sparkles with pebbles, which have dropped from the surrounding and impending rocks. The face of these rocks is also gemmed by thousands of the same sort, that glitterel beautifully in the sunbeams all which has naturally suggested the idea of a work of enchantment, for it is called the Fairy's Palace. But I confess, though a palace, it had few attractions for me, for besides the disheartenings the Highlander filled me with, ere my descent, my friend now that I was down, though without any mischevious intent crowned my fears, by giving with a startling effect, the following narrative: "A young man once ascended from this, but when he came to the top, he incautiously stood bolt upright in the cradle, and then in a moment ere it was landed, being impatient to get out of it, he made an acventurous leap, for the breast of the rock. But the cradle being still pendent in the air, without a stay, flew back on the impulse of his spring, and fearful to think, let him fall between it and the landing place." Horrible! most horrible!" was my natural exclamation. "But," continued my friend, keep your seat on the cradle till it be firmly landed on the rock, and all will be safe." He ascended, and I prepared to follow.

I thought of the young man's leap and fall; I figured to myself the spot where he alighted and the rebound he made when he met the ground never more to rise. And as I took my seat, my limbs smote one another, and my teeth chattered with terror. When I descended I kept my eyes bent downwards, and was encouraged the nearer I got to the bottom. But on my ascent I looked all the while upwards, I was trembling alive to the fact, that I was getting into higher danger I held the spread cords as with the grip of death, never moving my eyes from the blackened creaking main rope "There I drew it easy!" I gasped the words for did I not first see one ply of the triple-twisted line snap asunder as it happened to touch a pointed piece of granite! And when out out and liberated, did the ply not untwist and curl away from its coils? Did I not see another ply immediately follow in the same manner, leaving my life to the last brittle thread, which also began to grow attenuated, and to draw so fine, that it could not long have borne its weight! I was speechless: the world whirled round and round, I became sightless, and when within one short foot of the Fairy's Palace, I fell into the grasp of my friend, who seeing me to tumble out of the cradle from stupor, opportunely snatched and swung me cradle and all upon the rock. When strength returned I ran from the edge of the precipice, in the utmost trepidation, shaking my fearfully and in giving unintelligible utterance to the agony of my awe struck soul. And if my hair did not undergo a change of colour, I was not without such an apprehension, for certainly it stood on end during my ascent from the floor of the Fairy's Palace.

The First Time 'Jeems' ever went Home with a Girl.

"Oh, what a ridiculous caption to appear in a newspaper," we imagine we hear some of our readers exclaim. Well, we acknowledge the fact, but a few days ago we passed over the identical road where the following adventure took place, and the recollection of the scene has so completely possessed us with the spirit of fun that we feel impelled to chronicle it for the amusement of the public, and for the edification of Moses, Thomas and Parley.

We were between sixteen and seventeen years of age when the event about to be related transpired, and as a description of our personal appearance at that time is also lately essential to the point of our story, we will give it as consisely as the subject will allow. In reference, then, to that person, to say that we were green in the usual acceptation of that term, would give the reader but a poor idea of the figure we displayed. Rather imagine a tall, lean, cadaverous swarthy looking chap, with legs like a pair of tongs, a countenance about as expressive as a plate of Dutch cheese, a mouth, that came very near making an island of the head above it, a face covered with a furze that looked very much like down on a new laid hatched gostin, with a gait that would lead the beholder to conclude that we designed to travel down both sides of the street at the same time, and you have a correct daguerreotype of "Jeems" in the seventeenth year of his age.

One dark gloomy night in the month of December, we chanced to be at a "spelling school" not a thousand miles from Baldwinsville, where our eyes first fell on a "fairy form," that immediately set our susceptible heart on a blaze. She was sixteen or thereabout, with bright eyes, red cheeks and cherry lips, while the auburn ringlets clustered in a wreath of profusion around her beautiful head, and her person to our ravished imagination, was more perfect in form and outline, than the most faultless statue ever chiseled by the sculptor's art. As we gazed our feelings, which never before had aspired girl-ward, were fully aroused, and we determined to go home with her that night, or perish in the attempt. As soon, therefore, as school was dismissed, and our lady love had safely boarded and looked, we summoned to offer our services as contemplated, and we then learned an important lesson, viz: the difference between resolving and doing. As we neared her, we were seized with a partial blindness—red, green, blue, and yellow lights flashed upon our visages, and appeared and disappeared like witches in a phantasmagoria—our knees smote together like Belshazzar's when he discovered the hand-writing on the wall, while our heart thumped with apparently as much force as if it were driving ten penny nails into our ribs. We, in the meantime, managed to mumble over something which is perhaps known to the Recording angel, but certainly is not to us, at the same time poking out our elbow as nearly at right angles with our body as our physical conformation would permit.

The night air blew keenly, which served in some sort to revive us, and as our senses returned, what were our emotions on finding the cherished object of our first-love clinging to our arm with all the tenacity a drowning man is said to clutch at a straw! Talk of elysian sliding down greased rainbows, or feeding on German flutes, what are sich "phelinks," in comparison to those mighty ones that swelled our bosom nigh unto the bursting off our waistcoat buttons! Our happiness was sublime sublimity, sublimely sublimited, and every person who has ever felt the divine throbbings of a newly fledged love principle, fully understands the world of bliss concluded in the fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh words at the commencement of this sentence.

Well, we passed on pleasantly towards our Sally's home, talking of "love and dove and dart and part," until so courageous had we become, that we actually proposed "to go and sit awhile," to which our Dulcinea very graciously assented. Alas, for us! how soon were we to be reminded that "the course of true love never did run smooth."

Sally had a brother of some ten summers, who accompanied us along the way, and who was in wonderful high spirits at the time, or his sister's having a beau, and he would walk around us frequently, and giggling in the height of his glee, and eyeing us as closely as if ourself and Sally were the world renowned Siamese twins, and he was taking his first look. Bill, by the way, was a stubbed, chuckle headed boy, whose baldiments would have made the fortune of any two dealers in mop rags.

At length we reached the bars, and while we were letting them down, Bill shot past us, and tore for the house, as if pursued by a thousand Bulls of Bashan. He flung open the door with a bang, and exclaimed at the top of his voice.

"Mother! Mother! Jim Clark is coming hum with Sall!"

"Is he?" screamed the old woman in reply, "I declare, I didn't think the sap-head knew enough!"

Reader, we didn't go in.

The Inventor of Railways.

'The New Journal of Useful Knowledge' has just revealed to us a fatal destiny, namely, that of Thomas Gray, who, notwithstanding the urgent remonstrances of his wife, ruined himself in order to introduce his recently invented railroad system. Alas, how many men of genius have met the same fate! It was in the year 1818 that Gray imparted to Mr. Thomas Wilson and to Monsieur Ysabeau, the result of his mental labors.—'Behold,' said he, handing them a bundle of papers and plans, 'this is the dawn of mundane civilization; distance shall no longer be remoteness; nations will visit one another, without danger and fatigue, from one end of the continent to the other. Companies will be formed, capital find employment; my system will invade every country, and be defended by its rulers and by the people; my discovery can only be compared to the application of type for printing!'

The manuscript, which was handed by Gray to Messrs. Wilson and Ysabeau, being printed, the inventor forwarded a copy to the British Secretary of State, accompanied by a letter. The Minister, occupied with State affairs, took no heed of the pamphlet or its contents. May be he never had any knowledge whatever of the substance of the letter.

A few years after the publication of Gray's pamphlet, Great Britain found herself intersected with railroads; America followed in her wake, and Europe soon imitated the example set by these two great nations. Of Thomas Gray, whose discovery had revolutionized the world, no one ever heard; but alas, he was ignored.

Towards the year 1840, Mr. Wilson (who had resided at Brussels and the Hague for upwards of thirty years, deeply engaged in vast enterprises) returned to England, naturally enough enquired after Thomas Gray; but no one could tell his whereabouts—in short, he was unknown. Railways were paying good dividends—the new discovery was vaunted to the skies, yet the name of the inventor was buried in oblivion.

Mr. Wilson happened one day to visit Exeter. He was struck with the features of a glazier whom he passed in the street, broken down, not with age, but with disappointment care and vexation. He recognised in that unfortunate man, the inventor of the greatest discovery of the age. It was Thomas Gray, who, obliged to obtain a livelihood by the sweat of his brow, after having spent his fortune on the invention, discovered when too late that his wife had judged rightly when she begged of him not to squander his gold for the benefit of mankind, but to think a little more of himself.

The first words uttered by Gray on recognising Wilson were these:—'Do you now see that I was right! The years I consumed in meditation have not been lost to the world; all my prognostications have been realized, nay, surpassed. To you, I may speak thus; but alas, here, I never mention one syllable of my invention, lest they should set me down as a madman!'

Mr. Wilson offered aid to the great but fallen man; Thomas Gray proudly refused the proffered assistance, stating that he earned sufficient to support him; nevertheless at a later period, he consented to accept a small pension from his friend. Gray died at Exeter in 1852; and that man who had created fortunes, and augmented tenfold the wealth of the universe, departed this life in a state bordering on beggary.

Genius when alive may starve—but Genius dead must live!

Miscellany.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—The idea that cancer is incurable cannot be entertained by persons who have witnessed the effect of these remedies on this terrible disease. The ointment penetrates the substance of the cancer, and reaches its minutest ramifications in the flesh, checking its progress, and gradually restoring the parts affected to a sound condition, while the pills acting upon the blood as a powerful detergent, destroy the seeds of the malady in the circulation. The testimony on this head is abundant and conclusive.

A NEW IDEA.—Some inventive genius in New York has turned his attention to the successful production of a machine for registering the attendance of clerks and other employees. By a simple but effectual contrivance, each person on arriving or departing revolves an index to the number belonging to his name, and the machinery instantly registers the time upon a revolving cylinder inside, while a black or white signal on the indicator shows each one's [illegible]

A SURGEON IN NEW YORK.—A Mr. Henry Fellows, of Manchester, England, writes to the New York Tribune, that the Rev. Mr. Corbit, a Methodist preacher in that city, is every way the equal in eloquence and duplicate in style of Mr. Spurgeon. On Sunday last hundreds were unable to gain admission to the church, and near three thousand attentive listeners, uncomfortably packed together, gave evidence of an excitement fast increasing, relative to his wonderful powers of eloquence his fascinating style of delivery, and the astonishing effect of his words.

LOOKING OUT FOR BREAKERS.—The Washington Union says that a well known dog in that city, having heard a recent ordinance read against dogs in August immediately picked up a piece of old iron and ran into a hardware store to exchange it for a muzzle. Who wants to look up proof to the contrary of this statement?

It is stated that there are 600,000,000 of human beings who use tobacco, and that the world produces annually 1,450,000,000 pounds of this fascinating and poisonous weed. Opium eaters number about 100,000,000; Indian hemp eaters, 150,000 value of these articles consumed to say nothing of coffee and tea, is computed at $3006,000,000 per annum.

GOOD ADVICE FROM PUNCH.—Always sit next the carver, if you can at dinner. Ask no woman her age. Be civil to all rich aunts and uncles. Never joke with a policeman. Take no notes or gold with you when you go boarding but silver. Your oldest hat of course, for an evening party. Don't play at chess with a widow. Never contradict a man who stutters. Pull down the blind before you put on your wig. Make friends with the steward on board a steamer—only think if you were taken ill in the middle of the night. Never answer a crossing sweeper; pay him or pass silently on. One word and you are lost. Keep your own secrets. Tell no human being you die your whiskers. Never offend a butler—the wretch has too many chances of retaliation. Write not one letter more than you can help. That man who keeps up a large correspondence is a martyr tiad, not to the stake, but to the post. Wind up your conduct like your watch, once every day, examining minutely whether you are 'fast' or 'slow.'

A SHIP OF BENT TIMBER.—The American Ship Timber Bending Company, whose works are at Green Point, Williamsburgh, N. Y., have resolved to build a large ship, of a thousand tons, in which bent timber is to be substituted for natural sticks for frames knees, futtocks, top timber, &c., thus putting to a practical test the merits claimed by their peculiar invention. The keel is already cut out, and will be laid next week.

TEST FOR A WIFE.—When bent upon matrimony, look more than skin deep for beauty; dive farther than the pocket for worth, and search for temper beyond the good humour for the moment—remember it is not always the most agreeable partner at a ball who forms the most amiable partner for life. Virtue, like some flowers, blooms fairest in the shade.

SHAKESPEARE A MILITIAMAN.—The name of William Shakespeare occurs in a certificate of the names and arms of trained soldiers—trained militiamen we should now call them—in the hundred of Barlichway, in the county of Warwick—under the hand of Sir Fulk Greville ("friend to Sir Philip Sidney"), Sir Edward Greville and Thomas Spencer. Was our William Shakespeare a soldier? Why not? Jonson was a soldier, and had slain his man. Donne had served in the Low Countries. Why not Shakespeare in arms? At all events, here is a field for inquiry and speculation. The date is September 28, 1605, the year of the gunpowder plot; and the lists were possibly prepared through instructions issued by Cecil in consequence of secret information as to the working of the plot in Warwickshire—the proposed head quarters of the insurrection.—State Papers.

SANDWICH, OCTOBER 8, 1857.

TWELFTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF THE PROVINCIAL ASSOCIATION.

From the correspondence of the Leader and the Globe.

BRANTFORD, September 29th

The exhibition grounds are pleasantly situated, overlooking the town, which lies spread out—and very much spread it is—at your feet. There is always a disposition to make comparisons on occasions like the present. The first question that suggests itself is, how does this exhibition compare with its predecessors? And it so happens that this question is too large to admit of an answer. No comparison can be made, as a whole, although in particular classes, it is possible to say whether progress has been made or not. Some classes are deficient—in the comparative point of view—while in others, undeniable progress is observable. Whatever may be the character of this year's wheat generally, the samples to be seen here are but little inferior, if at all, to those of ordinary years. The number of competitors in this class, is unusually great, and the quantity of wheat exhibited is in excess of what has previously ever been witnessed. The better samples appear generally to come from the Western part of Upper Canada.

After all the decrying it has undergone, the potato is giving a good account of itself. Those exhibited are superior to what have been seen at any Provincial Exhibition for some years past. From the information which can be elicited from enquiries, it appears that the rot is only partial. Good Pinkeyes are selling in some parts of the Province—Sincoe for example—for 1s 104 a bushel.

The implement department gives evidence of great progress. This is particularly true of ploughs, reapers and mowers. And what is a great improvement in the mode of judging them, they are to be tested whenever that is practicable. The reaper will be tried in oats and the mower in clover.

In cattle, sheep and pigs the show is good. Durhams stand first. There are, I believe, no Herefords and but few Ayrshires. A monster yoke of cattle exhibited by Messrs. Kerkwood and Lawrey of Hamilton, excites much attention. One weighs 34 cwt., and the other 35 cwt. Working horses show to more advantage than bloods

Coming to the feathered tribe, it is but too evident that the glory of the Shanghae has departed. It has been voted a voracious monster; and the Dorkin is again coming into its superiority. The show of fowls is altogether deficient in quantity. There are a few fine Aylesbury ducks and several excellent common ducks.

In fruits and vegetables, apples are superior, grapes so so, peaches fine, melons rather indifferent, pears good (looking), and cabbages very fine.

In the cereal hall—I do not know what else to call it—is a trophy of grain in the straw, commencing with sheaves of wheat, on a table, building up with oats, rye, and ending with corn.

Mr. Hiram Raney, of Delaware, sends a monster cheese, weighing 1200 lbs.

WEDNESDAY, 6 o'clock, P. M.

Many of the articles for exhibition arrived on the ground only to day, although some of the judges have been around their department, and even reported. In a few cases it may can the judges make a second inspection of such articles. And, as is usual in such cases, they will probably be marked "too late for exhibition." The exhibitor will loss his chance of a prize, and gain whatever may accrue to him from the mere exhibition of the article. Among these late articles three were some samples of confectionary from Rochestor. The party in charge was very anxious to have the confectionary properly classed and placed in its own department. He was accordingly very argumentive with the Secretary; and, one of his arguments was that the confectionary was sent to help to make up the show! Very patronising that, from a Rochester maker of sugar plums! In connection with the progress making by the Association, it is due to notice that the number of members is daily receiving a large increase. Before leaving Toronto there were fully 800 members added. On Monday last, that is the day before the Exhibition opened, there were 407 new members enrolled. Next day the number was swelled to 97. And to-day it bids fair to exceed even that number. Before the despatch closes I will probably be able to get the numbers for the day. As each badge costs five shillings, you will see that the Association funds will receive a considerable accession from the proceeds of the sale of badges alone, with a taking into account the large sums to be received at the gate during the next three days for the admission of non-members.

In reference to the Poultry department, it may be remarked that the judges suggested that the prize list for next year should be prepared in attendance to see that the Poultry as it arrives is placed in its proper class. The coops, it was also noticed were made with such wide bars that many of the fowl escaped. If a shed (with shelves alone) were provided it would probably save a great expense in this respect. The exhibitors should also have coops of a wire-form plan.

In my previous letter I stated that the implement department was good. I may add that there is a manifest progress in many particulars.

The show of ploughs surpasses anything that has ever been seen in Canada or perhaps in any other country. One half of what is here would be considered a good muster at a European world's exhibition.—What is particularly noticeable as new, is a particular description of wheeled plough.—The plough is not new—it is the well known Howard's—but the description of wheel, with which it is provided are new in this country. It is the same kind of plough that carried off the prize against all the world at Treptow. There is no doubt a great deal of useless polishing and burnishing on the mounting of many of the ploughs; the makers of some of them have apparently forgotten that this implement is intended for the field and not for the drawing room. A moderate amount of burnishing is well to be excused, especially when it is not accompanied by any violation of taste. Still it is impossible to conceal that the polishing and burnishing of the overlaid mounting of the wooden plough tells of a great deal of lost labor.

The implements can of course only be known by being tested; and for this reason it is highly desirable that they should, whenever practicable, be put to the use for which they are designed. This rule is to be followed in regard to many of the implements, including reapers and ploughs. Reapers are the great mowers; each claiming something some advantage over its rivals. And there is no doubt that a great improvement has been made in reapers within the last two years. The instrument cannot yet be pronounced perfect; but it has become workable. I feel that reaping machines are coming into very general use in different parts of the country. I tried to ascertain how many had been made during the last year by the different makers exhibiting; but owing to the absence of persons to give information, in some cases, this was not possible. Patterson of Belleville reports that he made over 200 last year; Patterson of Richmond Hill, 309; Masy of Newcastle 40; Watson of Dumfries, 34: besides eight combined reapers and mowers; Mr. Wolsoncroft, of what place I forget, 35. Thus we can at once see where over 600 have been made; and there are still left several other manufactories of which we have no account. It would therefore, seem to be a fair estimate, that not less than 1,000 reaping and mowing machines have been made in Upper Canada during the past year. The advances of detail—the little alterations or improvements—attest the amount of ingenuity that has been at work upon them. All the makers of the different reapers profess to have some successful contrivance for getting rid of the side draft, common to all. The machine's not drawing directly behind the horses, except one or two who boldly deny that there is any side draft at all in their machines.

There are, in addition to the reaping and mowing machines which I spoke of yesterday, some implements and machinery of superior character. Messrs. Ganson, Waterous & Co., of Brantford, have erected a small steam circular saw mill of very simple construction and neat workmanship. The chief advantage of this mill is that it costs but little, and can be removed from place to place at a cost of not more than fifty pounds. In an extensive pinery a mill of this description is very useful, as it is much easier to move it to the pine, when the supply near it is exhausted, than to bring the pine to it. The same manufacturers have a thresher and separator, the horse power of which is all made of iron, and instead of the usual large driving wheel, there is a smaller one with three spur wheels inside upon a spindle in the centre, by which there is an equal strain from all parts of the machine, instead of the whole being thrown upon one small pinion. Haggart & Brothers, of Brampton, have a thrashing machine, driven altogether by iron gearing instead of the belts usually employed.—There is another machine by C. McDonald, of Ancaster, with an improved horse power calculated for ten horses. C. R. Wilkes, of Brantford, have also two threshing machines There are two agricultural engines upon the ground, of a very neat construction—one made by F. G. Beckett & Co., of Hamilton, and the other by C. R. Wilkes, of Brantford They are both portable, of about six horse power, and admirably adapted for agricultural purposes.

Among the minor implements there are a large number of cultivators of various kinds, fanning mills, straw cutters, cheese presses, churns, &c. Of the ploughs I have already spoken. There are also some light iron seed harrows neatly made.

Yesterday, after all the animals had arrived and were properly displayed, the show was very fine, and is generally considered to be on the whole highly satisfactory—most of the animals entered were placed upon the ground. The show of horses was considered to be good, especially in the heavy draft and agricultural classes. Among the former I noticed a horse recently imported from Yorkshire, called Great Britain. He was a fine animal and wore upon his neck several medals won at shows in England. The show of Durham bulls was very good. There were three aged, of the year old, 13 three year old, 11 two year old, 13 yearlings and 18 bull calves. The show of young cattle, especially yearling bulls, was considered by the judges to be very superior, one of these, belonging to Mr. Roan, was very highly spoken of. Among the successful competitors in these cattle as well as in Leicester, Cotswold and long wooled sheep are those well known breeders, Messrs. Stone of Guelph, whose sale we noticed the other day, George and William Miller of Markham & Pickering, Snell of Chinguacousy, Douglas of Onondago, Hon. A. Fergusson of Woodhill, whose cattle are now for sale, and others of lesser note.

Mr. George Miller had a number of very fine long-wooled sheep, a cross between the Leicester and Cotswolds. He also took the first prize for an aged Leicester ram against very strong competition. Mr. Stone had some splendid Cotswolds. A lot of imported sheep of this kind from one of the best English breeders was also shown, but from the eff ects of a long voyage they were very much out of condition.

In Devons the chief exhibitors were Mr. W. H. Parker of Yarmouth, R. Ferrie & Co, of Doon, Daniel Tye, of Wilmot, Nathan Cheate, and Mr. Coates. Mr. Locke has probably the finest herd of Devons in the country, and as he is giving up farming they are to be sold by auction on the 20th inst. There can be no better opportunity than this for any one who wishes to take up that breed, as Mr. Locke has imported extensively, and his stock are of the best strain.

The chief exhibitors of Ayrshires, were R. L. Denison, Esq. of Toronto, and Stassen of St. George. There is also a fine bull belonging to the Montreal Society, imported, which has taken several premiums in Upper Canada.

In Galloways, Messrs. George and William Miller, Mr. Graham of Vaughan, Mr. Roddick of Hamilton township, and John Fleming of Vaughan, are the chief exhibitors. The show of these cattle is very good and shows a large increase over former years.

Mr. James Dickey of Galt, has a lot of very fine imported Southdown ewes, from the flock of Jonas Webb. They were bro't out in 1855 by Mr. Ashton of Galt. Mr. Dickey has also a pair of splendid wethers about three parts Southdown, which are perfect specimens of a useful sheep for the butcher. There is another lot of very nice ewes imported some time ago by Mr. Gordon, but they are too much out of condition. As I before observed, there is among most of the Southdowns exhibited an evident want of fresh blood and greater care.

Mr. McLaren of Louville, C. W., exhibits a formidable-looking stump extractor. It consists of a large vertically placed iron screw, adjusted in a wooden frame and having a heavy chain to attach to the stump. It looks strong enough for any thing, and would be likely to perform the service required of it. It is intended to be worked by a horse. Till something simpler and more managable be invented this formidable implement may have a "run." A feature on the grounds is a steam saw mill, occasionally in operation, exhibited by Waterous & Co., of Brantford. The boiler is bricked round, and the chimney rears itself from the threshing machines in the neighborhood, and a plentiful supply of logs are on hand.

Threshing and winnowing machines master in tolerable numbers. Some of the latter incline towards the ornamental, for exhibition purposes, one being constructed of black walnut.

Among the productions new to this country are some specimens of Khol rabie, or cabbage-topped turnip. This root grows almost out of the ground, as it has a ten dency to shoot upwards rather than to spread or descend. Of some species the skin is green and of other it is purple. There are on it a series of what look like headed sores—as if the skin had been cut or had stretched and burst and then healed again. Mr. Benedict of Niagara exhibits two specimens, or rather two varieties, and Mr. Nickerson of Woodhouse one. The Khol rabie is grown in England, but not extensively; and its merits as a root in our climate can hardly have been sufficiently tested as yet.

Of wheat, the principal varieties on the ground are what are popularly known as Scales and Blue Stem. There is still room for improvement in our mode of exhibiting cereals. This year we have got the length of trophy of grain sheaves; and by and by we may get as far as to require that samples of the grain in the straw shall accompany every specimen of shelled grain.

There are good spring grain—oats and barley. Many of the samples of the latter are, however, discolored; giving evidence of having been cut in the wet.

There were specimens of Indian corn that may be put down as first class: a proof that there are parts of Upper Canada well adapted to the growth of this also much neglected production.

In the Horticultural department the show of flowers is, from the season of the year, necessarily deficient. Many of the fruits are good; apples particularly so. There is one specimen of pure English damsons and some bastards which pass for the genuine.—A few pears—a fruit strangely neglected in Canada—look worthy of the South of Europe. The grapes are not much to boast of. If it be expected ever to bring this fruit to perfection in Canada the slope of a mountain, having a lime stone formation, must be selected; and in that case there is little reason to doubt the result. In grape growing countries, and in the other conditions as favorable to success, it is necessary to observe that of location; and much more so must it be in Canada where the climate is less favorable, owing chiefly to the long cold winters. The orchard is shamefully neglected in Canada; and fruits which are most suited to our climate are little cared for or attended to by the farmers. There is no doubt that this must be regarded as a national error; and the sooner it is remedied the better. It is not of course expected that people will try to grow oranges or anything else not suited to the climate; but there is no reason why there should be a neglect of the commonest and most prolific varieties of fruit. The excellence of the apples exhibited is proof that all that is requisite is to pay a little attention to the cultivation of this fruit. Let every farmer make it a point to have a good orchard; and he will at once benefit both himself and his country.

The number of capsicums or poppers, red and green, was unusually large, and the specimens were apparently very fine.

In the centre of the Floral Hall was a very neat iron fountain, made by Mr. Harding of Toronto. It formed, we presume, part of the arrangements of the building.—At the same time, it is incidentally as much on exhibition as any thing else, and comes in for its share of attention and admiration. Mr. Harding also exhibited a very neatly contrived bed-room bath, which we predict will become a great favorite. It is partly let into the floor; and when not in use is covered by a sofa which turns on a pivot at one end. The front of it, if it happens to be seen under the sofa, is made to present a very handsome appearance. The bath is an institution which, as Lola Montes remin ded the Montrealers the other day, is not sufficiently valued or used among us; and if we are to change our habits in this respect this new description of concealed chamber bath is just the thing. Mr. Harding's marble topped wash stand is equally admired.

There are some very creditable specimens both of stone and wood-ware on exhibition. The articles in wood are of an ornamental character; and some of the stone filter cases are very pretty.

In book-binding, a very superior specimen is exhibited by Brown Bros. of Toronto.

Messrs. Gaige and Co. of Whitby, exhibit some calf skins and upper leather said to have been tanned in five days, without bark or bark liquors, by a process invented by them, and recently patented. The leather feels soft, and is said not to crack or take water as soon as that manufactured by using bark. The materials used in Gaige's process are said to be vegetable, and the exhibitor has certificates from practical tanners who state that Gaige's process is 30 per cent cheaper than bark, and that only one sixth of the time is occupied when it is used. Bark used to sell at a dollar and a half a cord, and is now worth in the neighborhood of Toronto, from $4 to $6 per cord. Should this new process, therefore, realize the promises made in respect to its introduction, it will have the effect of re establishing this important branch of industry.

From the Water Pipe and Chain Pump Tubing Manufactory lately commenced at Toronto, there are some specimens of the wooden Tubing exhibited here by Mr. L. D. Campbell. It is made from solid Pine or any other scantling, from 3½ inches to 6 inches square, with 1¼ to 3 inch box, according to the pressure required. It is in pieces eight feet long, fitted with an air and water tight socket joint. Several orders have been already received for this Tubing by Mr. Campbell.

The Penitentiary workshops send edge tools, planes, steel forks, scrap iron and I know not what. There are generally very creditable specimens of handicraft. The person in charge of them says the convicts are, as a body, very good mechanics; that they generally possess more shrewdness and ingenuity than the ordinary run of mechanics; and that, take them all in all, more labor can be got out of a convict than a free man. Such of them as were unacquainted with any mechanical art before they went into the penitentiary very soon learn to perform whatever they are set to. If these observations have been accurately made, and it is difficult to conceive that they have not, it would seem to follow that the criminals who find their way to the penitentiary, so far from being inferior are superior in intellect to the classes to which they belonged; and that a perverse use of mental gifts rather than a want of them would seem to have been the cause of their deplorable lot. What amount of school education they may have received is another question.

At noon to-day the public were admitted; and although the weather was very threatening then, and a very heavy shower of rain fell shortly afterwards, the attendance from that hour till the close of the Exhibition, was large. About one thousand persons became members of the Association by the payment of $1 each, and about five thousand non members attended, the price for non-members being 1s 3d. each. The grounds were altogether a very lively appearance this forenoon. The trial of carriage and draught horses generally was held about 3 o'clock, when horses and vehicles of all sizes, from the stalky to the carriage, were driven about the grounds. The trial of reaping machines went on this afternoon, but was much broken in upon by the rain and generally unfavorable weather.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS.

The exhibition of Fruit and Flowers was very good.—Mr. Brown, Mr. Woodruff and Mr. Benedict, all of Niagara, had extensive and varied assortments of apples; and also Mr. Capron, of Paris; Mr. Edy, of Oakland, and H. Beal & Co., of Waterford. The most beautiful in appearance was a small basket of pears from Messrs. D. C. Dumfries, Elwanger & Co., of Rochester. Mr. Hope Nursery, were also large exhibitors, but their assortment was very inferior to what might have been anticipated.

Mr. Parks, of Townsend, had some Citron Melons of the size of ordinary Pumpkins.

Mr. Peter Carroll, of Hamilton, and Mr. Woodruff, of Niagra, had each an assortment of splen id peaches, grown in the open air, superior to any imported from the other side this season.

There were also some desert plums, of extraordinary richness, shown by Mr. Bennett, of Hamilton.

Mr. J. Young, of Montreal, was a large and valuable contributor of fruits, flowers and roots.

Some very fine samples of sweet corn, by Mr. Benedict, of Niagara; and of early corn, by Mr. G. H. Patterson, of Brantford, were displayed.

The show of roots and vegetables were very ordinary; and in some qualities exceedingly poor. Toronto market, on Saturday morning, presents usually a much better display.

The display of poultry also was not remarkably good in consequence of the absence of Dr. Case, of Hamilton. He had entered over 100 varieties, including samples of almost every kind of feathered creature; but was obliged to send an apology, accompanied by a gift to the funds of the Society of $10, as one of his children was taken suddenly and dangerously ill just as he was about to set out.

Up to ten o'clock this morning the receipts of the Fair were, by—

Badges sold in Brantford . . .	$3,177
15,000 Tickets sold	3,750
Carriages	51
Booths	586
	$7,564

There are some additional articles in the Department of Manufactures worthy of mentions, of which we have as yet omitted to take notice.

The entries of Messrs. T. Fuller & Co., of Toronto, in furniture, were especially commendable. Among other elegant specimens of their workmanship, the most conspicuous was a very beautiful sideboard of oak; it was most elaborately wrought; on the doors were carved tasteful groups of flowers, fruits, fish, &c.; brackets, between which were arranged pier-glasses; the whole piece of work surmounted by a stag's head, executed with great skill. The entire collection of Messrs. Fuller was very commendable.

Next in this lot of entries were some capital specimens of artificial limbs, which are so regulated by the simplest mechanism, that they seem as perfect as art can make them; these articles were exhibited by the maker, John Goodall, Kemptsville.

A very neatly manufactured telescope rifle was exhibited by J. J. Walker, Simcoe; and some tubing and chain pump apparatus by L. D. Campbell, late of the News Depot, Toronto.

Mr. Murphy of Toronto, exhibited some very elegant specimens of graining; and the Toronto Wire Works some very excellent ar icles in that branch of manufacture. Mr. Nasmyth need scarcely be mentioned for his excell nt crackers, as they are so well known by the public, from their success at former exhibitions. Mr. Kavanah, of Hamilton, had some specimens of horse-shoeing worthy of note. Besides these, there were many entries of leather worthy of remark; our attention was particularly called to some fine calf skin, manufactured by Gaige's process, which is tanned without the bark or bark liquors, by a vegetable preparation 30 per cent cheaper; it appears to be tougher than ordinary leather, and is said to be impervious to water.

In the vegetable department we omitted to mention some good entries of hops by Mr. Henry Greenstreet of Paris.

In their whole department of vegetables, the entries were numerous, and the specimens excellent, especially in the turnips, beets, and potatoes.

In the department of Agricultural Implements, the Exhibition, as we before remarked, was much superior to former Exhibitions. The ploughs were numerous, and very fine. There were not many cultivators or implements of that description; but of straw-cutters and fanning-mills, there was a great abundance. The competition in reaping machines was very keen; and in the straw cutters, the judges found it expedient to separate those in which horse power was employed, from the rest of the class.

TALL.—Mr. Alfred R. Metcalf of this town, has shown us a stalk of Chinese Sugar Cane over twelve feet in length, that is tall, but Mr. John Bryan of this village has some in his garden which stands over 13 feet high.—Mercury.

The above is rather tall, but we have a small patch of CHINESE SUGAR CANE in our garden that beats the above hol ow, a few of the tallest stocks measure 14 feet and 2 inches, and will no doubt attain the height of 15 feet if the season continues warm.—The stalks are now green and healthy looking, and appear to be growing. The only fear is that the seed will not ripen before frost.—ED. M. L.

☞ From the Prototype, we learn that the Directors of the Southern Railroad held a meeting in London a few days since, when the contract previously existing with Messrs Wythes was annulled, and the way thus more completely opened for carrying out the amalgamation with the Grand Trunk.

☞ The Barrie Advance says:—"The two men who broke goal from this place last week have not yet been taken. Fifty dollars reward has been offered for their arrest. The following description of them is given in the bills offering the reward:

HENRY BRITTAIN, about 26 years of age, 5 feet 7½ inches, light coloured l air, have of his right foot, with the letters "J. R." marked on his arm, with an anchor, &c., in India ink.

THOMAS CALLAGHAN, about 35 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches, dark hair and eyes, a small whiskers, Shoemaker by trade, a native of Ireland.

The Montreal Herald, on good authority, confirms our statement made some days ago, that there will be no decision at all on the Clergy Reserves question this year. The responsibility will be shirked by recommending the continuance of the alternate system.—Leader.

MR. PETER EBEY, formerly Crown Land Agent at Berlin, who has been generally suspended from office under the Government, has upon intimation that an enquiry was to be instituted into his official management, taken himself off. Mr. Ebey was a thorough Radical; the proprietor of three Reform newspapers, and was wont to talk loudly of the virtues possessed by his party. He has given us an example of them.—Woodstock Times.

At the Circuit term of the Court held by Judge Deodatus Wright, in Hudson N.Y., last week, an action brought by Sylvester Snyder, and Cornelius Snyder his guardian, against Joseph Simmons, Jr., was tried. The defendant was, a school-teacher and the plaintiff a pupil. The defendant, in administering punishment, struck the plaintiff in the eye, and a cataract had ensued as the consequence. The questions submitted to the Court were—1st. Whether the defendant was justified by inflicting punishment—2nd. If justifiable, was the punishment reasonable and proportionate to the offence.—And 3rd. If justifiable and reasonable, was the injury caused by the act of the plaintiff in suddenly turning round his head and receiving in his eye a blow intended for some other part of his person. The Court charged the jury that if they found these three questions in the affirmative, they should find a verdict for the defendant, otherwise for the plaintiff. Verdict for the plaintiff.

Nathan B. Willets, of Haddonfield, N. J., extracted forty gallons of juice from five hundred stalks of the Chinese sugar cane, which was subsequently reduced to eight gallons of molasses. The canes were not ripe, but had attained a height of fifteen feet. About the 30th inst., they would be fit to gather, and Mr. Willetts intends to make an experiment to ascertain if the syrup can be made to granulate.

Sheet iron railroad cars are now in use on the Baltimore Railroad. It is said that they are one third lighter than an ordinary frame car, and can be made to weigh less than seven tons. The cost of construction is represented to be nearly the same as other cars. The inside of the cars is lined with cushions, for the protection of passengers in case of accident.

A correspondent of the Manchester (Eng.) Guardian gives the account of the ascent of Mount Blanc by a large party, among whom there were several Americans, one of whom, a young lady from Delaware city, slipped over an icy precipice, and fell hundreds of feet into a fissure where she must have been dashed to pieces. Living or dead, however no assistance could be rendered her, and there her remains must lie until the last trump shall sound.

We learn from New York papers that the expenses of the government of that city for the year ending July last were $4,271,859,—and the additional sum of $1,173,487 was raised for purposes authorized by laws of the State. The amount of the tax levy for the present year, including the sums required for the payment of interest, is $8,066,566,—which is an increase of very nearly three millions over 1853. The total amount of the City debt on the 1st of July was $15,421,468. A very large increase is authorized for various purposes by the laws of last winter. The property holders of New York have the prospect, therefore, of having their taxation still more largely increased in future.

Speaking of the hardness of the times in New York, the "Herald" advises the people to give up the practice of living at hotels where they are charged each two or three dollars a day, while the tables set for them are only loaded with trash which no stomach can digest. Our contemporary advises the hotel keeper to be wise in time, to give only plain, wholesome food, and reduce their fares to one dollar a day, if they wish to keep themselves from ruin.

THE LABOURING CLASSES.—A Boston paper says that 700 Irish, lately engaged in the Lowell factories, are taking passage back to Erin's Isle, in consequence of the improved condition of the old land and the darkened state of things here. Here are reports from Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

BIRTH.

At Kingston, Jamaica; St. Vincent, Barbadoes; and St. Thomas on 27th ult., and at Bermuda on the 16th inst. The reports from Jamaica represent the weather as exceedingly propitious for the growing crops, the island having been visited with rain in abundance. The wet weather had occasioned considerable sickness, Governor Darling was well received by the people.—The Kingston sugar market had greatly increased. Sales are quoted at 27s to 36s 3d per 100 lbs, and some had been made at 25s 6d. Mr. Gyre was expected to resume the Government of St. Vincent. The export of arrow-root from St. Vincent had reached 6,745 barrels. The Trinidadians were exulting over handsome returns from their estates for the season just ended.

Arrival of the Anglo Saxon.

Riviere du Loup, Oct 5.

The steamer Anglo Saxon, from Liverpool, passed here this morning. She had experienced heavy westerly gales to Belle Isle.

London, Tuesday 22.

To-day the 7th Light Dragoons passed through London to Dartford, there to await embarkation for India.

INDIA.

The European residents at Calcutta, in a petition to the British Legislature, complain grievously of the misconduct of Indian administration, and pray that the country may be placed under the direct government of her Majesty the Queen, with an open Legislative Council. Private letters from India bring intelligence that the Garrison of Arrah consisting of some half-dozen English gentlemen, 46 Sikhs, and 15 Europeans, and half-caste sub officials and persons connected with the railway, after having repulsed an attack of 2000 of the mutineers from Dinapoore, with a loss, it is supposed, of more than 50 to the enemy killed and wounded, and with only one wounded on their side, were ultimately relieved by a detachment from Buxarunder, Major Eyre, Bengal Artillery, on 3rd August.

FRANCE.—The French government has received despatches by the last Indian mail, announcing that the Governor of Pondicherry had written to the Admiral commanding the French fleet on Indian seas to send him some ships of war, as a measure of precaution under existing circumstances. The merchants of Bordeux have petitioned the government on the subject. A number of ladies, some of whom had been nurses in the late war, offered to accompany Mrs. Seacole to India on a similar mission. The East India Company has declined their service.

EXECUATION OF HERAT.—An official Act of exacuation of Herat has been received at Teheran. The Persian troops quitted Herat on the 26th July. A report was circulated at the same time that Gholab-Haydar Khan a son of Dost Mahommed, was preparing to march on Herat and take possession of it. It is to be feared that in such a case the Persians would again advance as the Shah will not suffer the Affghans to retain possession of Herat.

AUSTRIA.—Above one hundred Austrian officers have offered to serve in India.

Later News from India.

The following telegraph was received at the Foreign-office through the Admiralty, Sept., 17, 8.25 a. m.:—

The "Bentinck" arrived at Suez on the 9th inst. at 10 p. m. The dates are:—From Calcutta, Aug. 16; Madras 17th; Point de Galle, 21st; Aden, Sept. 2.

Lord Elgin reached Calcutta on the 8th of August, in Her Majesty's ship 'Shannon,' accompanied by Her Majesty's ship 'Pearl.' These vessels had 300 extra Marines and 300 soldiers on board.

After the mutiny at Dinapore a small force consisting of 160 men of Her Majesty's 10th Regiment, and about the same number of the 37th was dispatched to relieve some eight Europe ns, besieged by the mutineers at Arrah. The expedition was not successful and our loss very heavy.

The 63rd Regiment of Native Infantry was disarmed at Berhampore on the 1st of August. The 11th Irregular Cavalry and the Governor-General's Body Guard have also been disarmed.

(Received, Foreign-office, Sept. 17, 12 50.)
To Lord Clarendon.

ALEXANDRIA, Sept. 12.

Gen. Havelock had advanced 25 miles from Cawnpore towards Lucknow; but after defeating the mutineers in three engagements, with loss of 21 guns, he was obliged to retrace his steps to Cawnpore, for the purpose of leaving his sick—considerably increased from Cholera, and was waiting for reinforcements. At Agra the Krock contingent and other rebels had been entirely dispersed.

A detachment of Her Majesty's 10th and 37th regiments, 300 strong, had made a night attack upon the men of the 8th and 40th Native Infantry who had mutined at Dinapore, but was repulsed with loss of 200 killed. The Irregular Corps at Seagowlie had mutinied and killed their officers.

A plot to murder the Europeans at Jessore and Benares had been discovered at Midnapore. The Shekewatti battallion was wavering, but had not been disarmed yet. Martial law had been proclaimed in Behar.

The report of General Havelock's retreat comes by the Suez telegraph. The Calcutta Englishman of the 8th of August does not mention it.

Martial law has been proclaimed in Behar. Sir James Outram is appointed to command at Dinapore.

ALEXANDRIA, Sept. 11.

The India, China, and Australia mails leave to-morrow at daybreak with intelligence from Calcutta to the 10th of August, Madras to the 17th, Ceylon to the 21st, Hong Kong to the 25th July.

A detachment composed of 350 men of her Majesty's 10th and 37th and 56th Regiments, had gone in pursuit of the Dinapore mutineers. They attacked the enemy at Arrah, but were overwhelmed by numbers, and obliged to retreat with the loss of 200 killed and wounded.

General Havelock, after having advanced to within one day's march of Lucknow, had been obliged to fall back upon Cawnpore, and there to place his wounded men and captured guns in safety. Cholera had broken out among his small force.

The 12th Irregular Cavalry had mutinied at Segowlie, and had massacred their officers. A plot had been discovered, and thwarted, to massacre the Europeans at Benares and Jessore.

The 14th Bengal Infantry had resisted the order to disarm at Jhelum, and been cut to pieces by a body of Europeans.

The Governor General's Body-guard had been disarmed.

There had been severe actions with the rebels at Agra and at Azimghur.

A report is mentioned to the effect that General Reed is dead, and that the ravages caused by cholera had compelled the British force to retire from Delhi to Agra. (This reaches us from Ceylon alone, and seems unauthenticated.)

Lord Elgin arrived on the 8th of August with 400 marines and a company of Her Majesty's 59th regiment, and another steamer had brought some of the troops of the "Transit."

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature.

The Laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition, to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the Society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of share -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years	96.
Total - - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.

And for three years - - 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each share.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, assimilating the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No matter who regards herown or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Hard Times.

Rushing 'round the corners,
Chasing every friend,
Plunging into banks—
Nothing there to lend—
Piteously begging
Of every man you meet,
Bless me! this is pleasant,
"Shinning" on the street.

Merchants very short,
Running neck and neck,
Want to keep going—
Praying for a check;
Dabblers in stocks,
Bite as blue can be,
Evidently wishing
They were "fancy free."

All our splendid railroads
Got such dreadful knocks,
Twenty thousand Bulls
Couldn't raise their stocks:
Many of the Bears,
In the trouble sharing,
Now begin to feel
They've been over-Bearing.

Risky speculators
Tumbling with the shock,
Never mind stopping,
Afore than any clock;
Still they give big dinners,
Smoke and drink and sup,
Going all the better
For a winding up.

Banking institutions,
Companies of "trust,"
With other people's money
Go off on a bust;
Houses of long standing
Crumbling in a night—
With so many "smashes,"
No wonder money's tight!

Gentlemen of means—
Having lots to spend—
Save a little sympathy,
Nothing have to lend;
Gentlemen in want—
Willing to pay double—
Find they can borrow
Nothing now but trouble.

Half our men of business
Wanting an extension,
While nearly all the others
Contemplate suspension;
Many of them, though,
Don't appear to dread it;
Every cent they owe
Is so much to their credit.

Brokers all are breaking,
Credit all is cracked,
Women all expanding
As the Banks contract,
Panic still increasing—
Where will the trouble end,
While all hands want to borrow,
And nobody can lend?

Running round the corners
Trying every source;
Asking at the Banks—
Nothing there, of course,
Money getting tighter,
Misery complete—
Bless me! this is pleasant
"Shinning" on the street.

SHIRT-UAL FACTS.—Whiskey is the key by which we may gain an entrance into our prisons and alms houses.

Brandy brands the noses of all those who cannot govern their appetites.

Wine causes many to take a winding way home.

Punch is the cause of many unfriendly punches.

Ale causes many ailings while beer brings many to the bier.

Champagne is the source of many real pains.

Gin slings have "a skewel" more than the sling of old.

The reputation of being fond of cocktails is not a feather in any man's cap.

Money spent for port that is sapped by portly gents would support many a poor family.

Porter is a weak supporter for those who are weak in body.

Lessing the German philosopher, being absent-minded, knocked at his own door one evening, whom the servant girl looking out of the window, and not recognizing him said—

"The Professor is not at home."

"O, very well," said Lessing composedly, walking away, "I shall call again at another time."

A Plain answer.—"Whose pigs are these, my lad?"—"Who, they belong to that big sow there."—"No; I mean who is their master?"—"Why, again answered the lad," "that'un there; he's a rum 'un to fight."

LOVE'S FREAKS.—Love is like a river; if the current be of seaweed, it will seek some other channel. It is not unfrequently the case that the kisses and attentions bestowed on the child of six years are intended for the sister of sixteen.

"This must be looked into," as the spoiled child said to his father's watch when he heard it tick.

VERY NATURAL.—It is not wonderful that a despotic sovereign should restrict the freedom of the newspaper press; the only wonder is, that a despot tolerates any journal; because he must desire to be his subjects only leader.—Punch.

TIME'S CHANGES.—In ancient days the celebrated precept was "know thyself;" in modern times it has been supplanted by the far more fashionable maxim, "know thy neighbour and everything about him."

The Josephine is the newest article of female attire, and is somewhat like a shanghai coat. It makes the wearer resemble the new comet—little body and tremendous tail.

A HINT.—If your sister, while tenderly engaged in a tender conversation with her tender sweetheart asks you to bring a glass of water from an adjoining room, you can start on the errand, but you need not return. You will not be missed, that's certain—we've seem it tried. Don't forget this, little boys.

A story writer says: "Florabel clasped her wide white brow with her two hands, as if to still the thunder of thought booming through her brain!" How her head must have ached with such a nose in it. Flora! bel must be the young lady whose "eyes emit lightning flashes."

Agriculture and Science.

Taint or dry Rot in the Potato.

From the experience I have had in the cultivation of the Potato, I have come to the conclusion that the taint or dry rot ones complained of, I have adopted a system of planting, which I have practised for twenty years with such success, as never once to have had an instance of dry rot among my Potato crops during that time, although they were growing sometimes in direct contiguity to other Potatoes, which, from being planted in a different manner, were labouring under the effects of the disease. It shall now be my endeavour, in as simple and concise a manner as possible, to lay this system before my readers, convinced that they will in practice find it a most effectual remedy for the disease in question. The chief cause of this disease I consider to be the prevalent error in planting the Potato, of placing the seed in a quantity of dung laid in the middle of the drill. He who knows anything of the qualities of dung, knows it is of itself incapable of promoting vegetation, or sustaining vegetable life, until decomposed and incorporated with a portion of earthy soil, and it is not therefore to be wondered at that di-ease and failures in the Potato crops are so prevalent. The wonder is, that, while such a system of planting is preserved in, any of these crops should succeed at all under such treatment; and indeed this is only to be accounted for by the small quantity and inferior quality of the dung applied, which is generally found mixed with great quantities of half rotten straw and other extraneous substances, such as coal-cinders, &c., and were it not that the fresh earth is laid immediately on the top of the dung after the seed is planted, the failure of the crops would be to a much larger extent; of this I have no doubt. The ground, too, if in a very impoverished state, may by neglecting digesting and drying up the dung prevent to a great extent a total failure of the crop, although the seed were planted thus injudiciously in the midst of the dung; for it will be observed that in this case the seed is not so destructive as in rich deep soils. The first and principal thing, therefore, in setting the Potato, is to have the manure properly commingled with the soil before introducing the seed, the plan I adopt in planting, which is briefly as follows:—

In preparing a parcel of ground for the reception of the Potato seed, I proceed to have the manure spread regularly over the surface, and evenly dug in. I then either drill the ground, after the manner of gardeners in sowing peas, and plant the Potatoes in the drill, or plant them with a dibble, without drilling, about two or three inches beneath the surface, the dibble being formed with a broad point, so as to insure the Potato having no open space left beneath it, when dropped into the hole. For large fields, which cannot well be dug or planted in this manner, I would recommend the ground to be prepared and the dung spread exactly as for Oats or Barley. Then have the ground drilled, and in planting place the seed Potato in the clean soil, on the back of the half drill, formed by the return of the plough, which half drill should be made larger than ordinary, to bring the seed as near to the centre of the drill as possible, so as to afford it every advantage of the fresh soil to vegetate in. In this way the fructifying earth, in which the seed is imbedded, will secure its healthful vegetation, and as it progresses in its growth, and so soon as it throws out roots, it will reap the full benefit of the manure contained in the surrounding soil. It is of the utmost importance to have the seed planted, so as it may have the earth both below and above it when put in; for in keeping the seed free from the dung, I apprehend, lies the whole secret, which should be particularly attended to.—From a work on this subject, by J. Smith.—Blackie and Sons, Glasgow.

DOWN WITH THE WEEDS.—Have you ever considered how much of ruin to future farm crops lies in the patch of weeds you leave? They are sowing the land now, but that is nothing in comparison with their future history. It is, perhaps, a group of thistles. Pull off one of those ripening heads, and count, if you can, the number of seeds wrapped up like arrows in a quiver. Every one of those seeds is provided with a feathery tuft, that will expand and float off the seed in the air, like a balloon. The seeds in that single thistle head will probably be scattered over twenty acres, before the snow falls. And every plant has some curious provision for scattering its seed far and wide. Some are so light that they float in the air, others will just float in water, and the winter rains carry them to a great distance from their birth-place. The only safeguard against the spread of weeds is the eternal vigilance of the farmer. Cut up the weeds, by the roadside, under the walls, in the garden, on the manure heap, in the corn-field, every where. At no future time can you abate the nuisance so easily as now.—N. Y. Times.

HOW TO DRY PUMPKIN AND MAKE THE PIE.—Perhaps some don't know the best way to dry pumpkins. It is this: Cut them up and stew them until they are soft and dry; pound and strain through a cullender; then grease pie pans and spread it on a quarter of an inch thick, and dry it; roll it up, and put it away in a tight box, or bag, from insects. Each of these rolls will make a pie. It is very easy now to make a pie. Put it in sweet milk, and let it soaksabout two hours; put in an egg, a table spoonful of sugar, a tea spoonful of ginger, and one of all-spice; and if you are lovers of pumpkin pie, as we are you will pronounce it good.

TO PRESERVE CABBAGES.—Cut them so that they may have two inches stem left below the leaves; scoop out the pith as far down as a small knife will reach; then suspend them, by means of a cord, exactly perpendicular, but in an inverted position and daily fill up the hollow part of the stem with clean water. It is stated, that by this method, cabbages cauliowers, brocoli, celery, &c., may be preserved for some time in a cool place; it affords an easy means of keeping a supply of green vegetables during the winter.

PARSNIPS FOR SWINE.—It is asserted on reliable authority, that in the Isle of Guernsey the parsnip is propagated extensively as a feed for swine, and that it constitutes a leading branch of farming—The pork fatten ed on this root, is represented as beautifully white, sweet, juicy and firm.' I have never known the parsnip to be used in this country for the same purpose, but have myself no doubt it would be found both a valuable and an economical article for food.

TOMATO PRESERVES.—Prepare a syrup by clarifying sugar, melted over a slow fire with little water, boiling it till no scum appears. Take the tomatoes when quite green, peel them, and put them in cold syrup, with one orange slice to every two pounds of your fruit; take pound for pound of sugar; simmer them for two or three hours over a slow fire. When a superior article is wished, add fresh lemons sliced, and boil with the tomatoes a few peach leaves, and powdered ginger in bags. Tomatoes even when ripe, make a fine preserve, treate l as above; but unless great care is used in the process, they will fall to pieces.

STEWED TOMATOES.—Peel, slice and stew them slowly. When done season them—thicken a little and put in a lump of butter and eat them as you would apple sauce. If you have them thus prepared, with good roast beef, properly manufactured—sweet potatoes, and lima beans,—and any company should pop in upon you unexpectedly to dine, you need wish nothing better: you'll find them first-rate.

HOW RAIN IS FORMED.—To understand the philosophy of this phenomenon, essential to the very existence of plants and animals, a few facts, derived from close observation and long train of experiments, must be remembered. Were the atmosphere everywhere, at all times, at a uniform temperature, we should never have rain, hail or snow. The water absorbed by it in evaporation from the sea and the earth's surface would ascend in an imperceptible vapor, or cease to be absorbed by the air, when it was once fully saturated. The absorbing power of the atmosphere, and consequently its capacity to retain humidity, is proportionably greater in warm than in cold air. The air near the surface of the earth is warmer than it is in the region of the clouds. The lighter we ascend from the earth, the colder we find the atmosphere. Hence the perpetual snow on very high mountains, in the hottest climates. Now, when for continued evaporation, the air is highly saturated with vapor—though it be invisible—if its temperature is suddenly reduced by currents from wheeding from abode, or rushing from a higher to a lower latitude, its capacity to retain moisture is diminished clouds are formed, and the result is rain. Air condenses as it cools, and, like a sponge filled with water and compressed, pours out the water which its diminished capacity cannot hold. How singular, yet how simple, is such an arrangement for watering the earth.—Scientific American.

Fire Proof Feats of the Ancients.

The art of breathing fire, of protecting the human skin from the heat of melted metals or red hot iron, and of rendering wooden buildings proof against fire, seems to have been practiced from the earliest ages. Two hundred years before Christ, Eumus established himself as the leader of the insurgent slaves by breathing fire and smoke from his mouth; and Barchocebbas the ringleader of the revolted Jews in the reign of Hadrian, claimed to be the Messiah, from his power of vomiting flames from his mouth. The priestesses of Diana as Strabbo states, commanded public veneration by walking over burning coals; and according to Pliny, the Hirpi family enjoyed the hereditary property of being incombustible, which they exhibit annually in the temple of Apollo. Pashymenis tells us that he has seen several accused persons prove their innocence by handling red hot iron; and in 1065 the monks produced, as a witness, in the great church of Anger, an old man who underwent the proof of boiling water, and that too, as theirwences state, from the bottom of the boiler, where they had heated the water more than usual! Sylla could not set fire to the wooden tower raised on the Pireus by Archelaus; and Cæsar could not burn the tower of Larch, which was doubtless made fire-proof by a solution of alum. The use of certain chemical combrocations, the substitution of the fusible metal of Darcet which melts at a low heat, and the application of plasters of asbestos to the feet, or of a saturated solution of alum to the skin, were among the arts thus called into use.—North British Review.

HYDROPHOBIA.—In the course of Dr. Blatchford's paper on hydrophobia, read before the American Medical Association, at its last annual meeting, at Detroit, the following curious facts were reported as taking place in Russia:—In 1810 there was in that Kingdom 104 deaths from hydrophobia In 1811, 117; in 1812, 101; in 1813, 85; in 1814, 127; in 1815, 79; in 1816, 201; in 1817, 228; in 1818, 260; in 1819, 356—making a total of 1,058 deaths in ten years, in Russia alone. It is mentioned also as a curious fact, that in Cyprus and Egypt hydrophobia has never been known to occur. It is believed also that the disease is incident to no particular month in the year, as statistics show, on the whole, as many deaths occur one month in the year as any other—there being no real difference between summer and winter. The doctor believed the constitutional irascibility of the dog was the true etiology of canine madness, and that excision is the only means now known which affords any reasonable hope of successful prevention. The report pronounces as an utter fallacy the general idea that the dog star has anything to do with the origin of virus in the dog, or that summer has any special preponderance over winter, in the existence of cases of hydrophobia. The facts submitted, and which had been collected by the Committee, show the following result: Out of 72 cases, 54 were bitten by dogs, 6 by cats, 1 by a raccoon, and 1 by a cow. Out of 62 cases, 4 died the first day, 9 the second, 6 the third, 18 the fourth, 4 the fifth, 2 on each the sixth, seventh and tenth days, and one on the twenty-first. That 22 bites occurred in March, April and May; 17 the next quarter; 18 the next, and 1 22 the last. The average of the time of the sickness was 66 days, but this lengthy average was eschanced by two strongly-marked cases, lasting 365 and 360 respectively. The usual averag is 41 days. —New York Times.

The Curl of Golden Hair.

I have a little treasure,
More beautiful to me,
Than aught of gold or silver,
Or brightest gems I see.
'Tis not a costly jewel—
In casket rich and fine;
Nor yet a thing of value,
To other hearts than mine.

And still I deem it priceless,
More precious far than gold;
More beautiful and lovely
Than earthly gems all sold.
'Tis not in iron coffers
My treasure safe I keep,
And though 'tis prized so highly,
I often o'er it weep.

In a closely folded paper,
And laid away with care,
Lies a little sunny ringlet,
A curl of golden hair.
With beauty once it shaded
A fair and lovely brow;
And though years have wasted,
methinks I see it now.

How oft my fingers pressed it,
And twined it o'er and o'er,
All wet with tears of anguish—
Such tears can flow no more;
For the angels came and called him
To live with them above,
While my heart was all o'erflowing
With a mother's earliest love.

Then, O how sad and lonely
Was everything to me:
His playthings all were gathered,
For those I could not see.
We put away his cradle,
With his little cushioned chair;
And my heart, like them was vacant,
For hope had withered there.

In the dark cold grave we laid him,
Where the weeping willows bow;
And of him this poor relic
Is all that's left me now.
Is it strange that I should love it,
And guard it well with care;
'Tis little these strange ringlet—
This curl of golden hair?

A Fish Story.

A ludicrous scene occurred the other day, in Anthony street, or at where the new theatre is in construction, which if a description may convey an adequate impression of it, is well worth telling.

One of the laborers growing thirsty under the influence of a hot sun, went hastily over to the nearest hydrant for a drink, and clapping his mouth to the spout imbibed the Croton just as it came, in the most forcible and plenteous manner imaginable. Hardly had poor Paddy, however, tasted the gushing food that distended his cheeks, when he started upright and with a look of amazing horror, commenced a series of pantomimic contortions which were absolutely painful to witness.

'Ow—ow—ugh!' he groaned convulsively, at the same time clawing at his throat in a frenzied manner, while he spurted the water forth again with the energy of a wounded whale; then suddenly recovering the use of his speech he shouted.

"Och, murther! but he's gone, it's all over wid me now!"

'What's gone?' exclained the crowd that had gathered around him. 'What's gone?'

'I've swallowed him! O, howly St. Patrick! I've swallowed him.

'And what the deuce is it ye've swallowed?'

'A snake! a murthering snake! O, howly St. Patrick protect me!'

'Sure, then, you've made a savio' of yer dinner!' said a fellow laborer, more alive to fun than sympathy; while a shout of mingled laughter and incredulity followed, in which even the poor sufferer could hardly keep from joining.

'But was it alive man?' inquired an individual, when the confusion subsided.

'Alive, did you say? Be the blessed powers, ye don't think I'd be after atein him dead! Alive is it! and didn't he jump down my throat in spite of my teeth! Then clapping his hands to his stomach he exclaimed, 'Och, hone, he's squirming now! O, howly Moses. Help, murder, fire!' and poor Pat, distracted by fear, cut more capers than a Camanche at a war dance.

'Tut, tut! be quiet man!' returned another, 'how do you know it was a snake?'

'How does I know, is it? Did'nt I feel him wiggling his tail? O, lowly St. Patrick deliver me!'

A benevolent looking gentleman here suggested that it might possibly be a fish or perhaps an eel, and remarked that there ought to be a filter to every hydrant in the city, as the water was full of all sorts of animaculæ, etc.

'It's an all! it's an all! Run for a filter, and ye'll catch the rascal presently.

A filter, a filter was the general cry, 'run Mike for a filter.' Without waiting to enquire into the sensibility of using the article in question, the poor distracted son of Erin started with the speed of a race horse for the office in Broadway, where the picture of Bebe, standing in the front window, pours her never ceasing fountain.

'And what d'ye call'em cried he, rushing frantically into the establishment. 'A snake-catcher for the love of——! O howly St. Patrick!' he continued, and snatching up one, he applied it energetically to his lips.

'My good fellow,' said the astonished knight of Diaphrams, 'what is the matter with you?'

'Matter is it! isn't everything the matter! —a snake's the matter! I've got an ail in my stomach! hullaboo, hullaboo!'

'An eel! How came an eel in your stomach?'

'And didn't the varmint jump into my mouth without saying by yer lave? said the bewildered sufferer, endeavoring to screw the filter to his lips.

'But my man, that won't do any good now. It should have been attached to the hydrant, and then you might have drank with perfect safety.'

'And won't it catch him now?' asked Mike, in a piteous tone, turning sghast as he dropped the instrument in despair.

'Of course not, how should it?'

'Och, murther, what will b:come of me?' exclaimed Mike, with an agony truly painful to behold.

'Get a sockdologer fish hook!' shouted a wag from the crowd.

'Run for a doctor,' said another, 'and get a stomach pump.'

This suggestion was instantly followed, and he started for a drug store near by.

The apothecary, however, applied an emetic, instead of a stomach pump, and the poor fellow, after a violent reaching, ejected a lively black eel six inches long.

'O howly St. Patrick!' he exclaimed, ey'per encing immediate relief. 'Why didn't ye make clean work of it, the sin as well as the snakes, for I'm shure an' they are first cousins to the wicked sarpints. Divil a dhrop of wather will I ever shrink agin in this blessed counthry, without a snake catcher in me mouth!'

And with sundry other resolutions, which would shock the ears of a temperance man, poor Mike, pale and trembling with exhaustion, returned to his work.—[Spirit of the Times.

The Monster Ship.

The building of this nautical leviathan the "Great Eastern" has steadily progressed towards its final completion. The hull is entire, its double machinery is in and fitted, the bulwarks are partly up, and the internal fittings in such a forward state as to show the launch is near at hand, and that if necessary, the Great Eastern could be ready to make her first voyage by Christmas next.—Nearly 1,500 men are employed on her daily, and, though when spread about her acres of upper and lower decks, they seem but few, they are in reality quite enough for the work, and under their incessant efforts, each hour records great progress made. Already some of the cabins are finished and fitted to show the style of the arrangements which are intended to prevail throughout, and these, compared with the "cribb'd and cabined" dens, so painfully impressed upon the minds of all seagoing travellers, are perfect saloons. There are whole streets and squares of such palatial mansions in these floating out into saloons, which of themselves afford as much space as the maindeck of a line of battle ship of the present day.

The bulwarks, which are now being put up, add considerably both to the height and symmetrical proportions of the vessel. They are 9 feet 6 inches high forward, and slope down to about 5 feet high amidships and aft. The massive wrought iron deck is also being covered in with teak planking, placed at about six inches distance from the iron. The machinery for both screw and paddle engines is in, with the exception of the crank shaft, which is being forged, and the screw shaft, which, though placed, is not yet put together, or connected with the screw engines. Both engines are of such ponderous calibre and strength that the visitor gazes on them as they lie ranged beneath him with the dumb feeling of surprise that a sight of the tremendous rock-hewn monuments of Egypt always occasions. They are beyond all doubt the largest and most powerful engines by some thousands of horse power that have ever been constructed, and some of the largest pieces of wrought iron that have ever been forged, and the largest castings that have ever been run in one casting are used in their manufacture. But all the parts of the engines are so constructed and proportioned that they will work safely and smoothly at eight strokes per minute, with the steam at 25lb, and full on without expansion (beyond what is unavoidably effected by the slides,) or at sixteen strokes per minute, with the steam in the boiler still at 25lb, and the expansion valve cutting off at one-fourth of the stroke. Under these last named circumstances the paddle engines alone will give a power of about 5,000 horses.

The screw engines consist of four cylinders of 84 inches diameter and four feet stroke, working horizontally. As with the paddle cylinders, each of the four is in itself a complete and separate engine, capable of working quite independently of any of the other three. They work up to an indicator power of 4,500 horses of 33,000lb, when working at 45 strokes a minute, with the steam in the boiler at 10lb, and the expansion valve cutting off at one-third of the stroke. They are, however, made to work smoothly either at 40 strokes per minute, with steam at 25lb, without expansion, or 55 strokes a minute with the expansion cutting off at one-fourth of the stroke. Under these circumstances they will be working at the tremendous power of 6,500 horses. It will thus be seen that the paddle and screw engines, when working together at their highest power, will exert an effective force of not less than 11,500 horse power, or sufficient to raise 200,000 gallons of water to the top of the Monument in less than one minute, or to drive the machinery of all the cotton mills in Manchester. The consumption of coal to produce this amount of locomotive force force is estimated at about 250 tons per day.

The total number of crew will be 400, of which one-third will belong to the engineering department, one third for victualling and servants, and one-third the sailing department. The officers will be Captain W. Harrison (late of the Cunard's line,) a chief officer and chief engineer, 12 other sailing officers, 16 subordinate engineers, a sailing master, a purser, and two or three surgeons. In addition to the two screw steamers which will hang astern abaft the paddle boxes, and each of which will be 100 feet long, 16 feet beam, 120 tons burthen, and 40 horse power, there will be 21 other boats, which are now being made at Deal. Some of these will be large decked boats, like little yachts, and all will be fitted with masts and sails complete. There will be six masts, two of them square rigged, and all of hollow iron except the last, which will be nearest to the compass. The spaces afforded by the cellular compartments between the two "skins" of the vessel will be used for pumping water into as a substitute for ballast, and as the wrought iron walls subdividing these spaces are made perfectly water-tight, water can be put into any one or any number of them at pleasure.

The actual weights of the ship, engines, and various fittings are as follows:—

	Tons.
Ship - - -	7,226
Timber work, fittings &c. -	1,576

Paddle wheels - - -	185
Paddle-boxes & sponson beams	350
Screw, shaft, and bearings -	153

The preparations for getting the monster safely down to the water, are progressing steadily, and according to present arrangements, there is but little doubt that the launch will take place early in October. As soon as ready to be launched, the manner of launching is as peculiar and novel as the scheme of the ship itself. From the position in which it has been necessary to build her, and to avoid the tremendous strain which a ship of her length would suffer from being launched by the ordinary method, stern foremost, it is absolutely necessary that she should go into the water broadside on. By this plan no risk of strain is incurred, though as a vessel of her enormous weight and bulk would require sufficient momentum in rushing down an inclined plane of three hundred feet to the water to carry her quite across the river, great precautions have to be adopted to ease her gently off. The launch, then, if the process by which she will eventually reach the water may be so termed, is likely to be a long and tedious affair, which will certainly occupy eight or ten hours, and probably more. The way in which it will be effected is this:—Two launching "ways," or large and powerfully built tramways, have been constructed by the railway contractors, Messrs. Treadwell and Co., running from under the fore and after portions of the vessel down into the river at low water spring tide mark. The foundation of each is formed upon seven rows of piles, the four outside rows being driven at nine feet intervals, and the three inner rows at six feet. These piles are all forced home to the gravel of the river bed, so that they graduate from a length of 32 feet under the ship's bottom to 10 feet at the low watermark. Down the railway ways, or these "ways," the ship will be slowly lowered into the water on cradles, which are now being constructed under her. The process of launching, therefore, will consist of lowering these cradles with the vessel on them slowly over the "ways." As we have said, it is expected to take place in October, and will begin at two in the morning, when the Great Eastern will be moved down as the tide ebbs till she reaches low water mark exact at low water. As the tide flows again she will, of course be floated off, moored in the centre of the river, and continue her fittings, so as to be ready for sea about February next. While passing over the first 200 feet of the "ways" great care must be used, but that distance safely accomplished, the Great Eastern may be safely left to find her own way into that element on which for years to come, she will be regarded as a marvel and a wonder. The great extent which the launching "ways" cover, diminishes the weight per square foot which they will be required to bear to little more than three quarters of a ton. The ordinary weight over launching "ways" is 2½ tons the square foot, though launches are frequently made in London at three tons.—A tell-tale indicator will be fixed to the two cradles, so that any difference that may occur in the rate of descent of each will be immediately rectified by the check tackle.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS produce a most surprising change in cases of general debility. The broken down invalid, whose nerves, muscles and relaxed nervous systems have scarcely sufficient vitality to sustain his emaciated frame in an erect position, is soon renovated and braced by the invigorating effect of this priceless remedy, and his whole frame is re-animated and filled with energy. His spirits resume their buoyancy, and he feels like a new man. Such is the experience of thousands. Longevity depends in a great measure upon the regular and healthy action of the organs of digestion and excretion, and upon these organs Holloway's Pills operate irresistibly.

MAKING A LEVEY ON A BABY.—During the argument of the Lemmon case yesterday, in the Supreme Court a pretty looking and well dressed lady came into court to recover the possession of her baby, whom its nurse had seized for non-payment of a small debt, wages. The nurse was present with a child and made a great clatter with her tongue, but the judges being all occupied, the case had no chance. Some of the persons present advised her to commence a suit in the 2nd District Court for the debt. —This position suiting her, she was prevailed upon to give up the child, and started off to see Judge O'Conner, 2nd District Court. In the meantime the mother repleved the child and carried it home. Nursey returned in great wrath to find the baby "levy" set aside by the skill and promptness of the mother.—N Y Advertiser.

DUTCH CANDOR.—Some ten years since, an old Dutchman purchased in the vicinity of Brooklyn a snug little farm for nine thousand dollars. Recently, a lot of land speculators called upon him to buy him out. On asking his price he said he would take sixty thousand dollars.

"And how much may remain on bond and mortgage?"

"Nine thousand dollars."

"And why not more?" interrogated the would-be purchasers.

"Because the darned place isn't worth any more."

A TESTY HUSBAND.—The following incident is stated to have occurred at Gloucester during the past week. As a working man was leaving home after breakfast, to resume his duties, his wife said in the most plaintive and affectionate accents, "What will you have for dinner to-day, my dear?" "A besom stick, if you like," was the peevish rejoinder, accompained with a slam of the door. The husband returned home to dinner in a better humour. A clean cloth was laid on the table and a few covers and dishes, neatly arranged, his table. "I wish, my dear," said the busy housewife, "you would strain off the water," at the same time pointing to a large saucepan. The husband obeyed, took the pot to the pump stone, drained off the water. Curiosity prompted him to take off the lid, to see "what for dinner," when he beheld a besom stick, chopped into suitable pieces. The husband was obeyed—it was all she had cooked.

SURREPTITIOUS ADVERTISING.—A smart Yankee agent for a tobacco house, undertook to paint his advertisement with tar upon the side-walks of Trenton N. J. Some ladies found their shoes suddenly taken from their delicate feet by the adhesive qualities of the tar, and some gentlemen came near being broomsticked out of their houses for tracking tar on their carpets.—The affair there was quite an excitement, and the Mayor was compelled to dispatch an officer after the tobacco man. The officer reached the depot in time to see the object of his pursuit smoking a cigar on the platform of one of the cars. Before his departure he came very near being mobbed by a number of the outraged citizens at the depot. Several efforts were made to remove the offensive article, but it bid defiance to soap, water or sand. The agent in our opinion, says the State Gazette, has rather damaged the sale of his tobacco from this circumstance.

INTRODUCTION OF CARPETS.—Carpets were known in Italy much earlier than in England; in the latter country, indeed, they were not adapted to the habits of the people in the reign of Elizabeth, and we find that even the presence-chamber of that queen was, according to Hentzner, strewed with hay, by which he meant rushes. The custom was not confined to England, but prevailed even in Italy after carpets had been first introduced. The use of rushes for covering floors is alluded to frequently by Shakespeare.

NAPOLEON AND SLEEP.—It has been said that he slept little, an assertion for which there is no foundation. On the contrary, he slept much, and even stood in great need of sleep as is the case with all nervous persons, whose minds are very active. I have often known him spend ten or eleven hours in bed. But if wakefulness was necessary, he could support it, and indesmify himself at a later period, or even take repose in advance, in order to support the fatigues which he anticipated; finally, he had the valuable art of sleeping at will.—Marmont's Memoirs.

ADDING INSULT TO INJURY.— Nobbs, having come with his family to the seaside for a little change of scene, complains that they have been terribly bitten by—(but no, we will not mention the horrid creatures)—and is addressed thus by the lodging-house keeper:—"Then hall I can say Sir his,—that if you've been hill conweinenced by 'em, you must a'bought 'em down with you in your portmanteau!"

To carry a Collin's steamer from New York to Liverpool requires eight hundred tons of coal—enough to keep an ordinary family for forty years.

The papers from various portions of Indiana and Illinois state, that the hog cholera rages very destructively in their localities, and that the entire hog crop is threatened.

A gentleman lately arrived at Lexington, Missouri, from Salt Lake, states that the Mormons have fortified Fort Bridges, with the expressed intention of defending it against the United States troops.

Townsend alias McHenry--His Second Trial.

Merrittsville, Thursday Afternoon. October 8th, 1857.

As soon as Mr. Chief Justice Draper had taken his seat on the Bench, and the Court had been opened.

Mr. Start communicated the affidavits to the Crown Counsel, who took time to peruse them. Shortly afterwards Mr. Mc Donell (for the Crown) retired with Mr. Iles and one or two others, to see if they could be contravened.

After the lapse of nearly an hour, they returned, and Mr. Start read the affidavits to his Lordship.

In the meantime the Court room, large although it is, had become densely crowded both on the floor and in the gallery; where indeed persons were sitting on the outside railing.

Mr. Start quoted, in support of his motion, and having briefly stated the facts of the case to his Lordship.

Mr. Macdonell said he should have liked more time to examine the affidavits, but thought he could contravene them. He had been put to great trouble to procure evidence on the trial. He had witnesses from Guelph, Oshawa, Woodstock, and the United States, who were now in Court, and who perhaps could never be assembled again

Beginning with McHenry's own affidavits, Mr. McDonell remarked that he was not indicted as Townsend, and was therefore not obliged to bring forward evidence to show that he was not.

His Lordship remarked that this was an assumption. Such evidence might be necessary in certain cases which he might suppose.

Mr. Macdonell said that Ritchie had had no warrant to arrest any man as Townsend, hence he thought the case could not arise.

Mr. Macdonell continued—The prisoner did not name any one whom he could bring from California to give evidence in his behalf. This plea would not be admitted in a case of larceny. Why should it be in a case of murder? In relation to the letter received by Colonel Turnbull, Mr. M. stated that Capt. T. could not give the date of the letter, and that it was probably written some time early in 1854, after which McHenry might have returned and shot Ritchie.—With respect to Flemming, he would consent not to bring him forward as a witness.

Mr. Stuart—Nor his wife?

Mr. Macdonell—I mean himself. The precedent that would be set if the trial were postponed, would be a dangerous one. The prisoner had said at Cayuga that he had been ready for trial three months. Why had he not three months ago commenced the search for witnesses? Any other man would have done so. As for want of means, as alleged, some forty witnesses were brought up at Cayuga to prove the prisoner's innocence, who came forward too freely to have done so from disinterested motives. Moreover, he was prepared to prove that at the Cayuga trial one witness was offered £50 if he would leave the court, or swear contrary to his expressed opinion.

Judge Draper—You should have the party arrested and put upon his trial.

Mr. Macdonell continuing—That, at any rate, shows that means were not wanting. As to the other witnesses named in the affidavit, it was not shewn what they could prove. Hence the insertion of their names seemed to be merely an artifice.

With reference to the statement of Mr. Lewis, it did not say at what time of '54 the letter had been received. This gaol, moreover, was not absolutely safe.

Mr. Start replied that at Cayuga, the man was indicted as Townsend. Bryson and another convict, said that he was the man. But 15 or 20 witnesses had been called from the body of the Court there, who had come from motives of curiosity, and received, (so far as he knew) no compensation. With reference to the gaol, his client was willing to go to Cayuga. Outside the Court, however, the murderer of Ritchie was called Townsend, and it would be necessary to disabuse the minds of the public—who might be jurors—of the impression. On the trial at Cayuga, a Mr. Horn had sworn that he had secreted Townsend in a house for seven weeks after.

Mr. Macdonell.—If Mr. Horn swears any thing of the kind here, I will have him indicted and tried as an accessory after the fact.

Mr. Start—I don't think that would hinder him from giving his evidence.

Judge Draper then spoke as follows:

If the case under discussion were a mere civil trial between two parties, of whom one were to state the simple fact, that before he could consistently with his interests proceed to trial, it would be necessary for him to procure additional evidence, the Court would assuredly grant a delay, even altho' the trial should be for a simple promissory note. In the present case the stake is of far more value. It is no less than the life of the prisoner.

To commence at the end of the prisoner's affidavit, he says that he is innocent of the crime with which he stands charged. If the case were now before a petty jury, I should feel it my duty to inform them that this point of the affidavit should have no weight with them. But the prisoner is not yet upon his trial, and the presumption of law is in his favor. I am therefore bound to receive his oath as much as that of any single person in this crowded court. The Counsel for the Crown has, I think, acted discreetly in not attempting to controvert this.

The next part of the affidavit I shall notice is, that the prisoner swears he is not ready to stand his trial on the particular charge brought against him. He could not be, for it was only preferred and a true bill found yesterday. This is an important feature. Here is a man charged one day with the crime of murder, of which he may be, and I hope he is, innocent, and required to stand his trial on the next. In a civil case, it is well known that on a first application, although a person may have had 8 or 10 days' notice of the particular points on which the trial may hinge, delays are uniformly granted by the courts. If this be done where a few paltry pounds are at stake, how much more should the rule obtain where life itself is in the balance?

Again, the prisoner asserts that he will have the means of proving his innocence on another occasion. Should I attempt to say that he swears falsely? The law does not require it of me, and I decline assuming the responsibility. I have entered into this explanation, not to justify myself, but to show the people that in the administration of justice here it is imperative that the balance be held with a firm hand.

I grant the prisoner's application.

The announcement was received with a movement as if of relief, after the breathless silence with which the words of the Judge had been listened to.

The prisoner soon after addressed the Court as follows:

I have a further request to make to your Lordship.

From the course the prosecution is adopting, I am rather taken aback. Some three months ago I wrote to California. So long as I was arraigned under the name of William Townsend, I was convinced that no sane jury could convict me. But to be prepared against any emergency, I wrote two letters to California, to neither of which I have received an answer. I am an entire stranger here and have no means. I should wish to be assisted by the Crown or the Counsel for the prosecution to bring forward witnesses to prove an alibi. All I can do now is to offer to relate to any one acquainted with California, some exploits of Sam Langton's, which excited considerable interest in Chipp's diggings. Any one hearing my narrative of these exploits which took place in 1854 can tell whether or not I was on the spot at the time.

I have learned likewise, that there are parties here around me who seem to be following me up most pertinaciously—whether to track out the guilty man or to gain a reward, I know not. They are prejudicing the minds of the Gaoler and Sheriff against me. I have heard that I am likely to be confined in irons day and night here. I pray your Lordship this may not be, as my constitution is already injured by confinement. The prisoner then entered into a description of some details of his California life, and ceased speaking.

His Lordship said it was possible the Crown would in some way assist the prisoner—and, moreover, the Sheriff would do all that humanity could demand, consistently with the safe keeping of the prisoner.

The multitude began to disperse.

The Stability of Canadian Banks Public Confidence in them, and the Causes of it.

It is a gratifying circumstance, that whilst the richest and the oldest Banks in New York, in the New England States, and everywhere in the west, are distrusted, and in many instances run upon, the Canadian Banks brave the commercial storm without a single suspicion of their stability or their honour. In many parts of the west, at this moment, there are but two descriptions of current money at a premium; namely, specie and Canadian Bank bills. In Chicago, the man who has Canada money in his possession, has what is known to be good, though the people know little of Canada. The reputation of the country is literally heralded by its Banks. In Buffalo Canadian bills are sought after by people who wish to travel West or East; for they are the other specie, as they call it, in circulation. The reasons of this may be given in a few words.—Canada's Banks have always been good; for Banks which stood the commercial and political shocks of 1837, which weathered the money panic of 1842, and which were unshaken by the depression and the commercial disasters of 1846, simply proclaim to the commercial world, that scarcely any conceivable money crisis could break them, since those they have passed through were amongst the worst known to America. Nor should it be forgotten, that within the last eight or ten years in England, banks of no ordinary capital and character either suspended or were broken; and that few serious depressions have been felt by the manufacturing, agricultural, or shipping interests in Britain, without failures bringing down Banks, and commercial misfortunes reaching even the Governors of the Bank of England. In the United States commercial depressions—for many reasons which we need not go into here—have invariably brought down large numbers of Banks. A large merchant or manufacturer failed: and the telegraph had hardly ceased announcing it, ere the tidings had to "be sent on" of a Bank being brought down by the disaster, and the loose system of credit invariably brought perhaps a dozen other minor establishments, far and near, into the same net of misfortunes.

Now, it is much more a matter of congratulation than of boast, that though we have our short crops, our blighted crops, and over speculations, our over dressing, and our too extravagant living; and we have had all the depressions and difficulties incident to such misfortunes and follies; yet, in no instance has a bank gone down with the follies or the mishaps; or has commercial tightness, or commercial looseness, affected the stability of these institutions. The merchant may have gone down, and a scoundrel may have run away; and a Bank or two may have suffered seriously by the events; but in no case have the worst disclosures, or the worst losses, affected their credit, or diminished public confidence in them.—Colonist.

A Bloody Tragedy in Texas.—We find the following in the Dallas Herald:—"It becomes our duty to record one of the most desperate and heart-rending tragedies that has ever been enacted in this region of country. John Robinson, living some four or five miles from Birdville, Terrant Co., on Friday morning of last week, without previous provocation, as we are informed, almost without an intimation of his fiendish intentions, shot and killed two brothers, George and James Anderson, brothers of his wife, then attempted the life of his wife, and, failing in that, proceeded deliberately to his neighbor, old man Sublett, a distance of nearly two miles, and while the man was begging for mercy, shot him dead. Returning to within a short distance of his home, Robinson finished this horrid and unnatural tragedy by placing the muzzle of the gun against his own forehead, and pushing the trigger with his ramrod, put an end to his own life instantly. The whole affair occurred in less than an hour. Robinson previously had a difficulty with his wife, and had agreed to a separation. Her brothers were assisting to remove her things when when he shot them both with a rifle and a musket. Sometime ago, Robinson committed a brutal assault upon old man Sublett, and was punished with several months' imprisonment, which was probably the cause of his animosity against that individual."

Th. 15.—The exhibition of all nations in London, England closed 1851. Murat the son of an inkeeper at Cahors was intended for the ecclesiastical profession but escaping from College he became a common Chasseur and deserted; he again served in the constitutional guard of Louis XVI.; then rose by his zealous Jacobinism to the ranks of Lieutenant Colonel, was afterwards removed as a terrorist until his fate brought him to Bonaparte, whom he accompanied into Italy as Aid, when he distinguished himself. In 1800 he married Marie Caroline the youngest sister of his patron.—In 1804 he was made Marshall, Grand Admiral and Prince of the French Empire. For his services against Austria he was rewarded with the Grand Duchy of Berg. In 1808 Napoleon placed him upon the Throne of Naples. Murat at one time sought the friendship of Austria against Napoleon; he then fought with Napoleon at Leipsic, and after the battle withdrew and concluded an alliance against him, and again taking up arms for Napoleon, Austria took the field against him, and drove him a fugitive into France. After the overthrow of Napoleon, he escaped to Corsica, from whence he sailed to recover his lost throne, he was driven on shore by a gale where he was seized and carried in chains to Pizzo, was tried by a court martial, and condemned to be shot 1815. AGRICULTURAL FAIR.

The County Fair opened on Wednesday, of last week, on the grounds prrpared for the occasion, which were well fenced, and conveniently arranged; everything having been done, to render the exhibition attractive by the municipality, but for all this, it fell far short of former years, and it was very much inferior to the one held last year in the township of Mersea; why this sudden change should have come over our agriculturalists, it is difficult to imagine. There is one thing certain, however, that the time for holding the fair was known to very few in the county, from the officers not having proper hand bills posted thoughout the county.

In rambling through the ground in the stock department, we were heartily disappointed at seeing so few cattle that were deserving even of a passing notice—a Durham cow and calf, belonging to Col. Prince—a Devon Bull to Mr. Wingfield—and a grade Bull, entered by Mr. Edward Smith, were all handsome animals, and looked exceedingly fine. In sheep there were only three or four entries; these were good, and would have made a creditable show even at the Provincial Exhibition.

In the poultry department there was a very fair show, from the diminutive bantam to the large over grown shanghai.

The horse was numerously represented, but beyond the ordinary carriage horse, there was little to boast of.

In grains and roots, there was a pretty fair show; among the former we noticed a number of sacks of wheat, which were clear and plump; but there was one great objection to all that was exhibited, and that is, want of keeping separate the different kinds, for the best sample shown was a mixture of two different kinds; this should be avoided as much as possible. In other grains the show was very fair. We noticed some particularly fine barley. The root department was well supplied by Judge Eliot, and Burnley & Carolan, and others.

In going into the ladies' department, which is always by far the most attractive, we could not help feeling a slight sensation come over us, when we commenced to gaze at the very many pretty pieces of handiwork that were placed about in a most attractive manner, showing plainly of the skill of the fair ones in their execution. Our readers will excuse us, and so will the fair ones, if we do not attempt to enumerate the many pretty things that deserved notice, from our ignorance of the premises.

The fruit was not plentiful, but was good. Mr. Dougall had a very fair show of Pears.

THE ESSEX CAVALRY TROOP.

On Monday last, the inhabitants of this little, "quiet and sequestered nook" of Her Majesty's dominions, were nearly frightened out of their "propriety," occasioned by the entree of the Essex Cavalry Troop, who, as they marched through our streets, with their "bright uniforms and prancing steeds," were the theme of universal admiration; and deservedly so, for we will venture to assert, that Canada cannot boast of a finer troop of horses and men than those composing the Essex Volunteer Cavalry.

On Tuesday they were reviewed by Inspector-General McDougall; and the manner in which they went through their evolutions, evinced a degree of proficiency scarcely credible, considering the very short period that has elapsed since the organization of the troop. The greatest credit is due to Sargent-Major Archer, (who has been acting as drill Sargent,) for the pains which he must necessarily have taken, in order to have brought out the troop in such a thorough s ate of proficiency.

At the conclusion of the review, the troop were addressed by the Inspector-General, who paid them the high compliment of telling them, that they were second to no similar troop in the Province—a compliment as richly deserved, as it was flattering

It is the intention of the troop to return the compliment paid them upon the occasion of their first appearance, by the Mayor and Corporation of Detroit, and they have accordingly invited them over to a dinner to be given this evening, at the Windsor Castle.

The troop will be dismissed to-morrow morning, it being the last of their ten day's drill. In the afternoon, a beautiful silver Goblet, presented to the troop, by Colonel Rankin, will be run for over the old Drouillard course, two miles above Windsor.—There will also be a hurdle race, which, judging from the number of horses entered, promises to be a most spirited affair, and well worth going to see.

We regret to say that one of the men belonging to the troop—Mr. Joseph Wigle—was thrown from his horse on Saturday last, at Kingsville, and had his leg broken.

A new and interesting Description of Recruits for India.—In Toronto, and we believe in several other parts of Canada, there are Emancipation Societies composed for the most part of escaped slaves, and free colored men. We are not aware of the aggregate of their numbers, and as colored people usually come to Canada by the "underground railroad," we are not able to say what proportion they bear to our whole population. They number, however, we should say, at least ten thousand in Upper Canada; and we have understood that they contemplate offering to raise a regiment, either to go to India, to serve in Canada, or to be employed in any way, or for any period, that may be deemed most advisable by the Imperial Government. The offer is at once both patriotic and honorable; and will, whatever may be the decision as to the acceptation of the regiment give no ordinary pleasure to the Queen and the people of England. The offer, at this particular period, is in excellent taste; and we question much if better men could be got for service in India. The climate would be exactly suited to them; and they have more than once proved in Canada their value as soldiers.—Colonist,

Captain Johnson of the barque "Ellen," who acted so humane a part in the rescue of the passengers of the "Central America," is receiving the reward of well-doing in the shape of various gratifying testimonials from the Government, as well as from individuals. By order of the Secretary of the Navy, the "Ellen," which was considerably damaged in the gale which destroyed the steamer, at the expense of the Government, has been made as good as new. A valuable present has also been made to Captain Johnstone by James Buchanan, President of the United States, in the shape of a magnificent gold pocket chronometer and chain, which is said to be one of the best the world can produce. Aside from the intrinsic value of the gift, (its cost was about $350,) the circumstances under which it has been received will add greatly to its value, and will be regarded, in some sense, as a testimonial from the whole people, in the person of their Chief Executive.—Colonist.

Arrival of the Atlantic

New York, Oct. 12.

The Collins steamer Atlantic, from Liverpool at 4 p.m., the 30th ult, arrived at half-past ten a.m. to-day.

The India, with Calcutta dates of Aug. 23, Bombay 21st, and Delhi 17th had arrived.

Delhi was still in the hands of the insurgents, a good deal of skirmishing had taken place.

The Rebels being invariably defeated, but with considerable loss to the British.

Gen. Nicholson arrived before Delhi on the 18th of August in advance of his force, which was expected between the 13th and 15th, when the number of besiegers would amount to 11,000 men. Further reinforcements were looked for early in September, increasing the army to 15,000.

The assault was expected to take place on the 20th August.

The account in regard to Gen. Havelock and the position of affairs at Cawnpore are conflicting. According to one statement, the General after marching a second time towards Lucknow and defeating the enemy in the engagement, found the rebels to number 15,000 strongly entrenched at Lucknow, and had to fall back upon Cawnpore, where reduced to only 900 followers, he was expecting an attack from the insurgents.

The Trieste correspondent of the London Morning Post telegraphs that Gen. Neil had attacked and defeated a large force near Cawnpore, and that Gen. Havelock had succeeded in reaching Lucknow, the garrison of which had been in a most precarious condition.

Agra dates to the 11th: All in the forts were amply provided with provisions, but the force was very weak and called frequently for relief. The whole Christian population was within the Fort.

Bethoor was re-occupied by 4000 mutineers, who, on Aug. 16, attacked and carried the position.

The most loyal spirit prevailed among the Sikh soldiers and the population of the Punjaub.

From most of the native states of Central India the accounts are satisfactory, although in some instances dissatisfaction had broken out. The rebels at Arrah had been defeated by Major Eyre.

The Mohrum holiday, as to which fears were felt, had passed off quietly.

A few more mutinies among the troops of the Bombay Presidency are reported.

They were generally easily suppressed. Suspected regiments had been disarmed.

It is reported that Goolabsing died at Cashmere on the 2nd August.

Lord Elgin was about to return to China.

Gen. Lloyd had been suspended and was to be brought to trial.

Martial law had been proclaimed at Delhi.

Paris papers contain a rumor that serious dissensions existed between Lord Canning, Governor General, and Sir Colin Campbell.

The Commander-in-Chief of the army, Lord Elgin, had sided with the latter, who was also supported by public opinion.

The safety of Havelock having reached Lucknow was doubted, and his position was regarded as a precarious one. An officer reports that he saw the end of Nenah Sahib and family, who took to a boat on the Ganges and were swamped.

A telegraph despatch from Paris to the London Post, dated Sept. 29th, says that the population is beginning to rise in Bengal, pursuing and killing English settlers, and that the revolution is becoming general. Merchandise from the interior no longer reaches Calcutta, and the imports are accumulating in the depots.

Money is dissappearing, and the paper of the East India Company is 25 per cent discount.

CHINA.—Hong Kong dates are to Aug 8th.—Admiral Seymour had declared Canton under blockade. Tiens had advanced at Shanghae and Amony.

The meeting of the Emperors at Stuttgart terminated on the 28th.

The Czar had gone to Weimar to meet the Emperor of Austria.

Liverpool, Sept. 30.—Flour quiet and slightly easier.

Wheat buoyant at the full prices.

Steamship Disasters.

The appalling loss of life on the "Central America" has no parallel in the annals of American steamship navigation. The nearest approach is the disaster which befel the "Arctic," on the 27th of September, 1854, by which something like three hundred and fifty lives were lost. The steamship "San Francisco," belonging to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, which foundered in the Atlantic on the 25th of December, 1853, was lost under circumstances similar in many respects to the disaster which has just occurred; but the number of lives sacrificed was much less—not varying far from two hundred, including 150 United States troops.

Taking a retrospect, with a view to recount the various catastrophes which have befallen ocean steamships owned in or trading with the United States, we find that the following have been entirely lost:—

SPLITTING ROCKS WITHOUT BLASTING.—Some French inventors have taken out a patent in England for splitting rocks by the generation of heat, without explosion. They use a substance composed of 100 parts of sulphur by weight, 100 of saltpetre, fifty of sawdust, fifty of horse manure, and ten of common salt. The saltpetre and common salt are dissolved in hot water, to which four quarts of molasses are added, and the whole ingredients stirred until they are thoroughly incorporated together in one mass, which is dried by a gentle heat, and is then fit for use. It is then stamped in the holes bored for blasting rock in the same manner as powder, and is lighted by a fusee. It does not cause an explosion like gunpowder, but generates a great heat, which splits the rock.

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature.

The Laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.:

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of Share - -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years	96.
Total - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.
And for three years - - 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each share.

The monthly distribution and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

The Lawyer's Stratagem.

A gay young spark who long had sighed
To take an heiress for his bride,
Though not in vain he had essayed
To win the favor of the maid,
Yet fearing from his humble station
To meet her father's cold negation,
Made up his mind without delay
To take the girl and run away!
A pretty plan, what could be finer?
But as the maid was yet a minor,
There still remained this slight obstruction!
He might be punished for abduction!
Accordingly he thought it wise
To see the 'Squire and take advice—
A cunning knave who loved a trick
As well as fees, and loved to pick,
As lawyers can, some latent flaw
To make his client cheat the law.
Before him straight the case was laid,
Who, when the proper fee was paid,
Conceived at once a happy plan,
And thus the counsellor began:
"Young man, no doubt your wisest course
Is this: to-night you get a horse,
And let your lady love get on;
As soon as ever this is done,
You get on too—but hark ye, mind,
She rides before—you ride behind!
And thus, you see, you make it true,
The lady runs away with you!"
That very night he got a horse,
And put the Lawyer's plan in force;
Who found next day—no laughing matter—
The truant was his only daughter!
When lawyer's counsel, craft and guile,
It may sometimes be worth their while,
If they'd avoid the deepest shames,
To ascertain the parties names.

Mirth and Wit.

It is said that Tom Moore, one night, while stopping at an inn in Scotland, was continually troubled by the landlady with a request that he should write her epitaph. Accordingly, at night, he gave, as follows:

"Good Susan Blake, in royal state, Arrived at last at Heaven's gate—" and stopped, promising to finishing in the morning. The good lady was in transport at this inscription, and treated Mr Moore with every possible attention. In the morning he was about leaving, when the lady reminded him that he had not finished the epitaph. "That is so," said he, and immediately added,—

"But Peter met her with a club,
And knocked her down to Beelzebub"

It is said that Mr Moore's horses were in motion just as he had finished the last line.

A young lady recently returned from a boarding school, being asked at the table if she would take some more cabbage, replied:—"By no means, madam—gastronomical satiety admonishes me that I have arrived at the ultimate of culinary deglutination consistent with the code of Esculapius."—Mother! oh, Mother! Sukey has swallowed the dictionary by cracky.

Hold your tongue, Ned, she has only got a little edification from the boarder school.

Some years ago, when the (then) favorite song, "I'd be a Butterfly," was all the rage, a lady sent her footman to the music store, to procure it arranged for two trebles. The "flunkey," to be certain of his message kept repeating it on his way; but something occurring in the street, which drew off his mind from it for a moment, he of course, got it wrong, and bolted into the shop, calling in a loud tone for "I'd be a Butterfly, arranged for two cripples!"

A wag, passing through Main street, Worcester, saw on a sign the following: "Turning of every description done here." Entering the shop, he inquired of the proprietors if he could get a job done there. "Certainly," was the reply, "any kind of turning done at the shortest notice." Well, then," said the wag, "turn me ten sumersets in about one minute."

"Yes," was the reply. "Will you be good enough to show me the silk umbrella I left here three weeks ago?"

Agriculture and Science.

Swine and Swine Fattening.

During several years past we have written so much on this topic at this season that there is but little new to be said to our old readers. However, there are a few suggestions that cannot be repeated too often:

First—Let the fattening of swine be attended to early. When cold weather comes, a large amount of food is required to keep the warmth of the animal, which in milder weather would be converted into lare. This rule holds good in fattening any animal. So also a warm pen and but little exercise will promote the accumulation of fat.

Second—Keep the pens clean. We have reasons, from experience as well as theory, for saying that hogs will flesh up much faster on the same amount of food in a cleanly pen than in one kept in a filthy condition.

Third—Feed the coarser kinds of food first; such as mast, peas, barley, &c. These give bulk to the animal. Finish off with corn, which contains a larger supply of oil or fat producing elements. This food rapidly fills with fat the chinks of the large frame grown on the coarse food. The following humorous article from Rural New Yorker contains several valuable suggestions, such as we have often inculcated, done up in a lively style:

The first requirement to success in this department of farm economy is—a good anatomical structure on which to build the flesh. Razor breeds shave their owners and the community at large. Longlegged, slab-sided animals may answer for the purpose of "making good time" on the way to the trough, but filling pork barrels they are totally inadequate. If a farmer has no other cribs in which to place his corn two or three pigs of this description will allay any anxiety on that score. Furthermore, the only ears to which a hog should run, are ears of corn; these appendages may give to the donkey a grave look—but on a pig! Good breeders, deliver us!

Having briefly stated what we do not want we may as well give our beau ideal—there is a beau ideal in the form of a pig—and we doubt not it would be an object of an intense interest, when well portrayed by the brush or the chisel, as anything in the higher walks of art. First, swine should be small-boned and compact; the back uniformly broad and rounded along the whole body. The touch on the back firm but springy; legs short; loin and breast broad; neck short, thick and deep; cheeks rounded and well filled out; face not dishing but straight; nose fine; eyes bright; ears well set, thin and soft to touch; head small in proportion to body. This is a description when fat—and can only be manufactured by getting the right material to construct it with. Get a pig of this formation—call the breed what you like—and you will have profitable porkers.

The pig is omnivorous—will eat anything and everything that is edible. Regularity is the prime object. Give them their meals at stated periods—not fill them one day and starve them the next. We have read of those who followed the last mentioned plan, but it was for a purpose—to "get a streak of lean and a streak of fat," and one thing their hearts desired they got—the lean streak. Judgment ought to be used in this matter. A hog can squeal off an ounce or two of fat in a short time. Those having a taste for that kind of music may indulge—"we'll none of it." Give them no more food than they will readily eat from the trough; over feeding is as much of an error as to little. Clean water will be an acquisition to the style; if a running stream could be conducted into their feeding quarters they would derive much benefit therefrom.

Let there be a variety of food, at least in the early stages of fattening. Corn, peas, beans, parsnips, pumpkins, carrots, cabbage, turnips, etc., will all be found useful. In feeding roots it will be well to mix two or more varieties—pigs are sometimes dainty in taste—what one relishes another may not care about.

If you have any number of swine, a steaming apparatus will be found both convenient and economical. It prepares the food to be more readily acted upon by the digestive organs, and whatever will tend to this object diminishes the necessity of an expenditure of vital force to its accomplishment, and of necessity enables the animal to thrive more rapidly upon a certain quarter. Let the food be given warm—at the temperature of the body. Cold or frozen food in cold weather must, from the nature of things be attended by a loss of energy and vitality on the part of the animal to which it is fed.

Their bed, as well as their board, is a matter of consideration. Plenty of straw or coarse hay should be given them. It will pay better in the pig-pen than to sell it in the market.

Keep your pigs clean. Pigs as well as children will exhibit their bringing up. Unclean swine are the victims of a perverted taste—nature never made them thus. "As dirty as a hog" is an epithet often applied to those slovenish in matters and manners, and inference may be rightly drawn when hogs en masse are included—but as far as yours are concerned, if it means anything, let it be that a man as your swine would be a respectable-looking individual. A hog whose rearing has been what it should, will never forget his education, and always walk in the way he should go and on points of principle will oftimes shame his possessor.

Taste of Turnips in Butter.—About six or seven years ago, I saw it stated in a provincial newspaper, that to feed cows with turnips immediately after being milked, and on no account to give them any a short time before milking, prevented the milk or butter from tasting of the turnip. I adopted the hint, and ever since then, there has been no occasion to complain of the milk or butter tasting of turnips. The method I pursue is this; immediately after being milked in the morning they get as many turnips as they can eat. During the day they are fed on hay, and immediately after milking at night, they get the same quantity of turnips. The milk and butter are very much admired by all who take them, both for color and flavor, and I have often been called upon to give a statement of our feeding by visitors. I have several times given the cows turnips a short time before being milked, just to prove the thing. On such occasions the milk and butter tasted strongly of turnips.—Gardener's Chronicle.

Lard and Tallow Candles.—The following method of making the above named candles is described in the New England Farmer by a correspondent:—"I keep both tallow and lard candles through the last summer, the lard candles standing the heat best, and burning quite as well and giving as much light as tallow ones. Directions for making good candles from lard: For 12 lbs. of lard take 1 lb. of saltpetre and 1 lb. of alum; mix and pulverise them; dissolve the saltpertre and alum in a gill of boiling water; pour the compound into the lard before it is quite all melted; stir the whole until it boils, and skim off what rises; let it simmer until the water is all boiled out, or till it ceases to throw off steam; pour off the lard as soon as it is done, and clean the boiler while it is hot. If the candles are to be run, you commence immediately, if to be dipped, let the lard first cool to a cake, and then treat it as you would tallow."

Use of Lime.—Lime is a compound of oxygen, and a simple body called calcium. To obtain it, carbonate of lime must be submitted to the action of heat until calcined: the water of crystalization escapes in the form of vapor, and the result is quick or caustic lime. On some soils it has been found extremely valuable as an ameliorator and fertillizer. On grass land, an application of lime has frequently a very beneficial effect. It kills heath, moss, and sour and benty grasses, and brings up a sweet and tender herbage mixed with white and red clover, more greedily eaten and more nourishing to the cattle. Indeed, all fodder, whether natural or artifical is said to be sounder and more nourishing, when grown upon land to which lime has been abundantly applied. On benty grass the richest animal manure often produces scarcely any improvement, until a dressing of lime has been laid upon its surface. R. M. D.

Corn Fritters.—One teaspoonful of milk, three eggs, one pint of green corn grated, a little salt and as much flour as will form a batter, beat the eggs, the yolks and whites separate. To the yolks of the eggs add the corn, milk and flour enough to form a batter, beat the whole very hard, then stir in the whites, and drop the batter, a spoonful at a time, into hot lard, and fry them on both sides of a light brown color.

For Bad Eyes.—Get two cents' worth of refined copperas, and dissolve it in a pint of spring water, and put it in a bottle Wash the eyes in warm water, and then bathe them with the above lotion. Do not let it go near the mouth, as it is poison.

For a Swollen Face arising from Toothache.—Get a poppy head, and boil it in about a pint of water, and bathe the face with it as hot as you can bear it, twice a day. The swelling will go down in two or three days. This is also poison.

An Excellent Recipe for Making the Hair Curl.—Put two pounds of common soap, cut small, into three pints of spirits of wine, with eight ounces of potash, and melt the whole by a slow fire, stirring it with a piece of wood. Add some essence of amber vanilla, and neroli, about a quarter of an ounce each, to render the fluid agreeable.

Or, beat up the yolk of an egg with a pint of clean rain water, or lime water, a pint distilled; vinegar, a quarter of a pint: mix. To be applied warm, and, afterwards wash the head with warm water.

Cautions relative to the use of Brass and Copper Cooking Utensils.—Cleanliness has been aptly styled the cardinal virtue of cooks. Food is more healthy as well as palatable, cooked in a cleanly manner. Many lives have been lost in consequence of carelessness in using brass, copper and glazed utensils. The two first should be thoroughly cleansed with salt and hot vinegar before cooking in them, and no oily or acid substance after being cooked, should be allowed to cool or remain in any of them.

Bear-Hunting in Sweden and Norway.—At Haga (near the frontiers of Norway), we first heard great complaints of the bears in the neighbouring forests, and of the ravages they had made among the cattle. A fortnight before, three had been killed by the peasantry, which they described as being as large as the small horses that drew our vehicle, and of the black species. For the purpose of destroying them, the peasants assemble in large numbers, and extending themselves in a line, beat through the part of the forest where they are supposed to be, uttering at the same time loud shouts, and firing occasionally their guns. The bears being thus disturbed assemble together, sometimes to the number of twenty, and the hunters then collecting their forces surround them and commence a general fire upon the foe. This kind of hunting is attended to those who pursue it singly with considerable danger; as if the first shot miss, or any other part than the head be wounded, the enraged animal rushes upon the aggressor, whose only dependence must then be upon his own speed, though by retreating quickly behind a tree, if he have sufficient agility, he may have a chance of escaping. In Norway, however, as well as in the northern parts of Sweden, the peasant undaunted goes thus in pursuit of the bear unattended, relying upon his own skill and activity, and generally returns triumphant. Sometimes he takes along with him two or three small dogs, which when the bear is found by barking around him, divert his attention from the hunter, who is thus enabled to get a certain shot. In this manner a peasant in the neighborhood of Kongsvinger in Norway, who was celebrated for his adcress in this kind of hunting, had in a very short time destroyed six of these animals. An instance of his singular courage took place the preceding winter at Haga, in a peasant who searching for his cow found a large bear making a repast on her. Unterrified though armed only with his hatchet, he without hesitation attacked it, and had the good fortune to come off victorious without sustaining any injury.—Sir Arthur de Capell Brooke's Travels in Sweden, &c.

Most animals can be cowed by looking them steadily in the eye. If attacked by a dog, bear, or any other beasts of prey, seize him by the root of the tongue—if by an alligator, gouge out his eyes—a mad bul may be held by one horn, and grasping by the thumb and finger the middle gristle of his nostril—or he may be held fast to a post or sapling by his tail, if you can take a turn and belay.

GREEN'S
GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,
Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighbonring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supportedhim since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

Farmers

Call at the Great Western Boot store, where you will find every article in the Boot and Shoe trade to suit you.

Select Poetry.

The Husband's Petition.

BY WILLIAM AYTOUN.

Came hither my heart's darling,
Come sit upon my knee,
And listen, while I whisper,
A boon I ask of thee.
You need not pull, my love;
So amorously my dovey
'Tis something quite apart from
The gentle cares of love.

I feel a bitter craving—
A dark and deep desire,
That glows beneath my bosom
Like coals of kindled fire.
The passion of the nightingale,
Where singing to the rose,
Is feebler than the agony
That murders my repose!

Nay, destest, do not chide me,
Though madly thus I speak—
I feel thy arms about me,
Thy tresses on my cheek;
I know the vows devotion
That links thy heart with mine—
I know my soul's emotion
Is doubly felt by thine.

And doem not that a shadow
Hath fallen across my love;
No, sweet, my love is shadowless,
As yonder heaven above.
These little taper fingers—
Ah! Jane how white they be!—
Can wear supply the cruel want
That almost maddens me?

Thou wilt not sure deny me
My first and fond request;
I pray thee, by the eternity
Of all we cherish best—
By all the dear remembrance
Of these delicious days,
When, hand in hand, we wandered
Along the summer braes.—

By all we felt, unspoken,
When 'neath the early moon,
We sat beside the rivulet,
In the leafy month of June;
And by the broken whisper,
That fell upon the ear,
More sweet than angel-music,
When first I woo'd thee, dear!

By that great vow which bound thee
Forever to my side,
And by the ring that made thee
My darling and my bride!
Thou wilt not fail nor falter,
But bend thee to the task—
A boiled sheep's head on Sunday
Is all the boon I ask !!!

A Wedding in Russia.

During the stay of the English artist, Mr. R. T. Landells, in the neighborhood of Moscow—whither he had gone to sketch the splendid coronation scenes of last year—he had an opportunity of witnessing the picturesque ceremony of a Russian Wedding, which he accordingly sketched. The following are his recollections of the impressive scene:—

The bride and bridegroom in a Russian wedding have so many parts to play, that the only wonder is they are able to get through the complicated ceremonies of the Greek Church correctly. The formula is not set forth in their prayer-books as the office of matrimony is in ours, and it is believed that no rehearsals are allowed.

The wedding took place last summer a few miles from Moscow. We were invited with many other Englishmen, to assist at it, and certainly the scene was one altogether new to us. At the hour appointed, we met at the residence of the bride, who, in her own apartment, was being decorated in her richest attire by her female friends and relatives; each having brought some small offering, and invoked with much earnestness the blessing and protection for her of their own favorite saint. Whilst this was going on here, similar proceedings were taking place at the bridegroom's abode, he being assisted on this, the last day of his bachelorhood, by his particular friends, who all came to rejoice with him in his good fortune. When all was ready for proceeding to the Church, the bride was enveloped in a fur o white veil by her mother, who, as well as her sobs and tears permitted her, blessed her darling child.

Upon entering the church, they were met by all their neighbors and friends, and at first sight it seemed a scene of confusion—kissings and congratulations going on among the younger and more intimate of the company, and prostrations and prayers before the images of the saints by the elder portion. This at last was put an end to by the arrival of the priests, who, as they entered the church, presented a splendid and imposing picture. Their dresses of cloth of gold were richly embroidered; their long hair was parted in the middle, and fell down their shoulders in rich profusion. They approached the altar, and received there the happy couple. After a slight exordium to them upon the duties they were about to undertake, a small carpet or velvet, with gold embroidery presented to the church by the bride, was brought forth. Upon this the pair knelt; lighted candles (previously blessed) were placed in their hands, and the prayers were chanted by the priests in rich, deep voices—the people all bowing and crossing themselves incessantly; the rings were next blessed and exchanged, the priests still chanting Then came the sacramental cup—the priests, bride and groom alone partaking, of it, which they did three times each person. To conclude the ceremony two crowns were produced, massive and heavy with gold and stones; in the front of each were portraits of 'Mary Mother of God," and of St. Nicholas. These were piously and with much reverence kissed by the young couple, and then handed over to the groomsman, who, during the remainder of the prayers, held them over the heads of bride and bridegroom. This was not difficult as long as the parties were kneeling or standing; but they were obliged to follow the happy couple round the church, they being led round by the priest, who had hold of both their hands, he all the time chanting a prayer in a fine deep voice. The effect of this part of the ceremony was somewhat marred by the bridegroom's extreme height, his attendant being rather short, so that most of the time he was on tiptoe, which, of course, detracted from his graceful appearance. In this way they made the tour of the church three times When they had finished, the senior priest again reminded them of their duties; and, as soon as the bride and bridegroom had kissed all the images and holy relics of the church, the congratulations and kissings of the entire party were renewed most vigorously. On their return to their own home they were met at the door by their parents, who, with many prayers and blessings, offered them the bread and salt, which are significant of prosperity and happiness. The young couple repeatedly kissed the hands and feet of their parents, and thanked them for all their love and kindness. Wine was then drunk to the health of the newly-married couple, congratulations were repeated, and the evening was spent in festivity in which the bride and bridegroom bore the part. The feasting lasted many days, and as is always the case from the highest to the lowest, the newly married pair were the principal actors. There is no running away to spend the honey-moon alone, in some dreary dull place, amidst strangers; but their first days of wedded life are passed among their relatives and friends, who endeavor with them to make the great event of their lives as happy as possible—a much more sensible and rationable mode of proceeding, we imagine."

Jonathan and his Bride,

AT A FASHIONABLE HOTEL.

At one of our fashionable hotels, the other day, among the arrivals was one of the genus verdant—a regular not to be mistaken Jonathan—with eyes wide open at the novelties he met at every turn. He had brought with him his better half, a strapping, fawn haired lass, bedecked with a profusion of ribbons and cheap jewelry.—They had evidently "come down to spend the honey moon," and Jonathan had no doubt "durned the expense."

The first morning after their arrival, the servant was thrown into hysterics by a verdant mistake. Jonathan's bell rang furiously, and he demanded to see the landlord. That functionary having made his appearance, he was hailed with—

"Hello sir yeou—heow d'ye dew, old feller! Me and Patience find all right here —gives a feller a bifalutin' feelin; but I say ole hoss, we want a wash-bowl and towel, to take off the dust outside—then I'll come deown and take a little New England with yeou."

"I see are all the conveniences for washing, sir, said the landlord, stepping to a mahogany sink and raising the lid.

"Gosh, all Potomac!" exclaimed our Yankee, who'd ever thought of that 'are table's openin' on top that way."

Nothing further occurred until the hour for breakfast, when the verdant couple were seated at the table, and Jonathan having burnt his throat by drinking his coffee hot, and attempted to help himself to an omelet with his fingers, finally had his attention attracted to some fish balls which are everybody knows, fish and potatoes mixed together, rolled into balls about as large as an ordinary sized apple, and cooked brown. Having procured the dish that contained them, by means of a servant, he helped himself and partner to one each, and grasping the precious morsel firmly in hand, Jonathan opening his capacious mouth, took a bite from his, when suddenly disgorging the morsel, with an expression of much disappointment, he turned to his bride and ex claimed—

"I swow, Patience, these doughnuts are gettin' but coolish and taters!"

A Hotel Incident.

The proprietor of an excellent hotel not a hundred miles from Boston, died lel, among other improvements in the household arrangements, to employ a French cook, and by making a journey to New York, he found the artiste required. As the landlord was not familiar with the French language, the preliminaries of the engagement were settled in English, with which the cook was tolerably conversant.

Soon after the installation of the distinguished cuisinier a remarkable change took place in the kitchen and dining room of the establishment, much to the satisfaction of the guests. The table was beautifully decorated with flowers, pyramids and other ornaments known only to the French. A light house of sugar, with an illuminated lantern, towered in the midst thereof which would have shed lustre upon a table at the Tuileries.

Every guest was praising the skill of the French cook. The dishes were excellent. The entrees and dessert were of the first order—in a word, a French table had been set up in the establishment. During this happy state of affairs, one of the boarders, a French gentleman, who was confined to his room by illness, wished to see his countryman the cook, that he might order a particular French soup. The artiste appeared in his white cap and complete French cook costume.

"Monsieur le cuisinier," said the sick gentleman, "Je desirais que vous me fissiz une soupe a la Francaise." "Speak plain," replied the cook, "I cannot understand you." The French gentleman, astonished at the answer, gave his order in English, and added, "being myself a Frenchman, I was told by the landlord that you were a fellow countryman." "Ah, my dear sir, I am an Irishman, but do not expose me. I have been an under cook at the English embassy in Paris, where I learned French cooking; but if the landlord should know that I am an Irishman, he'd send me away."

The gentleman's order was well and promptly answered, and for several weeks he kept the secret committed to him. The story being too good to keep, was passed around in a quiet way, and after the departure of the French gentleman, came to the landlord's ears, who furious with rage, rushed into the kitchen—"You villain," said he, "you have deceived me; you are an Irishman; you could not understand the French gentleman when he gave you an order." "No, Monsieur," replied the cook, "me no comprehend his Francais, he speaks la Francais very bad." This reply entirely satisfied the landlord, and the cook maintained his position in the kitchen, good cooking and unsuspected integrity, still speaking his broken English and singing his snatches of French songs.—Boston Journal.

Habits of the Fish.

Professor Agassiz, of Harvard, is one of the most useful and indefatigable of our men of science, and we extract from a late report on fishes, a curious passage, descriptive of an American fish.

"I have had ample opportunity to watch the Pomotis, in the breeding season, every spring for the last 8 years. At that time it approaches in pairs the shores of the ponds in which it lives, and selects shallow, gravelly places, overgrown with Potamogeton, water-lilies, and other aquatic plants, in which it begins by cleaning a space of about a foot in diameter, rooting out the plants, and removing with violent jerks of its tail, the larger pebbles, and leaving a clean spot of fine sand, in which it deposits its eggs, surrounded and overshadowed by a grove of verdure. In this enclosure one of the parents remains hovering over its brood, and keeping at a distance all intruders. The office of watching over the progeny does not devolve exclusively upon either of the sexes; but the males and females watch alternately. The fierceness with which they dart at their enemies, and the anxieties with which they look for every approaching danger, show that they are endowed with stronger instincts than have been known heretofore in any of their class. Their foresight goes so far as to avoid the bait attached to any hook, however near it may be brought to them, and however lively and tempting it may be. However near to one another, the pair of one nest do not interfere with those of another, but, like good neighbors, they live peaceably together, passing over each other's domains when going out for food, without making any disturbance. But whenever an animated, single fish makes its appearance among the nests, he is chased away like an intruding libertine and vagabond. The development of the egg is very rapid. In less than a week, the young are hatched, and they soon cease to take any further care of them."

Miscellany.

A MODERN JULIET.—I have heard that young English girl arrived not long ago at Verona, with her governess. She held in her hand a book mysteriously enveloped in a velvet case, and seemed never to part with it. The day after her arrival, she was missed from her chamber. First the hotel was searched, and then all Verona. She had disappeared. Doubtless some Italian prince had schemed to carry her off, and had executed his design! The police were set to work; justice was on her track. Some one thought of asking the governess what was the precious volume which Miss—— always carried with her? A Shakespeare, replied the lady. This revelation was a ray of light in the hotel-keeper's mind. He led the way at once to the Franciscan cemetery—and what was found there?—the young English girl extended at length in the tombs of Juliet, in a white muslin mourning robe and short sleeves. Her eyes lids were closed, her hands were cold, and stiff. Her figure seemed to express a sort of ecstasy. Happily, the romantic maiden was not sleeping her last sleep. At the cry of her governess this new Juliet awoke, the Two Towers.—From Paris to Venice.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—The axe is not more necessary in new settlements than are these wonderful medicine which cure with rapidity and certainty all those debilitating affections of the stomach and the bowels which paralyse industry in unhealthy regions. Passing through the absorbents into the interior organs, this Ointment acts like a magic balsam on the inflamed and irritated parts, while the Pills, by their action on the blood, neutralize the elements of disease. Caution should be used in seeing that the medicine is genuine. To do this, look narrowly for the Watermark, which appears in every leaf of the book of directions. They are not genuine unless the words, "Holloway's New York and London," can be seen in semi transparent letters in the paper itself when held to the light.

IMPORTANT TO SNAKE FANCIERS.—Dr. Alfred H White writing from Lynnville, Tenn., says: "In 1852 I dissected the head of a large rattle snake, and to keep from being wounded by accident, I extracted the two fangs, and proceeded to examine every tissue, when I found another fang as large as the one I had extracted; close by its side I found another, varying in size; when, I was surprised again, by finding others, amounting to fourteen—all getting smaller and smaller and al possessing the same characteristics as the original fang. The opposite side corresponded in every particular excepting there were fifteen.—Most persons in petting the rattlesnake generally extract fangs th at are visible, and do not seem to be aware of the ultimate danger of so horrible a serpent.

SAVED BY HER HOOPS.—The Flint Democrat of the 1st, says that on the Saturday before, a daughter of Mr. C. L. Gardner, of that city, while playing with other children in the third story of Wesson's drug store, ran upon some loose boards covering an unfinished stairway, which gave way, and the stairway in the second story directly beneath being also unfinished, she fell to the ground floor, a distance of twenty-eight feet, without breaking a bone, and but slightly bruising the skin. Her hoops saved her life without a doubt, as by the filling of her dress with air, and the air being confined to its place by her hoops, a parachute was formed, and she descended with but slight injury.

It is said that a mountain of salt has been discovered near the Mississippi River, on the Missouri side, about 70 miles from St. Louis. The specimen brought from it resemble a piece of quartz rock, and is a little mixed with a substance resembling iron ore. It is a pure, sweet taste, and when ground to powder is white as any of the table salt now in general use. If all this be true, it will, probably, have the effect of materially reducing the price of salt all over the country.

HOW TO GET A NOTE DISCOUNTED.—Before the suspension in Philadelphia, the banks were very stringent. It is said that one bank there became so conceive, that a customer, a little irritated at the pressure policy, drew a n te for five dollars a thirty days, covered it down with first-class endorsements from his fellow sufferers, pinned it to a ten dollar bill of the same bank as collateral, and then offered it for discount.

On the 8th instant, an engine on the New York and Erie Railroad ran into the way express train, east of the Buffalo and Erie Road, at the crossing of the canal in Buffalo. Seven persons were seriously but not fatally injured. Nobody was killed The train was heavily loaded with passengers on their way to the State Fair.

An artificial fuel has come into use in England, formed by the mixture of coal-tar and pitch. The coal is broken by crushing rollers, then mixed with the pitch in the proportion of 100 lbs. of dust to 20 lbs. of pitch; under the influence of heat, and the fuel thus compounded into the size of common bricks.

According to the Journal of Commerce, there have arrived in the United States since the 1st January last, 256 fires, making a loss of $11,563,000 to $13,390,000, the loss to the corresponding period of 1856. The greatest loss by one fire was that of the Mobile conflagrea, on the 9th February—loss $850,000.

A WOMAN lately obtained a divorce from her husband because he had a bald head, which he concealed by a wig during the period of urging his matrimonial suit and the consummation of the bargain. It was undoubtedly a bald assumption on her part and the man may be congratulated, perhaps, on his hair breadth escape from a conjugal scalping.

A SINGULAR SCENE.—A Wisconsin correspondent of the Rochester Union states that, in going from Prairie du Chien to La Crosse, a few days ago, a singular scene was presented on the steamboat. At one end of the long saloon, a clergyman was preaching to a small crowd gathered around him; in the middle, gambling was in busy progress; and at the other extremity of the saloon there were music and dancing.

A citizen of Philadelphia became alarmed the other day, and drew $3,000 in gold from the bank. At night he was afraid to go to bed and sat up all night guarding his treasure with loaded pistols. His fears the panic of the day, and both of him as he cannot keep his money, and he is afraid to part with it.

AN EDITOR'S REVENGE.—The Editor and Proprietor of the Kalamazoo Gazette has a class of subscribers, to whom he attends in the following personal manner:—"As there are some men's accounts we shall advertise for sale, at auction and if anything, we will make a bonfire of them and invite the landscape—gazers to see them burn.

DYING RICH.—Men seem to take pride in the hope of dying rich. What fools this corrupt desire probably the thought that the world they leave behind will honor them for abdicating while in the possession of riches who if their honest debts were paid, would have found themselves as poor as was Lazarus upon earth. Is there a heaven for such? Can they except to settle down prosperously in that new country beyond the confines of blue ether? I doubt it. Better settle up here before you go to settle up there.

The Central American Question Settled.

(From the N. Y. Courier, and Enquirer.)

It is with great satisfaction that we place before our readers, this morning, the following despatch, announcing that all questions between the United States and Central America are settled, and that our Government has at last made a move, which looks like one in earnest, to put down filibustering. Had this action against filibusters been earlier, it would have been better, but better late than never; and we trust that the future will atone for the delinquencies of the past. The details of the Treaty and of the action of the Administration, will be awaited with interest, and if they confirm the brief announcement in our despatch, we will cheerfully give the Administration all the credit that may be its due.

WASHINGTON, Monday Night.

The Central American questions are all settled. The de facto government of Nicaragua is recognized, and Mr. Irisarri is to be received as Minister. The form and details of a Treaty with Nicaragua have been adopted, recognising the charter and contract of the old American Canal Company of the 22nd of September, 1849, as amended 27th of July, 1857, providing for the re-establishment of the Transit Line, and the restoration of the Company's rights. The Treaty was unanimously agreed to by the Cabinet on Friday last, as also the recognition of the new Nicaraguan Government and the reception of its Minister. Orders have been issued to the Commander of the Gulf Squadron to arrest filibustering expeditions wherever found, and Lord Napier has ordered Capt. Erskine, commanding the British squadron, to capture all filibusters, should they escape our squadron and deliver them to the American Commander. The course of the Administration in the whole matter has been prompt, vigorous and statesman-like.

The Southern Railroad Project Again.

Will English Capitalists invest in Canadian and American Railroads — for some time to come?

The people connected with the Great Southern Railroad are certainly gifted with extraordinary confidence in their undertaking. Notwithstanding the crisis, and that good stocks are selling in the States and it may be in England too, at fifty per cent discount, the Southern Road projectors are sanguine of raising money in the British money market to construct it. An amalgamation between the delapidated Woodstock and Erie road, and the Great Southern, is now confidently announced in a Woodstock journal, and the Kilkenny cats of directors, who, if they did not exactly devour each other corporeally, certainly consumed each other's reputation, are now described as on the best of terms, and quite sanguine of success. All this may be correct as to the minor affairs of the two interests; but with regard to the money part of the business, it is far too good to be true. The failure of nearly all the American roads, and the fearful losses which will be sustained by the capitalists of England in consequence, will make them as shy of our enterprises as burnt children are of the fire. Six years of prosperity will hardly wear away this feeling, although, in the meant me, we may have to pass through one or two years of adversity. We do not say this out of any ill-feeling towards the Southern Road, as a commercial project.—Far from it; for, if we understand the project right, it is intended to facilitate the trade and business of the great west, which, in ten years, we believe, will completely overload every present available railroad communication. But we may say it as a matter of truth. Prosperity must set in in America before capitalists will cease to bury their shoulders at our new enterprises. The old ones, too, must pay, and their business must manifestly appear too great for them, ere men, experienced in failures, and grown suspicious from severe losses, will take up fresh projects or conspicing lines. Besides, the projectors of railroads will not agree readily invest their money in Canada, or elsewhere in America, without more careful and more reliable re orts than they have hitherto had. In time the suspicion and the distrust may wear off; but the Canadian projectors, which are now so hugely flung over into England, will have to expend a vast deal more labor and more honesty upon these matters, and our own legislature will have to exhibit more discretion and infinitely more disinterestedness and freedom from jobbing in dealing with railroads, than it has done, before complete confidence will be restored in Canadian enterprises in the English money market. We state this as we before remarked, without any intention of prejudicing existing projects. But confidence in new undertakings is a plant of slow growth, in the face of old ones being comparative failures and we must wait for this plant to grow; and, in the meantime, do what we can, by prudent legislation and economy, to nourish it.—Colonist.

RAILWAY TO HALIFAX.—Important notices are at present current in reference to the long talked of union of these regions with the seabord, by a railway, on exclusively British territory. From several reliable sources, we have this day been informed that the members of the Imperial Government have declared themselves favorable to granting an Imperial guarantee for the line from Halifax to the boundary of this Province, on condition that Canada will, without demanding an imperial aid complete the Grand Trunk Railway eastward so as to effect a junction with the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick Railway.

This proposition is, we conceive, all that Canada can desire under the circumstances; and, should the offer thus be carried out, the Honorable John A. MacDonald will, to all appearance, merit the gratitude of the country for having won the good will of the home members on so important a subject.—Quebec Mercury.

TROPHIES OF THE CRIMEAN WAR.—The Montreal Herald says Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen has presented the Corporation of Montreal with twenty guns, varying in size from 24 to 68 pounders, which were captured by the English from the Russians at Sebastopol. The Royal Engineers commenced yesterday to place these guns along the terrace fronting the Champ de Mars, where they will be mounted and kept as a memorial of one of the most obstinate struggles on record.—Kingston News.

Boethius, a man celebrated for his courageous services, honors and tragical end, was educated in Rome in a manner well calculated to develope his extraordinary abilities, after wards went to Athens and studied Philosophy. Returning to Rome, he was graciously received by Theodoric King of the Ostrogoths, then master of Italy, and loaded with marks of favour and esteem, and soon raised to the first offices in their state. He exerted the best influence on the administration of this Monarch, so that the dominion of the Goths promoted the welfare and happiness of the people who were subject to them. But Theodoric, as he grew old, became suspicious, and distrustful of those about him. The Goths now indulged in all sorts of oppression and extortion, while Boethus exerted himself in vain to restrain them, and thus gained many enemies, they at last prejudiced the King against him, He was accused of treason, arrested and executed, A.D., 526.

S. 24.—The edict of Nantes revoked, 1685. Sir James Mcintosh, eminent as a jurist, a Statesman and a writer, equally distinguished for his extensive learning and his eloquence, was in early politics a philosophy, was descended of an ancient Scottish family, and was born in the County of Inverness, 1765.

Webster died 1852. The battle fought off Cape Trafalgar between the French admiral Villeneuve, with the Spaniard Gravina under his command, with thirty three sail, and admiral Nelson. The engagement immediately took place, when Nelson ordered his ship the "Victory" of a hundred guns, to be carried alongside of a 140 gun ship entitled the "Santissima Trinadada." A terrific carnage ensued on both sides; out of the 33 sail of the enemy, only six reduced to mere wrecks regained the harbour of Cadiz; but this victory was dearly bought by the death of the British Leader. Covered with the insignia won during 36 years of warfare, his person became a marked object for the musketeers stationed in the enemy's tops and was struck by a ball from the fore-mast, and died in two hours after the fatal wound was inflicted. The mighty spirit of Nelson was epitomized in the signal which he hoisted at the commencement of the action.—"England expects that every man will do his duty," 1805.

THE HUDSON BAY MONOPOLY.

COUNTY MEETING OF ESSEX, C. W.

On Saturday last, an influential and most respectable County Meeting was held at the Town of Sandwich, (pursuant to notice, from the Sheriff, in compliance with a requisition addressed to him,) to pass resolutions upon the above important subject. The Assizes were sitting, which prevented a large number of freeholders attending, whose duties, as witnesses and jurymen, confined them to the Court House. Nevertheless, the meeting was large, and the persons composing it of the highest respectability; and we were glad to observe, that the Grand Jury of the County, whose duties had been for the most part discharged, were able to give their attendance.

The Sheriff, JOHN MCEWAN, Esq., opened the meeting at 11 o'clock, with some appropriate remarks; but, his office requiring his attendance in Court, it was moved and carried that THEODORE MALOTTE, Esq., Warden of the County, should take the Chair, which was unanimously carried, and he filled it well. Horatio Nelson, Esquire, was unanimously chosen Secretary.

COLONEL PRINCE, the Representative of the Western Division in our Legislative Council, then moved a Resolution, which we insert below, and spoke to it at considerable length. He traced the origin of the charter, and dealt with it down to the present time, explaining its nature and (as he argued) its illegality also, and he condemned, in forcible language, all monopolies, as things at variance with the spirit of the age and the minds of men, and especially monopolies in an infant country like North America. The resolution embodies the hon. gentleman's views upon the subject; and he sustained them in a lengthened speech, which all who heard it perfectly understood as apposite, and explanatory of the important subject; and the "old Colonel" resumed his seat amidst the applause of the meeting.

S. S. MACDONELL, Esquire Barrister-at-Law, (the Reeve of Windsor,) and heretofore Warden of the County, seconded the honorable and gallant Colonel's resolution, in a long, lucid, and admirable speech He exhibited to the audience a large and comprehensive Map of the Territory, shewing its position, extent, and localities, and its valuable coal districts, and explaining its other vast resources.

The learned gentleman shewed, beyond all doubt, that he had made the country and the question then debated, an object of his study, and careful inquiry and investigation, and those who heard him were not only instructed by his speech, but also delighted with the clear, concise, and gentlemanly manner in which it was delivered.—He concluded by seconding the Colonel's Resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Moved by Colonel Prince, seconded by S. S. Macdonell, Esq., and

Resolved, "That in the opinion of this meeting, that part of British North America called The Hudson Bay Territory, should be no longer exclusively enjoyed or controlled by the body of men called "The Hudson Bay Company," or by any persons whomsoever, but that it should be thrown open to public competition and private enterprize, as the Crown Lands of Upper Canada are, with the view of developing its vast treasures and natural resources, and to encourage settlement there by Her Majesty's subjects, and other persons; upon such terms and conditions, as to Her Majesty's Government may seem meet; and that it is, therefore, the opinion of this meeting that the monopoly heretofore enjoyed, for such a large number of years, by the Hudson Bay Company, should not be allowed to continue beyond the expiration of its present charter, which charter appears to this meeting to have been most unwisely and unproperly granted."

GEORGE BULLOCK, Esq., then moved a resolution, which will be found below; and he spoke to it in a vigorous and manly speech—just such a speech as one would expect from a gallant soldier, as our worthy Treasurer was in early days. He was listened to with great attention, and he evinced, in what he said, a liberal mind, which hated monopolies, especially monopolies on the gigantic scale of half a continent, which he humorously designated as the most awful "family compact" ever inflicted upon British North America! His resolution was seconded by DR. DEWSON.

Moved by George Bullock, Esq., seconded by Dr. Dewson, and

Resolved, "That an humble petition to both branches of the Imperial Parliament, pursuant to the foregoing resolution, be forthwith circulated throughout this County for signatures, praying that the Legislature will not sanction any renewal or extension of the above mentioned charter, and that it will, in no way, countenance the existence of a monopoly referred to, by which and all such charters as may be deemed necessary for effectually abolishing it, and praying that the vast territory of Hudson Bay may be annexed to Canada, or erected into a separate colony, forming an appendage to the Crown of England, as Upper Canada was before the union of these two Provinces."

We regret exceedingly, that it is entirely out of our power to give even an extended outline of the speeches delivered upon this interesting occasion; but our avocation in and about the Court, render it impossible. Suffice it to say, that more manly, just, logical, or powerful denunciations of monopolies, and of a renewal of the Hudson's Bay's Company's Charter, we never had the pleasure of listening to.

On the motion of W. D. Baby, Esq., the Warden left the chair, and George Bullock, Esquire, was placed therein; and upon the motion of the same gentleman, seconded by Thos. Salmon, Esq., the thanks of the meeting were unanimously voted to the Warden, for his able and courteous conduct Thanks were also voted to Colonel Prince and S. S. Macdonell, Esq., for the interest they took in the proceedings, and for the speeches they delivered upon the occasion. Colonel Prince returned thanks on behalf of himself and his learned colleague, and informed the meeting, that he would draw up the petition to the Imperial Parliament, and would also take care that it should be circulated throughout the county, and then transmitted to proper members for presentation to the Imperial Parliament. The meeting then separated.

The prisoner was placed in the Dock on Monday Evening last, in order to have sentence passed upon him. His Lordship then after having asked the usual question whether he had any things to say why the sentence of the court should not be passed upon him, addressed the prisoner in a most impressive manner, referring particularly to the means that he had adopted in making away with his wife, the very person, whom he had sworn to support, love and cherish; that although the evidence upon which he had been convicted, was altogether circumstantial, yet there could not be a shadow of a doubt, as to his guilt. Circumstances bearing so strongly against him, could not possibly have happened, unless he were the guilty party. The fact of his leaving Paw Paw with his wife, with the intention of going to the city of Baltimore, as he gave out, and taking with him a gun which would be perfectly useless to him there, and the fact of his next being seen in Windsor without her, but having in his possession, articles of her wearing apparel, and a likeness of his wife, which proved the identity of the murdered person, and his having blood upon his clothes without in any way being able to account for its being there. The number of persons who recognized the body, as that of Mrs. Young, the prisoner's wife left no doubt in his mind of his being the person who committed the murder.

The learned Judge advised the prisoner to prepare himself for his awful doom, as he could not give him the least hope of a reprieve, and he hoped that he would make his peace with his Maker before he was launched into eternity. So affecting was his Lordship's address, to the prisoner, that the whole Court Room, which was densely crowded at the time, was moved as if by a magic spell, to breathless silence. Yet for all this, the prisoner appeared quite unmoved and insensible to any feeling of sorrow for the crime he had committed, and was removed from the Court without any perceptible change in his countenance.

The learned Judge then proceeded to pass the awful sentence of death upon the prisoner.

"ESSAY ON THE INSECTS AND DISEASES INJURIOUS TO THE WHEAT CROP," is the title of a neatly printed Pamphlet, containing the first prize Essay on the Wereil and other insects and diseases which have of late years, so greatly injured the Wheat Crop in Western Canada and the States. The Bureau of Agriculture, it will be remembered, offered three prizes of £40, £25, & £15 for the three best Essays on the subject, which were awarded as follows:—First prize H. Y. Hind, Professor of Chemistry, Toronto University. Second prize to Rev. George Hill, Markham; and the third prize to Emile Dupont, Esq., St. Joachim. From the hasty manner in which we have been obliged to glance through the first Essay, Professor Hind appears to have treated the subject with the greatest care, and his Essay cannot fail to prove invaluable to the agriculturist. The pamphlet is illustrated with numerous cuts of insects &c, and is got up in the best style of the typographic art. It is arranged under different heads which readers, it plain and easy of comprehension, and treats on the origin, history and destructiveness of the several wheat insects in a manner that evinces a thorough knowledge upon the subject.

☞ See in the fourth page for report of Young's trial, for the murder of his wife, for which, our thanks are due to the Windsor Herald.

☞ In our last week's issue, in giving a list of premiums awarded at the County Fair, an error occurred. In our report, the first premium was given to James Dougall, Esq., for best variety of apples, whereas it should have been given to Thomas Woodbridge, Esquire, of this place.

The propeller Louisville, of the Ogdensburgh line, was totally destroyed by fire at 11 o'clock on night of the 26th ult., about ten miles from Chicago. The fire was early discovered amidships, but could not be reached, on account of the manner in which the cargo was stowed on deck, until all chance of saving the vessel was gone. Preparations were then made for saving the crew and passengers; and when it was impossible to remain any longer on board they were all got into the boats and, excepting one man, who was drowned, taken to the Erie, Capt. Rozer, which fortunately happened to be close at hand. The Louisville was insured for $30,000, and her cargo at $500. She was insured for half the amount.

While boring an artesian well in the basement of a paper Mill near Watertown, New York, and when a depth of sixty feet had been reached, the drill working badly, a light was brought to discover the cause, when an inflammable gas issued from the hole and igniting shot up a flame which reached the floor overhead.—Two streams of water were turned on from the engine, but could not check the flame until the whole force of an engine was let into the building saved it. The gas, however, kept burning until a plug, made by winding a blanket around a handspike, was thrust into the hole.

The Hamilton Banner says that twenty dollar forged bills of the Commercial Bank are in circulation; they have been altered from fours. This counterfeit can scarcely be detected except by comparing the vignettes and figures on the four and twenty dollar bills. On the former, the vignette is a railway train, and the figures two female portraits; while the vignette on a twenty dollar bill should be a single femal ll ure between 2 and 0 and the portraits of the Queen and Prince Albert at the side.

The Iowa City Republican states that farmers are offering wheat in the city for forty cents a bushel and cannot find purchasers. The Republican adds, "the same state of facts is reported of Muscatine and other river markets, as I indeed was myself of the markets generally of the State."

FLIGHT OF A PIGEON FOR 190 MILES.—One of the executioners who accompanied the rector in the late trip from Warrington to London took up a pigeon to let off, to inform his mother of his safe arrival. The pigeon was let out of the basket on London bridge at half past twelve, and reached Warrington at half past six in the evening, having flown a distance of 190 miles in about six hours, or upwards of thirty miles an hour. Had the pigeon been up to it, or off, to inform his mother of his safe arrival. The pigeon was let out of the basket on London bridge at half past twelve, and reached Warrington at half past six in the evening, having flown a distance of 190 miles in about six hours, or upwards of thirty miles an hour. Had the pigeon been up to it, or off, to land's tall chimney, no doubt its marking point for its cote close at hand. It appeared rather tired on arrival, but next day it was as lively and brisk as ever.

A wealthy Israelite, living near Selma, Kansas, has in his possession a silver clock struck in the mint of Judea, 1750 years ago. It is about the size of a hair dollar, but the silver is so pure that its intrinsic value is but fifteen cents. The story hunted follows. It has been in his family 500 years.

A NEW ROOT OF ALL EVIL.—A Texan correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune forwards to that journal some specimen of a root which is found on the range of sand hills bordering on the Rio Grande, which the Indians eat for its exhilarating effects, since it produces precisely the same excitement as do alcoholic drinks. The Indians call it the o ka; but the whites denominate it the "whisky root." It is of the cactus species, and may be found in abundance containing its intoxicating power. An individual desiring to feel happy has only to chew a few slices and swallow the juice and the thing is accomplished.

PONTIAC ELECTION.—We learn by telegraph from Bytown, that Mr. Geo. Bryson has been elected Member for Pontiac; majority 481. His opponent, Mr. Burke, was regarded as the Government candidate.

NORTHERN LIGHTS IN SPIRITUALISM.—A Montreal paper says that Lola Montez is insane on spiritualism. She says that, at the command of the spirits, she has forsaken the stage, both as an actress and a dancer; that she must devote herself to lecturing, which is her destiny; that the spirits give her the power which is found in the use of cigars; that 'India' was her next subject, etc.

It would be a curiosity to know upon what subject Lola is not insane, except, perhaps, female beauty and morals, about which her sanity may be on a par with that of her admirers in the Canadian Press. The same paper adds:—'Lola Montez was in New Haven last week, and after the lecture on 'Beautiful Women' was over, the gentlemen who had not retired with their ladies, formed a hollow column from the centre of the hall to the street, where the carriage of the fair Lola Montez was in waiting. She came with hats off, giving her the wildest rounds of applause as she passed down.'

The 'fair Countess' has it seems, admirers elsewhere than in this exemplary Province. However enthusiastic these foolish gentlemen with their ladies' are, we only hope they are not so ardent as "the spirits that give her the subject of the lectures are she (!) writes them."

ENGLISH ZOUAVES FOR INDIA.—A correspondent of the Times announces that a proposition is now being submitted to the East India Company for raising a corps of European cavalry in Australia and England, to be composed of persons of the middle class of life, and also a corps of Zouaves, to be formed of volunteers collected in England. The concurrence of the Company is asked to the commissions for officers being filled up by promotion according to merit from the ranks. Should events in India render the formation of these two corps desirable, and the Company decide on raising them, due notice will be given in the public prints.

The following extract of a Letter from Mr. Wm Street, late Treasurer for the County of Middlesex, now a hope desaulter, and an exile, has been received by the Warden, and published in the London Free Press.

"Without attempting to palliate my conduct, (of which none can think more hardly than I do myself,) I must solemnly declare that I never intended to wrong or defraud the County. Having a large sum of money on hand, which would not be required for some time, I loaned it to parties who were then considered good, and from whom I fully expected to be able to get it at any moment that it was needed. The hard times came suddenly on us, and some of the borrowers were ruined, and the money was wholly lost, while others, though ultimately good, were unable to pay in time to save me from the ruin which has overtak n me.

"That I have done very wrong, is at least undeniable; that my punishment is great, must be admitted; but the loss of my liberty, is equally undeniable. From being respected and honored, I am become scorned and a fugitive. I see my family reduced to penury, and am driven from them to seek a living in a foreign country, with a tarnished name, and with my energies broken. I have given up every particle of property which I possessed. I left London with only ten dollars in my pocket, and must depend for support on a little assistance from my friends till I can get something to do, and yet, if by submitting to imprisonment, I could further the cause of justice which have been sustained though my misconduct, I would give myself up to day. But it would benefit no one, and would drive me of the only chance I have of doing something for my family during the few years that may yet be allotted to me on earth.

"Then, Gentlemen, let me beg you to look as leniently as you can on my sins, and do not grudge me almost the only thing which is left me—my liberty.

"WM. W. STREET.

"Late Treasurer County of Middlesex."

LOSS OF THE STEAMER OLIVER CROMWELL.—The propeller "Oliver Cromwell," Captain Patterson, we regret to learn, was sunk by a collision with a schooner, name unknown, in the Straits of Macinaw, Monday last, at half past 2 P. M. The "Oliver Cromwell" was bound down from Chicago to Kingston, was struck on the larboard quarter, and sank in less than ten minutes afterwards. No lives were lost, the crew and passengers barely clearing the wreck before she sank. The vessel was a new and fine schooner, carrying a white light, and, we are sorry to say, did not wait to render any assistance, but kept on her course. The owners are making enquiries, to discover her name. The steamer had on board 10,800 bushels wheat, 600 bbls flour, and 1,000 bbls pork consigned to Walker & Berry of Kingston, who were part owners with Capt. Pattinson of the steamer. Capt. Pattinson had insured to the extent of £1,000 in the Continental Insurance Co.—Globe.

The great American publishers—Harper and Brothers, inspirators of the Magazine published under their name—have sunk in general devastation now ravaging New York. They suspended payments on Friday, and it is stated that eight hundred persons employed by this calamity.—Some Bank accommodation was demanded by them, to retire certain protested bills, and it was refused, although their means were well known to be ample. In the mercantile history of this city (says the New York Courier,) the cause which has produced the present shameless madness—and the egregious folly, must have prevailed at the Board of Direction which perpetrated this shameless act. We are quite sure that no failure ever took place here, which has excited greater or more merited sympathy, and in its consequences on their employees are such as absolutely to make the heart bleed.

A special committee appointed to examine the financial operations of the New York City Council, have just made their report, from which it appears that within the last five years, the treasury of New York City has been robbed to the tune of from eight to ten million dollars. Nobody knows how or where the money has gone. But some of the Aldermen and Councilmen have recently known to get very rich, to build fine houses and live in princely style. The New York Herald says, "From railroad financiers to our Corporation scoolsmen, the solution is the same—the most astounding and enormous plots and combinations of Peter Funks, Jeremy Diddlers, rogues and scoundrels to plunder the community."

The New York Tribune is of opinion that farmers must soon submit to a large reduction in the price of their farm produce The Tribune says, "the farmers do not yet fully comprehend that with our western crops and peace in Europe, they must sell grain and meat at such prices as will justify their exportation to and sale in Europe, and that these are usually far below the rates which, under the impulse of Irish famines, Russian wars and enormous loans negotiated by the people abroad, they have for ten years been receiving. A borrowing nation always maintains general good prices; it is payment that brings everything down to the basis of hard reality. Had Europe loaned our railroad men One Hundred Millions this year, to be spent in new enterprises, the revulsion might have been postponed to another year; but it would only have been more furious when it did come. It is national indebtedness that is at the bottom of our financial disorders. We are as a people heavily in debt to Europe for the rails we wrote we rode, the clothing we have worn, and the wares which fill our houses. This indebtedness is general—all sections and all classes share in it.

Arrival of the Asia.

New York, October 17.

The Cunard steamship Asia from Liverpool, at 9 a.m. of the 3rd inst., arrived at 8 this morning.

Her advices are mainly anticipated. Her files, however, contain some items of interest.

The screw steamer "Jason" left Southampton for New York on the 1st, with upwards of 400 passengers.

The Newfoundland line of steamers is temporarily suspended.

The Hong Kong correspondent of the London "Times" says, that in regard to the blockade of Canton River it is understood that Admiral Seymour had been induced to adopt this course in consequence of the American steamer "Antelope" having proceeded up the River as far as Whampoa and it was the impression that the Americans and some other foreigners were desirous of forming a trade with Canton to which it is said it would not object.

Nena Sahib was besieging the fortress of Lucknow in person. He had cut off the canal which supplied the citadel with water.

Recruiting for the army was progressing in England at the rate of over 1,000 per week.

A report was current at Paris of an intended conference at Vienna, with respect to a settlement of the question of the Danubian Principalities and the difference with Naples.

It is stated that the Emperor of Austria will visit the King of Prussia, at Berlin.

Despatches from Constantinople intimate that the early recall of Djemil Bey, the Turkish Ambassador at Paris, had been resolved upon.

A Vienna letter says that the Porte is about to issue a circular to the great powers, refusing to consent to the union of the Principalities.

Letters from the Persian frontier say that insurrectionary movements had broken out in various places.

It was reported in Paris, that in consequence of recent persecutions of Europeans in Madagascar, a combined English and French expedition against the Queen of that country was not improbable.

Arrival of the North American.

River du Loup, Oct. 19.

The 'North American' passed up at 8 o'clock this morning.

The 'Baltic' arrived out at 11.30 on the morning of Tuesday, the 6th inst.

The 'Kangaroo' left Liverpool at same time as the 'North American.'

It was a fast day in Liverpool. No business was done.

The Bank of England has given the East India Company one million sterling of a loan on security of Indian bonds.

Five thousand more troops are ready to embark for India, and 10,000 additional militia had been embodied. The difficulties in the way of sending troops of India by way of Suez have now been entirely removed.

There is no Interpreter from India; but Paris journals assert that the rebels are under European Generalship, and the accounts are daily expected.

An 84 Russian gun ship had been captured in a squall in the Gulf of Finland, and 1,400 lives lost, including three Admirals.

The Prince Royal of Sweden had been proclaimed Regent, during the illness of the King.

The Spanish Minister had resigned.

Earl Fitzwilliam is dead.

Mitchell the sanguinary Irish patriot, that expressed so much anxiety for a partition will stocked with niggers, and exulted in the joy it would give him to flog them, has just received a good flogging himself, and moreover been branded as a pullroon, coward and assassin, all of which he had to submit to. The well merited chastisement was inflicted by the editor of the Knoxville (Tennessee) Register, and having armed himself he watched for the editor, who he met, unarmed, and commenced to belabour him as if he were only a nigger. But the editor being a man of pluck, soon disarmed him, and gave him a most sound thrashing. But not content with his victory, the editor proceeded and actually kicked the ruffian with knife and revolver, and having found Mitchell in the most public part of Knoxville, he tells us he addressed him as follows:

"John Mitchell, you made a most cowardly, though impudent, assault on me this morning. You approached me with the smile of friendship on your lips, but with the purpose of a murderer in your heart.—You approached me armed, presuming correctly upon my being unarmed. Your purposes failed you, and I have stopped you to inform you that I am now prepared to meet you upon an equal footing, and to denounce you as a ruffian, a scoundrel, a highway assassin, and a murderer at heart, and an infamous coward if you do not resent this denunciation, like a man, in an equal and honorable encounter. Such and much more were the denunciations I proceeded, while he stood at the distance of six or eight paces, with his hand upon the cock of a partially revealed pistol. Yet he ingloriously withdrew from my presence, while shouts of "coward!" "sneak!" "dastard" "coward!" broke forth spontaneously from the crowd, upon his dastardly exit."

And yet, after all this eloquent challenge, so emphatically delivered, Vatris John, the great Irish patriot, sloped.

A Case of Propriety Suspended Animation.—On the 2d inst., the N. Y. Evening Post published the death of a married lady of that city, which occurred suddenly on the 1st instant. The friends of the family assembled on Saturday, the 3rd, to attend the funeral; but it was thought best to defer early part of that day, the body still preserved its natural appearance, it was decided to perform the services in the house, deferring the burial for the present. The body was accordingly removed from the coffin to the bed, and now continues in a state of perfect preservation and natural condition on this the seventh day since the supposed decease. The Post says the utmost solicitude exists, of course, in the family, and every effort is being made to assist nature in the restoration of her functions, although as yet no symptoms of active life have appeared. It would seem to be a case for the most extreme measures to be adopted, lest the prolonged suspension of life may of itself prove fatal; and yet instances of a pause of weeks in the natural power are said to have been recorded in Europe.

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature,

The laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 for each share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 5 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum, viz.

Amount of sinus -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years -	96.
Total - - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.33.

And for three years - - - 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1 00 per month extra, as instalment on such shares.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the Society in 8 period of eight years.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the bowels, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the counties, tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Asort Rheum, Fever sores, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch) &c., to the out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world prove its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterwards complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor to persons from all the leading hospitals of Europe; and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Trial of Young.

Alfred Young was placed at the bar, charged with the wilful murder of his wife Georgiana Young, on the 19th September last, in a field belonging to Mr. Ouellette, about a mile from Windsor.

Albert Prince took the place of the Crown Prosecutor, and stated the case; after which

Branson Coleman deposed—I live in Windsor; on the morning of the 27th September I was going out, and I saw the body of a woman lying alongside the fence a little after sunrise; the fence runs from the river to the Coolee: the body was lying on the north side of the fence; it was lying full length, with the legs stretched out, bonnet skirt and shoes off;she was lying on her back; the bonnet was lying by a small pool of blood, about 25 feet from the body; the shawl, collar and other clothes missing on the body, were about 30 feet from the body in another direction. I went across where I heard some people shooting but did not see them, but I saw Mr. Richards, who was looking for his cow; I told Mr. Richards what I had seen, and then went and told Mrs. Moore, and we went to look at the body; we found it as I had first seen it.

Cross examined—I was hunting; the first person I saw was a quarter of a mile distant; had to cross the Coolee; crossed the Coolee because there were people nearer than coming back to town.

Elizabeth Moore examined—Lives in Windsor; saw the last witness on 27th September; the witness had told my little boy that a dead woman was lying on the side of the fence; my husband did not like to go, as he had an objection to witness anything of the kind, but I said probably the woman might not be dead; I then went to look at the body, which I saw in the field on the left of Goyeau street which runs in a direct line to the Coolee from the river; at first I thought it was Sarah Slaughter, school teacher, but ultimately fonnd that I was mistaken: she had a ring in her left ear; her skirt was off; she had on a black silk waist and worsted stockings; no bonnet or shoes; the missing ear-ring appeared to have been torn out. The witness then identified the clothing of the deceased, which was produced in Court. The bonnet and veil were lying in a pool of blood; the body appeared to have been dragged, the white portion of the skirt being turned outwards and lying under her head; it appeared to have been dragged by the front part of the skirt; could find no shoes; this was about seven in the morning; I returned home, and then went back again; some gentlemen were on the ground, mostly colored; this was about ten o'clock; did not see the prisoner at first, but ultimately saw him; he was trembling and trying to cut a stick, but made little way with it; he looked much confused, and I directed the attention of Mr. Walker to the fact, and expressed a wish to know who the man was—others felt impressed in a similar manner to myself; Mr. Walker asked him if he was a stranger here? he said yes; he then asked him when he came in; he said on Saturday evening at eight o'clock, he had come from Paw Paw, and was on his way to Baltimore; Mr. Walker asked his business, and he said that he traded in furs and was on his way to Baltimore to meet his wife, as he had sent her on before; Mr. Walker asked him which way he had sent her, he said by way of Cleveland; while talking I saw what I conceived to be blood on his boots, and I directed the attention of Mr. Walker to it; the prisoner then went towards the fence, which he climbed and began looking down on the body, when he was taken with a fit of trembling similar to a person affected with ague; my impression from his manner was that the prisoner had done the deed—he gave a sardonic smile at the body, as much to say, I have had my revenge. In reference to the blood on his boots, Mr. Walker asked him if his nose had bled to-day, he said 'no;' then how do you account for the blood on your boots? it is up your boots and on your trousers.' He then began to rub his boots together, and seemed much confused. He was then asked by Mrs. Woodruff if he did not know Mrs. Young, and he said 'That is my wife. (Witness examined the portrait of the deceased, a daguerreotype, and identified it as the likeness of the murdered woman)—Mrs. Woodford said to the prisoner, 'That is Mrs. Young lying there.' He said 'No she is gone to Baltimore, and I am on my way to meet her. He said 'That looks like her, but you can send to Mr. Bingy of Detroit, and she will say that is not her.'

Mrs. Woodford deposed—Lives in Windsor, on Goyeau street; went to see the body about eight in the morning; I recognised the features of the deceased to be those of Mrs. Young; I became acquainted with her about 2 years ago—she was staying at Mr. Bingy's; I boarded part of the time at Mrs. Bingy's; Mrs. Young was then married, (a portrait was then shown to witness, which she recognized as one similar to which she had seen in the possession of the deceased, and which she had shown as her husband's portrait.) I asked the prisoner if he knew Mrs. Young who formerly boarded at Mrs. Bingy's in Detroit; he said that was his wife, and she had gone to Baltimore.

Cross-examined.—To the best of my knowledge, the dress is the same I have seen on the deceased; she had seen them on often, and therefore I knew them. The Counsel for the prisoner endeavoured to shake the evidence of the witness, but without effect.

Dr. Dewson examined — On Sunday morning, I was informed by Mr. Port that a murder had been committed; I arrived at the ground at half past ten, and saw the body as it was lying alongside the fence; saw a small pool of blood at some distance from where the body was lying; it appeared to have dried up; the body was warm, as the sun was hot; I examined the body under a grove of trees; I found that death had ensued from a gun-shot wound, the bullet entering on the right side at the back of the ear, and coming out under the right eye, close to the cheek bone. The doctor examined the rifle, which is of small bore, and said a ball from that rifle would inflict such a wound—death would be almost instantaneous.

Mr. Adams, of Paw Paw, Michigan, examined the ambrotype of the prisoner's wife, which was taken at the request of the prisoner; he said that was the likeness he had taken; he had given it to the stage-driver to be handed to Mr Melchoir, jeweller, about the latter part of September; it was sent with the understanding that it was the portrait of Mrs. Young; I had heard of the murder when I sent it; I took two likenesses of Mrs. Young; Mr. Young got the second likeness: the first portrait was disliked on account of the dress—a light dress; the other was taken in a dark dress.

Thaddeus W. Melchoir—Lives in Paw Paw; heard of the murder last September; did not hear who was the supposed murderer; sent for the ambrotype to last witness, and brought it here; the likeness is that of Mrs. Young, the prisoner's wife; has known both a year and a half; became acquainted, with them while they were living there; was sent for to attend the inquest; examined the body, it was the body of Mrs Young, that both prisoner and wife left Paw Paw together; cannot tell certainly whether it was Friday or Saturday; the train by which they started would reach Detroit at half-past six; has no doubt that the body he saw at the inquest was Mrs. Young. A gold bracelet was recognized by the witness as one that had been repaired by him at the request of Mr. Young; the rifle was also recognized as having been made in witness's store; had seen that rifle in the possession of the prisoner.

Cross examined—Could not be mistaken as to the identity of the body; had said to Mr. O'Connor that if the real woman was produced in Court he would admit that he was mistaken.

Maria Falcon—Lives in Paw Paw; knows Mr. and Mrs. Young; was intimate with them; the prisoner is Mrs. Young's husband; that (the portrait) is the likeness of Mrs. Young; saw them on the stage when they started on their journey; thinks it was four weeks last Saturday; they said they were going to Baltimore; they were going for the purpose of visiting her mother; they took all their clothing, as they calculated to stay till spring; (witness examined the bonnet). it was Mrs. Young's, the other bonnet was put in a band box; that is the bonnet; the mitts are Mrs. Young's; that is her skirt; I thought I might be mistaken so I brought a piece along with me as I helped her to make it; she had the skirt on when she left; had on black silk dress; that is the same, it was torn under the arms but did not show when on; had on both the collar and veil when she started; these are the same; the murdered woman dressed herself at my house on the morning of her departure; I saw her dressed and saw the articles put into the band-box; the band-box is the same she had when she left; (head-dresses, gold ring, brooch, bracelets, &c., were all recognised by the witness.)

Cross-examined—Mr. Young and wife were near neighbors; have known them two years; never imagined he would do what he is charged with; had a good opinion of him; he had a good character; considered him an honest man; he had enemies and friends; he left things at my house until he should return; his wife was desirous of visiting her mother; quite certain they left on Saturday; did not know them to quarrel.

Mr. Melchoir recalled—There is no train leaves Paw Paw on Sunday morning; If going to Baltimore would come by way of Detroit.

Cross-examined — Cannot tell whether the Southern route would be the nearest; there is a branch of the Southern Road at Jackson.

Adolphy Bingy—Lives in Detroit; knew Alfred Young and his wife; they boarded at my house two years ago; attended the inquest; saw the body; the body was the remains of Georgiana Young, the prisoner's wife; she wore a plain, gold ring on her finger; when she left my house she went to Paw Paw, where her husband had prepared a home for her.

Sarah Ann Williamson—Boarded at Mrs. Bingy's two years since; knew Mrs. Young; had seen the prisoner there; he is Alfred Young; the deceased was Georgiana Young the person with whom I boarded at Mrs. Bingy's.

Mrs Harvey—Lives in Windsor; thinks that the place where the body was found was near a mile from Windsor; the prisoner came to my house on Saturday between eight and nine; he came in and asked for water to wash; I gave him a white towel, which he refused and said he would rather have a brown towel; after washing he sat down, looked at the clock and said 'I was certain it was ten o'clock, but it is only half past nine; he said he was very tired and fatigued, and to tell the truth about it I have been lost;' he had a gun, a band-box and a black satchel; he told witness not to be afraid of his gun as it was not loaded; he asked for a colored man the name of Green and then for a person the name of Johnson, against whom he held a Note: saw the prisoner next morning at eight when he came down to breakfast; after breakfast he said he would take a look round and see if there was any one he knew; he was gone an hour; when he came back he said there seemed to have been a murder committed; he had seen the body, if any one wished to go he would accompany them and show them the place; on the way to the place he said that the woman was too well dressed to have been at service.

Cross examined—I was ironing when the prisoner came in; there was a bright light in the room; he refused a white towel; he did not go to bed soon after supper; he talked a great deal and went to bed at eleven; was in bed at five in the morning, did not breakfast till eight.

Samuel Port, the constable who arrested the prisoner, then showed to the Court the dresses, &c., which he had taken from the body and found in the vicinity, and other articles of clothing appertaining to the deceased, which were found in the hands of the prisoner; the shoes of deceased were found in the carpet-bag. The prisoner's boots were then exhibited to the jury, having marks of blood on them. The daguerreotype of the prisoner was found in his bag; the prisoner said that there were two, but afterwards stated that his wife had taken hers at Jackson; the ring was the only ornament found on the body.

Cross-examined—The distance travelled by the parties to the point where the murder was committed would be more than a mile.

S. S. Macdonell—The distance from the railway to the coolee is less than a mile; the distance is less on the Goyeau Farm than on the others, as the coolie does not run straight; the difference would be very slight whichever way a person crossed; one of the learned counsel here asked what time the sun set on the 25th September. The witness referred him to the Almanac.

The following evidence was then called for the defence:

Mr. Durkee—I reside in Paw Paw; am acquainted with the prisoner; never heard anything against his character until the last transaction; had dealings with him; always found him honorable; never in difficulties; never got drunk; the train arrives in Detroit at 6.30 according to the time table of the Michigan Central.

Mr. Wilson then addressed the jury; he explained the reason why several of the jurymen had been challenged. It was well known that, in Mersea negroes were not tolerated—no man of color being allowed to settle there; and the prisoner had not only to contend against the prejudices of the white people, but against those of the colored folks—they regarding him as an alien from their society as much as the whites might do. The evidence was purely circumstantial; and unreflecting minds often arrived at conclusions unwarranted by facts. The learned Counsel then introduced a suppositious case: a person might find a man in the agonies of death with a dagger in his bosom —he might as a friend, pull that dagger out, and be overlooked by a third person; the conclusion of the last inspector would be —that the man who pulled out the dagger, put it in. Such cases had occurred,—men had been convicted, and innocent persons executed. We all judge by our senses; but it is well known that men's senses often deceive them, and perhaps in no other matter so much as mistaken indentity. This cou'd be proved at once, as, during the present sitting, he had been mistaken for Mr. Bell, and frequently on other occasions; but, when placed together, the identity was established—when separate, it appeared to be lost. Briefs had been given to Mr. Bell which were intended for himself. The learned Counsel then went on to show that very serious mistakes had taken place by the decision of Jurors when they believed the identity of a person had been established.— In the evidence nothing had been shown to indicate a purpose on the part of the prisoner, for no reason existed for the commission of this murder: the evidence showed that the parties had lived happily together; there could, therefore, be no motive. Murder for money—for revenge—is common; but these parties lived in harmony, as the evidence proves, never quarreled. The hour when the parties landed did not afford sufficient time to proceed the distance and then allow the prisoner time to shoot his victim, drag her to the fence, denude her of her clothing and then return to town. The question may be asked—Where is his wife? He cannot find her at present, but he says distinctly that the murdered woman is not her. The evidence has gone against the prisoner; but some communities have decided that in abstaining from taking human life a wise policy is pursued, as they know that, the liability to error ever exists; but the sentence of this Court deprives a man of life; there is therefore necessity for pause, as the conclusion in this case may not be so legitimate as in other instances which have preceeded it, where innocent men have lost their lives by decisions given in this Court.

Mr. Albert Prince then addressed the Jury: He said that the cases alluded to by his learned friend were not applicable to the case now before them. In the instances brought forward, mistaken identity was the plea for the purpose of showing that Justice sometimes overreached itself; no such plea existed at present,—as there was no mistake. The identity of the woman murdered, and her connection with the prisoner had been established beyond doubt by the evidence given from Paw Paw and Detroit. The time of the parties leaving Paw Paw had been clearly shown, and the articles which had accompanied them had been identified. The Jury must not be misled by suppositious cases, neither must they be misled regarding time; for there was sufficient time for the commission of the murder between the landing of the railway boat and the time that the prisoner showed himself at the house of Mrs. Harvey. He has not accounted for the blood on his boots, neither has he explained why he was so much agitated when questioned regarding the woman who lay dead before him. My learned friend has said nothing regarding this; but he has confined himself to generalities. Had he suggested that the natural course to be pursued by the guilty man would have been to run away from the scene of his guilt,it might have formed an argument; but he had not done so, and the fact that the man came back to the spot twice after the commission of the crime was no proof that he was innocent, for it was well known that those not deeply innured in crime felt a strange fascination for the spot where they committed their first dreadful deed. My learned friend supposes him innocent because no motive can be shown. I know of no motive, and perhaps none of us can ever tell what impelled that man to commit the crime—it may have existed in his bosom for years. But his motives, whatever they may have been, have nothing to do with the present decision. The grand question is, did the prisoner commit the murder? If it is your belief that he did commit the foul deed they pay little regard to what has been said on the other side, but respect your oath.

The learned Judge, in giving his charge, said that the Jury could not be swayed by anything beyond the evidence before them. They were bound to abide by the oath taken, and it was no matter of their's what their verdict might lead to, for the responsibility did not rest with them. The most painful responsibility perhaps rested upon himself in performing the last duty connected with the investigation. Circumstantial evidence has, at times, erred—but very seldom. If circumstantial evidence were rejected in cases of murder, a conviction would rarely be got. The present case relied on circumstantial evidence, but it was very clear. It has been shown that the parties left Paw Paw together, and that they left in time to arrive at Windsor by seven in the evening; the clothes which the deceased had on when leaving her friends are recognized; and it has been shown in evidence that the clothes found on the deceased, and articles of wearing apparel appertaining to her, were found in the possession of the prisoner. Can the jury doubt that they arrived together? If no doubt existed, what other circumstances could enduce a belief that she had not been murdered? The woman was found dead, and the prisoner had came to the house of Mrs. Harvey with a rifle in his possession. Dr. Dewson had said that the wound inflicted had been caused by a ball from such a rifle as had been produced in Court. The prisoner, when he went to the house of Mrs. Harvey, stated that he had been lost—he gave no account how he had lost himself. In speaking of his family concerns he told Mrs. Harvey that his wife was at Paw Paw—he evidently did not speak truth then; and when suspected of the murder he stated that he had sent his wife on to Baltimore, and he was on his way for the purpose of meeting her. How was this to be reconciled with the fact that the body of the murdered woman was identified as Mrs. Yonng both by people in this vicinity and by people from Paw Paw? Can you believe that all were mistaken? The prisoner had in his possession articles of dress and a pair of shoes belonging to the deceased; the shoes exactly fitted her. These are the principal features of the evidence; but if not conclusive to your minds that the murder was committed before the prisoner went to Mr. Harvey's, you are bound to give the prisoner the benefit of that doubt; if you entertain no doubt, you must, in accordance with your oath, render your verdict.

The Jury retired, and, after a short deliberation, returned a verdict of "Guilty."

Agriculture and Science.

Hints to Farmers.

Great profits in agriculture can result only from great improvements of the soil.

Great improvement of the soil can result only from unremitting industry. The chief study of every farmer should be what is useful, and what is useless expense, in relation to his art. The discrimination between these is the master key of the farmer's prosperity. The first should be incurred with a freedom little short of profusion. The last should be shunned, as the sailor shuns the rocks, where are seen the wreck of the hopes of preceding mariners.

Liberality in providing utensils, is the saving of both time and labor. The more perfect his instruments, the more profitable are they.

So also is it with his working cattle and his stock. The most perfect in their kinds are ever the most profitable.

Liberality, in good barns and warm shelters, is the source of health, strength and comfort to animals, causes them to thrive on less food, and secures from damage all sorts of crops.

Liberality also, in the provision of food for domestic animals, is the source of flesh, muscle and manure.

Liberality to the earth, in seed, culture and compost, is the source of its bounty.

Thus it is in agriculture, as in every part of creation, a wise and Paternal Providence has inseparably connected our duty with our happiness.

In cultivating the earth, the condition of man's success is his industry upon it.

In raising domestic animals, the condition of his success is, kindness and benevolence to them.

In making the productiveness of the earth, depends upon the diligence and wisdom of the cultivator, the Universal Father has inseparably connected the fertility of his creation with the strongest intellectual inducements and the highest moral motives.

In putting the brutal world under his dominion, he has placed the happiness of which their nature is susceptable, under the strong guarantee of man's interest.

Instead, therefore, of repining at his lot, let the cultivator of the ground consider his, as among the highest and happiest of all human destinies, since in relation to the earth he is the instrument of Heaven's bounty; and in relation to the inferior orders of creation, the almonor of Providence.

Ventilation of Cowhouses.—Every one knows that pure air is necessary for respiration, and that air on being used by the lungs is expelled in a deteriorated condition, and rendered unfit for being again inhaled. If, therefore, cowhouses are not properly ventilated, the air becomes foul from the respired air, as well as, perhaps, from impure exhalations, and the air so deteriorated is rendered unfit to maintain health. In the neighborhood of large towns, too, there is another predisposing cause to disease, viz., the unnatural forcing of a cow's milk by a too liberal supply of brewer's draff. Fresh supplies of air, that the blood may be purified, are essential objects of a respiratory apparatus, and if the blood that goes to the lungs is returned to the system in the same state as it is sent, death will be the consequence, for venus blood is poison to the body. It does not often happen that imperfect ventilation produce immediate death, but it is too often the real cause of inflammation, fever, and deadly distempers. — Correspondent of Mark Lane Express.

Tall Meadow Oats Grass.—Avena elatior, of the Botanists.—This grass was held in high estimation by the late Col. John Taylor, of Caroline. He thought it the best grass for upland meadow. I have cultivated it for more than thirty years. The yield of hay is much less than from orchard grass or red clover.

Sow the seed on ground well prepared, as it usually is, for the reception of timothy or other small seed, fall or spring; as early in the spring as the ground can be put in good order, is the surest and best time to sow meadow-oats grass, or orchard grass, seed. Great care should be observed in giving a regular cast, so as to have an even, uniform growth. To attain this object, it is best to divide the seed, sowing half one way, and crosswise, the other covered by brushing in.

In June of the first year, weeds will make their appearance; then with a keen scythe mow weeds, grass and all, close to the ground; you will then have a lot affording fine fall grazing for colts and calves. The next year comes a good crop of seed; as the top seed are ripe, secure it with a cradle or sickle. The seed stem puts up above the grass blades. Immediately after the seed is cut, mow closely for hay; then about the last of August or first of September, you have a second crop of hay, yielding more than the first—leaving the best of full pasturage for colts and calves. It is perennial.

Lizzie.

She blossomed in the country,
Where sunny summer flings
Its rosy arms about the earth,
And brightest blessings brings.
Health was her solo inheritance,
And grace her only dower;
I never dreamed the wildwood
Contained so sweet a flower.

Far distant from the city,
Far inland from the sea,
My Lizzie bloomed in goodness,
As pure as pure could be.
She caught her dewy freshness
From hill and mountain bower,
I never dreamed the wildwood
Contained so sweet a flower.

The rainbow must have lent her
Some of its airy grace;
The wild rose parted with a blush
That nestled on her face.
The sunbeam got entangled in
The long waves of her hair,
Or she had never grown to be
So modest and so fair.

The early birds have taught her
Their joyous matin song,
And some of their soft innocence,
She's been with them so long,
And for her now, if need be,
I'd part with wealth and power;
I never dreamed the wildwood,
Contained so sweet a flower.

Looking for Wrinkles.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

There had been a domestic storm in the household of Mr. Nicholson, and such storms we regret to say, had become rather frequent in that household. Mr. Nicholson was a man of amiable temper, and kind feelings; but with defects of character that were often particularly annoying to his wife, a quick tempered woman, who, when once fairly aroused, made everything stand around her, as the saying is. Mr. Nicolson was apt to forget and neglect—two faults with which Mrs. Nicholson had no patience, especially when this forgetting and neglecting interfered with matters bearing a relation to her daily round of duties.

A thorough business-training from youth up to manhood, and consequent habits of order, with a methodical routine of doing things, ensured to Mr. Nicholson success as a merchant.—Without these important adjuncts to business, his comparatively easy and amiable qualities would have sadly interfered with his material interest. But neglect and forgetfulness were out of the question, where order and routine were strictly observed:—It was out of his business where Mr. Nicholson's peculiar weaknesses were seen. He was one of the class of men who keep their wives waring, and who deserve the scolding they not unfrequently receive who forget to execute the little household commissions entrusted to them, and neglect, from day to day, and from week to week, the doing of things absolutely necessary to be done, in order to secure comfort at home.

'Edward,' Mrs. Nicholson might say, as her husband is leaving for his place of business in the morning. 'Won't you stop at the store as you go down, and tell Mr. Perkins to send up a keg of salt and a gallon of vinegar?'

'Certainly,' Mr. Nicholson answers, and in a way so cheerfully acquiescent, that his wife feels pleasure in his manifest willingness to oblige. But scarcely is Mr. Nicholson ten paces from his own door, ere some matter of business intrudes itself, and so much occupies his thoughts, tha he passes the store of Mr. Perkins, and even nods to Mr. Perkins himself, without once thinking of the salt and vinegar. Nor, until salt and vinegar are thrown upon him from the face and lips of his aggravated wife at dinner time, is he again conscisously aware that such articles exist.

'Is too bad, I declare!' he may answer; or, 'what a terrible memory I have!' or, 'I de-erve a good scolding!' But Mr. Nicholson never resents his wife's use of salt and vinegar, in such cases. Her anger is but a passing storm, and he knows that the sky will s on be clear again. Still, these outbreaks are by no means agreeable, and it is one of his chief regrets, that Mrs. Nicholson's handsome face is so often marred by unbeautiful passion. He tries to be more thoughtful in regard to her wishes, but habit is strong, and he goes on offending.

There has been, as we have intimated, one of these too often recurring storms in the household of Mr. Nicholson. His wife said to him one morning—it is a little remarkable, knowing his particular infirmity, that she so studiously persisted in burdening him with commissions, one half of which were ever attended to—

'Edward won't you step in at Mr. Black well's, as you go along, and ask Mrs. Blackwell to send me up that pattern of a basque I lent her? Margaret is coming this morning to make me one. She can only give me a part of to-day. Now, don't forget it please.'

'A basque pattern, did you say?' Mr. Nicholson was always ready to oblige his wife.

'Yes. Mrs. Blackwell knows the pattern I mean. Tell her I would have sent for it but that I have only one girl this week and she is so cross that it is almost as much as my life is worth to ask her to do anything out of the kitchen.'

'Hadn't you better send a note?' suggested Mr. Nicholson.

'It is not worth while. Mrs. Blackwell will know what I mean. It is a pattern I lent her a few days ago. Now don't forget Edward, Remember that Margaret will be here this morning, and she can't do anything until she gets the pattern.'

'I'll attend to it,' said the husband, as he parted from his wife. But he didn't attend to it; and it was a foolish thing in Mrs. Nicholson, knowing his infirmity, to entrust him with any commission of importance.—Almost past the door of Mrs. Blackwell he went without a thought of the basque coming into his mind, and he kept on to his store remaining altogether oblivious on the subject.

In due time Margaret arrived, as per engagement. Everything was ready for her except the basque pattern, and that was still to be received from Mrs. Blackwell. Mrs. Nicholson was considerably annoyed by this delay, and talked out her feelings to Margaret pretty freely as women of her peculiar temperament are wont to do on such occasions. She had two or three theories touching the matter. Now, she was certain her husband had forgotten to call at Mrs. Blackwell's, and now she was quite as sure that he had called and that Mrs. Blackwell didn't see fit to put herself to any special trouble in sending the pattern home.

'Let me go for it,' said Margaret. But Mrs. Nicholson answered.

'No. I'm certain Mr. Nicholson called; and in that case, I wish her to send it home. She ought to have done it, anyhow, before this.'

Hour after hour passed, but no pattern came. Beyond measure was Mrs. Nicholson annoyed; and had she not cause for annoyance? No lady reader will gainsay this for an instant. It was a trying case. Two or three times, Margaret renewed her request to be permitted to go after that pattern, but the more the subject was pondered by Mrs. Nicholson, the stronger became the conviction that the neglect was all on the part of Mrs. Blackwell.

Finally, after waiting for two or three hours until it was too late to finish the basque on that day, even if the pattern were in hand, Margaret went away, leaving the disappointed Mrs. Nicholson in the worst possible humor with herself and with every one else.

The day was just burying itself in shadows when Mr. Nicholson, weary in mind from business cares, and pleased to get home, stepped across the threshold. His little pet May, had been watching at the parlour window during the space of half an hour, and at the first glimpse of his form, had sprung away from her position, and was at the door ready to be caught up into her father's arms almost as soon as he had swung it open. And she was so caught up by her loving father, and almost smothered with kisses.

'Is that you Edward?'

It was the voice of Mrs. Nicholson calling from one of the upper rooms.

The response of her husband brought Mrs. Nicholson down with quickly moving feet.

She found him, just inside the parlour with the happy little May in his arms, looking very cheerful, and utterly unconscious of any approaching storm.

'Just to think of it!' said Mrs. Nicholson, seeing at once an excited tone of voice. 'Mrs. Blackwell never sent that basque pattern, and Margaret after waiting here for several hours went away without touching the garment she came expressly to make.'

'I dec are!' exclaimed Mr. Nicholson, 'how isn't that too bad.'

'It won't, but too bad. You don't mean to say, you did'nt call at Mrs Blackwell's?'

There was an outflashing of indignation from the eyes of Mrs. Nicholson at the very thought.

'I do mean to say that very thing!' replied Mr. Nicholson, with some pettiness of manner. 'It is all my fault. What could I have been thinking about. I am very sorry indeed!'

'Sorry don't mend the matter!' retorted Mrs. Nicholson. 'It's a shame for you to do so. Here I've had Margaret waiting nearly all day, without being able to set a stitch in my basque, which I expected to wear tomorrow, and all because you did not choose to take the trouble to stop at Mrs. Blackwell's and ask her to send home the pattern I lent her.'

'Don't say, 'didn't choose,' my dear.'—Mr. Nicholson's countenance changed.

'It is just what I do say, and what I mean,' answered Mrs. Nicholson with blinding indignation. 'If you had cared a particle about my comfort or convenience, or had possessed the smallest inclination to obey me, you never would have neglected that small request. I have cause to be angry.'

'I'm very sorry,' said Mr. Nicholson.

'Oh, don't say sorry again!' Mrs. Nicholson interrupted. 'I hate the word, and have no faith in it. Sorry?'

Little May, with a half frightened look, drew her arms tightly around her father's neck, and laid her head down upon his bosom.

For some moments longer the indignant woman stormed; and then, as there was no re-action from her husband to keep alive the turbulent spirit that possessed her, her anger wasted its strength down to feebleness and silence.

The hush of sadness followed, as in all such cases, and tears succeeded to passion.

Mrs. Nicholson, after having poured out her vials of wrath, felt more unhappy than while bottling up her indignation. Not a word of angry retort had passed her husband's lips—he would have felt better if he betrayed some darker shades of feeling, and thus brought himself down nearer to the level upon which she had descended. But he only remained passive, with his loving little May clinging to his neck.

At tea time, but few words were exchanged by husband or wife. The cloud on Mary's spirit had nearly passed over, and she chattered away, and asked her usual score of childish questions.

After tea the gas was lighted over the centre table in the sitting-room, and Mrs. Nicholson sat down with her work-basket.

Little Mary had a box of painted paper toys, and amused herself with these talking to her father about them, and enjoying the interest he seemed to take in the curious figures they exhibited.

Very few words had been addressed by Mrs. Nicholson to her husband since they left the tea-table. What she said was of small moment, but the tones of her voice were subdued and timid, showing her repugnance and changed state of feeling.

"What a funny old woman," said little May to her father, laughing suddenly, in a merry voice, as she held out for his examination one of the pictures. Then, as if a new thought had crossed her mind, she left her chair, and climbed into her mother's lap, and commenced a close examination of her face. With eyes and fingers she searched it all over, in so curious a way, that both father and mother were amused as well as interested.

"What are you looking for, pet?" inquired the father.

The question seemed to confuse the child a little, and she left her mother's lap, and resumed her place at the table, with a perceptibly heightened colour.

"Say, darling, what were you looking for in my face?"

"For a wrinkle," answered little innocent, smiling yet flushing a deep crimson.

"A wrinkle!" The hand of Mrs. Nicholson passed with an involuntary movement over her face.

"A wrinkle?" Mr. Nicholson laughed out also. "What does little puss mean?"

Little puss, as her father often called her, threw an arch look upon her mother, and said:

"Don't you know what Aunt Mary read in the paper yesterday?"

"No, dear; what was it?"

"Why, that a wife gets a new wrinkle in her face every time she scolds her husband. And I wanted to see—"

The child's voice was lost in the merry laugh that wrung from her father's lips, as he caught her in his arms, and bore her with a triumphant air around the room.

"Well, pet," he said, as his merriment subsided, "you have a new wrinkle."

For a moment or two, Mrs. Nicholson was fluttered, as her face became all aglow from a quicker heart beat. But her perception of the ludicrous was strong, and her good sense a balancing quality, and she quickly joined in the merry laugh that was all at her expense.

"No there isn't a single wrinkle on her face," answered May positively.

"Nor shall one be seen there for twenty years to come," said Mrs. Nicholson, throwing a tender look upon her husband, "if no other cause should produce them."

May's bed time had come, and the child was borne away by her mother, who gave her many loving kisses ere she left her alone with the angels, who watch over sleeping children.

She said nothing about the wrinkles as she rejoined her husband, but there were merry twinkles in both their eyes, and right feelings in both their hearts.

Mrs. Nicholson, who is a handsome woman, and just a little vain of her beauty, has quite reformed her ways in the matter of scolding her husband. Those dangers attending that peculiar domestic recreation that she is unwilling to encounter.

Off Mit His Head.

A breathlessly excited individual says a late number of the San Francisco Morning Call, rushed into the police office yesterday and enquired for the chief.

'What do you want with him?' inquired an impassive officer.

'I vants,' said he with a teutonic accent, 'I vants one leper to kill a tam tog vot pites me in te leg.'

'Ah, you wish an order of exection issued against a vicious canine,' said the officer.

'No I tussant vant no such ting. I vants a leper to tell me to kill the tam pup. He pites my leg so bad, I have got to hire a hope and will kill him, or I goes mad too.'

'Ah, now I see,' said the impassive temperament, 'you require authority to proceed with force of arms against the vicious animal.'

'Mein got, no—dat ish not what I vants I vants to feel to give me license to kill te tog. I vants him to make me leper so ven I kills te tog he can nicht go inter de police court and swear against me.'

'The dog.'

'Nein—not te tog—the man vat owns te tog—you see if I kills him—'

'What the man?'

'Nein—te tog. Und the man suse me for te price of te tog, den I vants ter law on mein side, d'yer see?'

Oh, yes!' said the officer, who was quietly chuckling at the caution evinced by the German, and intent on exhausting his patience, 'then you want to get a warrant to arrest the man who owns the dog, so the animal may not again attack you.'

'No, no! got for tam,' you gits everything by the tail, cried leger beer, who began to think the officer was quizzing him. 'I tink you vant to make chokes of me. Tunder und blitzen! I vants shustice, not choke I vants to cut te tam tog's head off, and shustice will not give me a baper. I cuts his head off anyhow.'

And the lover of sourkrout started to leave the hall: but meeting the 'Jef ny Bolice' at the door, he conversed with him in the German dialect, made known his wants, and received an order to execute the vicious animal.

As he was going out, he met the impassive officer.

'All right?' he enquired.

'Yah, all right. I goes shtraight off to te owner of te dog und kills him.'

'What, the owner?'

'No te tog. You make one tam fool of yourself by saying tog ven I means man, and when I means man you say tog. Now you gone to te turn?' And the German incontinently hurried away to mete out vengeance to the animal who had crossed him in his 'glorious path.'

Miscellany.

THE CAMEL AND THE ARAB.—The Arab, his country, and his camel, are in wonderful harmony with each other. Without the camel, the deserts, which contain so many tribes of foemen, would be uninhabitable, and one can imagine the camel without the Arab as little as the Arab without the camel. Its large soft eye looks from under its long eyelashes at its master with an expression of recognition which one can hardly doubt is affection. He talks to it, and it seems to understand him; he sings, and it quickens its steps, reviving from the fatigues of the way. The genuine Arab never beats his camel; he guides it with his voice, or with a light wand touching one ear or the other to make it turn to the right or left, or gently tapping it on the crown of the head, which it instantly lowers, and breaks into an amble; or if he wishes it to go still quicker, he presses its shoulder with his bare heel.—Hamilton's Sinai, &c.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AS A REMEDY FOR DYSPEPSIA.—No one who has seen the effect of Holloway's Pills in cases of Dyspepsia, can believe for a moment that this depressing and dangerous disease is incurable. The patient who has suffered from it for years, whose strength, appetite, and cheerfulness, seem utterly gone; to whom life is a burden, and who has long ceased to hope for relief, may be radically cured by a course of this powerful stomachic and mild aperient. Hundreds of instances of this kind are on record.

CASH.—A contemporary asserts that "there is music in the ring of cash." That is so. There is not an attendant of the opera who will not acknowledge that the jingle of cash gives forth more harmony than a score of Verdi's scores. Cash! The word is cabalistic. It conjures by joys and generosities without number. It signifies independence!—glorious independence. It is a talismanic password by which we obtain entrance to life's most r fined and subtile luxuries, and the innermost temper of the world's humors!

DEPUTY HUSBAND.—In Utah, they have a way of appointing deputy husbands to look after matters and things when the genuine article has gone from home. We find the following notice of this singular practice in one of our exchanges:

"When a married man is called by conference to a foreign mission, he has the privilege, as they call it, before leaving home, of choosing some one to take the oversight of cattle, goods, and whatever he may possess, to provide for and overlook the family, and become the protempore husband of the wife. The ostensible reason for the arrangement, is to prevent the husband from "suffering any loss" during his absence on missionary labors, since the greatness of his future kingdom depends upon the number of children he has here. Carrying out the idea, the wife is handed over to a deputy husband, who maintains his position in the family till the husband's return."

A "SNOB."—Thackeray thus defines a snob:—A snob is that man or woman who is always pretending before the world, to be something better—especially richer—than others. He is one who thinks his position in life is contemptible, and is always yearning or striving to force himself into one above, without the education or character which belong to it. One who looks down and over rides all despises his inferiors, and even assails those of his own standing, and is ever ready to worship, and fall down before, and flatter a rich and titled man—not because he is a good man, a wise man, or a Christian man, but because he has the luck to to rich and consequential. Such snobbery is to be found in every heroine in the humble village, as well as in the great city. It has always existed, and probably always will exist—and all the sermons that can be preached against it, from now until the day of final doom, will not eradicate it from the land. It is a fixed institution, and, though hated and despised by all sensible people, whether rich or poor, there are thousands in the land who seem to have no higher ambition than to move in the circles of snobdom.

THINGS WISE AND OTHERWISE.—The ruin of a country is not the blight of corn—the weight and impetuosity of hailstones—it is not the inundation and storm—it is not pestilence and famine. A few years, perhaps a single one, may cover all traces of such a calamity; but that country is tostally ruined in which morals are lost, irretrievably to the greater part of the rising generation.

October.

Th. 29.—Battle of Fort Erie 1812. Sir Walter Raleigh a distinguished warrior, statesman and writer, in the reigns of Elizabeth, and James the first, was the second son of a gentleman of ancient family, in Devonshire. His active disposition and martial ardour, led him at the age of seventeen, to join a body of volunteers, to assist the French Protestants. He afterwards accompanied Sir Humphrey Gilbert, in a voyage to Newfoundland. He also distinguished himself in the Irish rebellion, and was rewarded with a considerable estate in Ireland. His favour at Court was greatly advanced by a well known act of gallantry; the Queen in a walk among a crowd of courtiers—came suddenly upon a miry spot in the path, when Raleigh immediately took off his rich plush cloak, and spread it on the ground, as a foot cloth. The State of Virginia was settled through an enterprise started by Raleigh, which was so named in honor of Queen Elizabeth. He is said to have introduced tobacco and potatoes into Europe. Upon the accession of James the first, he sought to limit the introduction of the Scots into England; and a conspiracy having been formed to place upon the throne, Lady Arabella Stuart, he was accused of participating in it, by Lord Cobham, and was convicted of high treason, he afterwards was reprieved and committed to the tower, where he remained for 12 years. He next planned another expedition to America, in which he attacked and took possession of the Spanish settlement of St. Thomas, for which he was again arrested, and James with his usual meanness and pusillanimity determined to execute him upon his former sentence, which was carried out, 1618. The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, OCTOBER 29, 1857.

MALDEN AND ANDERDON AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Township Fair and Show of the above named Society, took place on Thursday, the 15th inst., at the Government Store, and on the grounds adjoining.

The weather was favorable for the occasion, and the show was far superior to any ever held in Amherstburg, whether of the County or Township Societies.

The exhibition of Horses was large; the number of entries was ninety-three, among which were some superior animals, for carriage, Draught, and general purposes.

The entries in the Cattle Department number eighty-one, among which were several thorough-breds; the greater proportion, however, grades of the different breeds of Durhams, Ayrshires, and Devons. A few superior native Cows and Heifers were also shown.

The Sheep were well represented—most of them would do credit to any country; the number exceeded eighty.

The show of Pigs, although not very largely represented, exceeded that of other years both in number and quality.

In the Poultry department, there was a fair show.

In Seeds and Roots, the show was most excellent; the number of entries exceeded one hundred and twenty. Wheat, Barley, Beans, Corn, Potatoes, &c., were well represented.

The show in the Horticultural department was splendid; the number of entries were eighty-six. The Fruit of this department, more especially the Apples, would have made a creditable show even at the Provincial Fair. The entries of Apples numbered twenty-three, in which upwards of one hundred and seventy different kinds were represented. Of Pears, Peaches, Quinces and Grapes, the show was good.

The quantity of Cheese exhibited was small, but of excellent quality.

The show of Butter was superior, both as regards quantity and quality; the entries were twenty-four. The remarks of the Judges upon it were, that so excellent was the quality of each sample, that those persons who were unsuccessful in obtaining prizes, need not consider that their Butter was inferior to that of those who were successful, as it was almost impossible to decide which was the most deserving.

The Ladies' Department was well filled. Some very superior work was exhibited, both useful and ornamental.

The Home Manufactures were very good; the different Trades were represented by some very fine Buggies, Waggons, Cutters, Harnesses, Boots, Leather, Stoves, Ploughs, Tin and Copper Ware, Flour, &c.

It is to be regretted that the callings of the Cabinet-Maker, Joiner, Baker, Tailor, Hatter, &c., were not represented.

Upon the whole, the show went off well, and equalled, if it did not exceed the anticipations of the most sanguine friends of the Society.

The entries in all classes numbered upwards of six hundred.

ARRIVAL.—We are happy to notice the arrival here of Alexander Wilkinson, Esq., Provincial Land Surveyor, &c., who has been among the Gold Fields of California and Australia for the past seven years. Having left this, his native home, in the year 1850, for the regions of gold in California, where many other Sandwichites have also sought their fortunes. But finding that the climate there was not conducive to his health, he proceeded to Australia, where he remained until his departure for home. We are gratified to find him looking healthy and hearty, and none the worse for wear. It is his intention to make this his residence hereafter, and it is to be hoped that he will long be with us to enjoy the fruits of his labors in the diggins.

☞ We would direct the attention of our Amherstburg readers, to the advertisement in another column, of "The Great Southern Railway Contract." New Goods at reduced prices, at the store of F. A. Lafferty, can be relied on.

☞ From the Canada Gazette, we learn, that Major William G. Hall, (late 2nd Essex,) is appointed to be Lieutenant Colonel; and Lieutenant Colonel, Antoine B. Ouellette, is permitted to retire, retaining his rank.

The "Robinson Hall," London, has been closed, and its proprietor Mr Childs, incarcerated in Gaol for debt.—His effects being under a bill of sale to a merchant of that town have been seized.

BUFFALO Oct. 24

The shock of an earthquake was distinctly felt in all parts of our city yesterday p. m. I knocked over some chimneys, rung door bells, &c. No damage done.

Book Notices.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY: a Journal devoted to Literature, Arts, and Politics.—Vol. I., No. 1. Philips, Sampson & Co. Publishers, Boston.

If we may judge by the first number of what the merits of the work will be, we may safely assert that no other periodical of a similar description can compare with it. A work of this description has long been needed, to fill the space that has been left vacant, and each number contains a feast of reason that is rarely furnished in the periodicals of the present day—for, instead of the low, vulgar, and trashy stuff that is crammed into most of them, it contains that which is instructive, as well as highly interesting.

From the number of eminent literary characters who will contribute to the work, we cannot doubt but that the Atlantic Journal will prove attractive and popular, and take its place, as it deserves, at the head of the list of periodicals published upon this continent.

We copy a portion of the publishers' address, as an index of what the work will be:

"Heretofore learning has been considered synonymous with dulness, and a magazine spoken of as 'able and scholarly," was sure to be avoided by all who wished to be entertained. Many caterers for the public, therefore, to suit the popular taste, have vied with each other in lowering the tone of their periodicals, and to such a point, that thinking men, both writers and readers, have ceased to be interested in them. The publishers believe that there is no necessity for this; that true scholarship and culture may be combined with the utmost liveliness and sparkle, both in matter and style; and in this respect, they ask for the various articles in this number a careful and candid reading."

The Atlantic Monthly is for sale in all the cities and principal villages, by all Booksellers, newsmen and periodical dealers, or may be obtained by sending three dollars by mail to the publishers.

THE CANADIAN AGRICULTURIST.—The last two numbers of this truly valuable work are again upon our table, each of which contains a large amount of valuable reading matter, particularly attractive and instructive to the farmer, containing also the doings of the Provincial Fair.

Now that the winter is nearly upon us, many a long and tiresome evening will have to be passed, unless the farmer provides himself with a work suitable to his tastes and occupations, with which he may wile away the dreary hours, and that work is the "Canadian Agriculturist." Let the many valuable instructions therein be well digested during the long winter evenings, and they cannot fail to be of the utmost importance to the farmer in his future prosperity.

THE Chief Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada has favored us with a copy of his report for the year 1856. From it, we are happy to learn that great improvements have taken place under the working of our Common School system. That there is a healthy increase in the demand for libraries in schools, and that there is also, as a consequence, a large increase in the amount expended for school purposes.

While upon the subject of schools we cannot let the opportunity pass without making one remark upon our Common School system, as all who are connected with working it out complain, that it is so complicated and difficult to understand, that it is next to impossible for them to make any thing out of the school act. This is certainly to be regretted, as so many persons in the country have occasion to act under its provisions. Every thing connected with school matters, should be simplified in such a manner that every member of society, would be able without the assistance of legal gentlemen to explain the very dark passages that so frequently occur in the school act, very many of them, are so uncertain that even gentlemen learned in the Law are often puzzled in their construction.

If the Chief Suprintendent would only look after this matter, and devote a portion of his time to drawing up a simple and comprehendible act, he would then indeed, be conferring a boon upon the public, which would long be felt, and which would redound to his great credit.

JOHNSON'S DIRECTORY.—Johnson's Directory, of Detroit, has been presented to us by the gentleman whose name it bears; having been prepared by himself, with the utmost care, and the expenditure of no small amount of labor, we may safely say, that, it will prove itself a valuable source of information. The residences of all persons living within the limits of the City of Detroit are correctly given up to the present time. We would recommend it to all doing business in that City. To be had at the various Book Stores.

The New York Times says that the suffering of the poor in New York during the coming winter will be intense and memorable. Hundreds of laborers and mechanics are now out of employment with every probability that their number will be greatly increased soon, and no prospect of their getting work or food, except by charity, until the spring. Is it better in Toronto? What provisions are our benevolent and charitably disposed making to relieve the wants of the indigent and unemployed there during the coming gloomy season?

The commercial panic is already causing a great falling off in the United States revenue. But the New York Herald says that the administration will not call for a loan to meet a deficiency in the receipts, but will exercise the utmost economy in the public expenditure. Reductions will be made in the army, navy, coast survey, lighthouse and mail steamship services, and the abolition of the fishing bounties will probably be recommended. An increase of the tariff will not be recommended, except upon tea, sugar and coffee.

The New York Herald says:—"Out of the thousands of banks existing throughout the Union, there is at this moment only one specie paying bank—the Chemical Bank, of New York." The same paper says, the United States Government will soon be a borrower in the market for $10,000,000.

Fire at Chicago--Great Loss of Life.

A fire of an unusual magnitude occurred at Chicago on Monday morning last, destroying property to the amount of $700,000, and still worse, sacrificing some fifteen lives.

About half-past three o'clock on Monday morning the fire broke out in the business block 109 and 111 South Water street, thence spreading to right and left, and extending across the alley to the Lake street front of the block, until twelve stores of the first class, four and five stories high, and filled from cellar to roof with valuable wares and merchandise, were laid in smouldering heaps of rubbish. The papers state that it is in sad, but too painfully strong evidence that the fire was caused by carelessness or drunken recklesness of the participants in a drunken debauch of clerks, and the abandoned females they had made their companions and associates in a Sabbath night's revel. During the course of the fire it was deemed advisable to clear the store occupied by Messrs Barnum, as a variety store, and a large force of men, firemen and others, were aiding in the removal of the goods. Number of firemen and citizens were upon the roof. Probably at one time not less than two hundred persons were within and upon the building. In was thought that the store was comparatively safe, doubtless those who so fearlessly rushed in had no thought of peril. Suddenly a fearful crash announced a new phase of the calamity. The heavy and towering wall of the adjoining store had fallen outward upon the roof of Barnum's establishment, and had carried all before it to the basement. Firemen and citizens, wall, roof and merchandise, with the burning ruins from the store adjoining, all mingling, fell. A fearful scene of terror and dismay ensued. The portion of the wall left standing had fortunately preserved the front portion of the store which was densely thronged by a confused crowd. Many of them were prostrated by the flying missiles, many were trampled and bruised in the flight of their companions, but soon all was clear for a space extending about thirty feet from the front. The store was very deep, and for nearly two-thirds of its whole length, the building was a mass of ruins, now beginning to burn briskly, as the flames conveyed in the fall, hasted to feed on the wood-work and the light and combustible portions of the ware.

The following are the names of those whose bodies have been found in the ruins, and of those whose property has been consumed:—

THE AMERICAN RACE HORSES IN ENGLAND—The American race horses were again signally, if not indeed shamefully, defeated at Chester races, just before the Europia sailed. The Illustrated News, which is generally very complimentary to America, says:—"A clever victory of Saunterer, and the hopeless defeat of Prioress at Chester, have been the noticeable features of the week's racing. The winner is a remarkably unattractive, sprawling style of animal, and different in this respect to Lecomte and Prior, the American horses. The American trio have now been stripped at five meetings, with the most discouraging result, though Mr. Tenbroeck still hopes on with his Babylon, the only American horse left to be beaten." If the American horses ran in good form—and their condition seems not to have been questioned—American racers are unquestionably, at present, at least, behind the English. Their time system, upon which they relied so much, has totally misled them: for not one race in a dozen in England is run as fast as it might be—wind, rain, dust and mud obviously affecting the horses, and preventing fast time. Certainly the American horses ran as fast as they could, and they were the fastest of their country, and still they were "nowhere" in England, though, if their time in America was to be taken as the standard, English horses must have been fairly distanced. The race horse speculation has been a bad one for Jonathan, and will not soon be repeated. —Colonist.

The Meeting of Alexander and Napoleon.

The interest of the foreign news of the week, centres in the meeting of the Emperors at Stuttgardt. Not an inkling has appeared to show the object of the meeting, the topics which were discussed, or the effect if any, which the meeting is likely to have on the future of Europe. Perhaps there was nothing in it beyond cementing that feeling of good nature which springs more or less out of personal intimacy. The representatives of the press flocked to the capital of Wurtemburg in great numbers, but their mission was a failure. They could tell exactly the circumstances under which the great personages met, the costumes which each wore, how the folding doors were thrown open on a given signal from the King who introduced France to Russia, and the other small gossip of the Court Circular, but beyond this, all is vague speculation. It was the same in Paris during the time the European Congress was sitting. Not a circumstance transpired on which reliance could be placed, until a serreptitious copy of the treaty, fraudulently obtained, astonished the public one fine morning in the columns of a London paper. A letter, written from Paris, gives the following version of the motive which induced the meeting, and it seems as feasible as many that have been offered:—"The present Czar is bent on promoting the commercial prosperity of his vast empire; he desires to develope trade, to cultivate the land, and to construct Railways in Russia; to extend commercial enterprise and to fall into the tide of European improvement and progress. I am told that Russia for many years will confine her warlike operations to Circassia; whilst a further reduction of the army will take place on a large scale. With regard to the views of the Emperor Napoleon, I am informed from those who never yet deceived me, that the ruler of France is equally pacific, and is bent on creating confidence between the two Powers." The meeting of the Emperors of Russia and Austria, brought about through the intervention, it is said, of the King of Prussia, seems to intimate that the Czar is at present disposed to be friendly, and to forget old differences.

Arrival of the Baltic.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.

The "Baltic," with dates from Liverpool to the 14th, arrived here yesterday, bringing £72,000 sterling, and 160 passengers.

The American ship "Lexington" was totally lost near Venetia.

INDIA.—Later dates from India have been received at London by telegraph from the overland mail. Calcutta dates are to the 10th, and Bombay to the 17th September.

The siege train was expected to reach Delhi on the 3rd of September, when the assault would be commenced.

General Havelock remained at Cawpore, but would be reinforced in a few days by General Outram, who had reached Allahabad with a strong force.

The garrison at Lucknow was gallantly holding out, and would be relieved by the middle of September.

Lord Elgin had left Calcutta for China.—The China mail failed to connect with the overland mail at Ceylon.

The despatches from India state that Gen. Nicholson had defeated the rebels at Majabghar, with the loss of their guns. General Havelock has also defeated the rebels near Bithoor. On the 16th of August, the garrison at Lucknow made a gallant and victorious sortie, capturing the guns of the mutineers, and also a supply of provisions. The Singnapore mutineers had been again defeated by Major Eyre. The rebels were threatening Allahabad and Benares. Large bodies of Troops were marching from Calcutta towards Allahabad. Troops were also arriving at Calcutta from England—their transport having been effected with great rapidity.

A despatch to the London "Post" says that the British forces had attacked Lucknow Castle, spiked the guns, and inflicted a heavy loss upon the enemy.

AUSTRALIA.—The steamer "Red Jacket," from Australia, had arrived at Southampton with 70,000 ounces of gold.

THE MONEY MARKET.—An excessive money pressure prevailed in London, and a further advance in the rate of discount by the Bank of England is anticipated Consols have fluctuated greatly. They declined to 86½ but subsequently rallied.

The Bank of Dublin has advanced its rate of discount to 7 per cent, and the Bank of France to 6½ per cent.

The money pressure in Vienna is also severe.

The firm of Ross, Mitchell, & Co., a Canadian firm in London, had failed. Their liabilities were £250,000, but their assets were large.

J. Monteith & Co., and other Glasgow firms had also suspended, with liabilities to large amounts.

FRANCE.—The military camp at Chalons had been raised.

A meeting between the Emperors of France and Austria is still talked about.

SPAIN.—The Ministerial crisis at Madrid continued. Bravo Murillo had refused to form one of the minority of the Cabinet, and anticipations of further disturbances were entertained.

PRUSSIA.—The King of Prussia was slightly better, but his condition is still very critical.

THE CZARWITCH CUP.—Thirty-four horses run for the Czarwitch Cup, and the first trial resulted in a dead heat between Prioress, Elakhem, and Queen Bess. On the deciding heat, Prioress, the American horse. won by a length and a half, amidst great cheering. The value of the stakes exceeds £2,000.—The American horse Lecompte is dead.

Further by the Europa.

Halifax, Oct. 21, 1857.

FRANCE—The American crisis was severely felt at Paris, owing to the delay in remittances. Money was in great demand, and the prospect was that the Bank of France would have to rescind its recent measures of relaxation, if not raise the rates of discount.

Rumours were current of an approaching conference at Paris on the Danish question, affairs of Italy, the union of the Principalities and a general reduction of European armaments.

Reliable accounts of the meeting of the crowned heads of Europe leave no doubt that one of the principal objects thereof is the reduction of standing armies in order to ease the financial position of their respective countries, the increasing difficulties, of obtaining loans rendering reduction of expenditure indispensable.

Two speculators on the Bourse have disappeared, leaving deficits of 3,000,000 and 1,800,000 francs respectively.

SPAIN—No official intelligence has been received that the Queen had accepted the resignation of the Narvaez Cabinet.

It was said that Gen. de Mirasol had been nominated Captain General of Cuba, but the decree has not been in the official gazette

The project for the union of the two branches of the Bourbon family was under discussion in Paris quarters.

LATEST. Madrid, Oct. 5.

The journals fully confirm the acceptance by the Queen of the resignation of the Narvaez Cabinet.

HOLLAND—The bank of Holland has raised its rate of discount to 5½ per cent.

AUSTRIA—The Vienna correspondent of the "Tim s" says it was credibly reported that direct commun cation was about to be established between Trieste and New York by means of Lloyd's steamers.

The financial pressure was still very severe in Vienna. A stock exchange jobber had blown his brains out. Another had disappeared leaving deficiencies to the extent of £25,000, and numerous small failures had occurred.

PRUSSIA—The King of Saxony had paid a visit to the King of Prussia, and it was considered that this was the last of the royal interviews for the season.

The Bank of Prussia has again raised its rate of discount, which now stands at the rate of 6½ per cent.

The solemn entry of Prince Frederick William of Prussia, and the Princess Royal of England, into Berlin, after their marriage, is fixed for February 23rd. Great preparations are making for imposing ceremonies.

A telegraphic despatch in the "Times" dated Berlin, Friday evening, says, the health of the King of Prussia has been rapidly getting worse during the last twenty-four hours, and the fears were entertained for his life. All the members o. the royal family were at Potsdam.

ITALY—A reduction of 25 per cent on the export duty on hemp had been decreed in the Pontifical States.

The trial of the parties engaged in the recent insurrectionary attempts in Italy commenced on the 28th of September at Palermo.

RUSSIA—The "Times" Paris correspondent is informed that negotiations have been opened at St. Petersburgh for the conclusion of the treaty of commerce between Russia and Austria.

Two Russian steamers and four gunboats had disembarked troops in Abasa, who had burned a bazaar and destroyed shipping—The loss sustained by Fatsoud is 500,000 francs.

The Russian Government has inflicted a severe punishment on the parties who violated the graves of the English and French in the Crimea.

The Russian Minister of Marine officially reports in regard to the loss of the line-of battle-ship "Lefort," that she was laid on her side and foundered in a few minutes, and all on board perished, including the commander, 12 officers, and 743 seamen, 53 women and 27 children. The ship went down in 30 f thoms of water.

The same storm had caused many other disasters and much loss of life in various parts of the Baltic.

TURKEY.—The p rt of Galatz has been very nearly destroyed by fire.

The financial situation of the country does not improve. Paper money has fallen in value to the extent of twenty per cent.

The Commission for settling the Turko Russian frontiers in Asia, has concluded its labors, and the English and French Commissioners arrived at Constantinople on the 27th September.

PERSIA—The insurrectionary movements in Persia, of which exaggerated accounts were given, have been put down.

INDIA—There is nothing later. The steamer "Indus" with the heavy portion of the last Indian mail had arrived at Southampton. She had nearly £400,000 in Australian gold on board.

The passengers report that Nena Sahib had resolved not to fall alive into the hands of the English. He has a body guard who are engaged to deprive him of his life should he be likely to be taken prisoner.

Between Cawnpore and Lucknow there were about 35,000 mutineers, and it was considered doubtful whether Sir J. Outram would be successful in passing up the river Gojra. The river was lined with forts, well manned with mutineers.

The passengers say that almost the only man who escaped the massacre at Cawnpore had gone raving mad. When they left Calcutta, only 3,000 troops had arrived there since the outbreak.

It was believed by many at Calcutta that when some English troops arrive out, the mutiny will suddenly cease, and the Sepoys will bring money and treasures and lay down their arms. They are in much terror of English soldiers.

CHINA—Letters from Paris say that the Viceroy, Yeh, had issued a proclamation to the inhabitants of the Southern Provinces of China.

Yeh attributes the departure of the English regiments for Calcutta to the alarm created by his military preparations, and by the view of his army, which is as numerous as the leaves of the forest.

Yeh adds that the new Chinese fleets will soon appear and scatter the barbarian vessels. The proclamation concludes by proposing fresh taxes for the maintenance of the imperial troops.

AFRICA—Late dates from the west Coast of Africa have been received in England.

A slaver with 191 slaves on board, had been captured by the British steamer "Antelope" off Mijdah.

Ireland.

A fine bottle-nose whale was killed last week in Belfast Lough, by the crews of two cutters belonging to the guardship.

The Freeman's Journal announces that, on Wednesday the 7th inst, the citizens of Dublin will inaugurate the the Mo.to statue.

Various serious cases of destruction of farm property by incendiarism in the county of Tyrone are reported in the local papers, and are attributed to the operations of the Ribbon Society.

Whoever has reason to complain of the hardness of the times, the Irish farmer is not that person. At Cashel, butter sold at 115s per cwt.; and Mr. Gubbings, stockmaster of Kilrush, has just refused for 103 bullo ks the large sum of £2,600.

A public meeting was held in Dublin, on the 25th, the lord mayor presiding, at which resolutions were passed in favor of the appointment of a committee to collect subscriptions for the sufferers by the Indian mutiny. The Lord Lieutenant heads the list with a subscription of £100.

The Lord Lieutenant has issued a proclamation remodeling the Cork Court of Conscience, at which the mayor or his deputy shall preside. The retiring judges of that Court, Messrs. Gibbings and Bernard, require an annual superannuation of £176. The Mayor has the appointment of a deputy, whose salary and emoluments will amount to £300 a-year.

A robbery of a daring and extensive character was committed on Sunday night last, in the residence of Julius M'Cullicudy, Esq., J.P., Clinton-lodge, Kilforglin, county Kerry. The robber, who is, or the robbers, who are, as yet unknown, carried away the sum of £200 in gold and notes, together with a valuable case of pistols and manuscript documents of a valuable character and important nature.

Delhi.

PROSPECTS OF THE SEIGE.

An officer of the Bengal artillery, in a letter dated 13th August, writes cheeringly of the prospects:—"Our position here is certainly by nature a wonderfully secure one, and if the pandies could not have found a better place than Delhi as the head quarters of the mutiny, with an unlimited magazine at their disposal, I doubt if we could have been as well off myself and Providence has assisted us in every way; from the beginning the weather has been most propitious, and in cantonments I have never seen troops so healthy as they are here now. Cholera occasionally pays us a visit, but that must always be expected in a large standing camp. The river Jumna completely protects our left front and flank, while the large jueel (water course) which runs away to the south west is at this season quite impassible for miles, and prevents any surprise on our right flank, so that a few cavalry are sufficient as regards our three faces of our position, and we are consequently enabled to devote our whole force to keep our front from surprise; and to do this whenever we are attacked in any force takes almost every available man in camp. At a moderate calculation the enemy must muster now nearly 40,000 men, besides guns unlimited, and they certainly work them well; their infantry also fight well, but their cavalry, both regular and irregular, are not worth one sixpence; they do nothing but run away.

"Of all the infantry regiments here, the most distinguished is the 60th Rifles; they and the gallant little Goorkas in the Sirmore Batralion have borne the brunt of the whole affair, and suffered fearfully; after them come the 1st Fusiliers and Guides.—This morning we surprised a battery they had recently erected rather too near our picketts, and in such a position that our heavy guns could not bear on it, so it was decided to carry it by assault. The 1st Fusileers and Coke's Punjaub Rifles (also a fine corps) did the business well, each regiment capturing two guns. We always suffer immensely in officers. A third of our number have been killed or wounded in the two months, besides which cholera has carried off several; however, we shall soon bring the business to an end. Tomorrow a reinforcement under Nicholson comes in, consisting of one thousand European infantry and about the same number of natives, and a second c ass siege train has left Ferozepore en route to this. Whether Sir Patrick Grant arrives or not, as soon as the train comes, we shall I hope, go in. Having waited so long, it is better perhaps to finish up well by shelling the town for several days and making a decent breach. All agree that taking it by assault is out of the question, and our batteries, on account of the great height of the glacis, will have to be advanced so close that a practicable breach will be made in a day or two after we commence, so there will be no delay when once we have the train. I do so long to see the inside of this hateful place. It has been proved without a doubt that the King's son shot several European men and women with his own hand, yet even with this there are some people who talk of a pardon for the poor misguided king and his family. I only trust all the women and children will have been removed, for once inside few will be spared; it will be an extraordinary day for prize money, for the whole of the pandies only wait to fight, but I sometimes think the greater part will be off with the plunder they have got, and we shall have to follow them up somewhere else."

GENERAL HAVELOCK AND THE MUTINEERS.

The following telegram, which contains more precise intelligence respecting the latest operations of the force under General Havelock, was received by the Bombay government from Poonah, on the 31st of August:

"We have news from Cawnpore dated the 18th inst. On the 16th General Havelock engaged the rebels about 12 miles from Cawnpore. Two guns were taken.—Captain Mackenzie and fifteen men were wounded; none killed.

"The troops were very hard worked.—The cholera was bad; fourteen men and Lieutenant Campbell, of the 78th Highlanders, had died of it.

"The last accounts from Lucknow were dated the 14th of August and reported 'all well.'"

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature.

The Laws regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent, with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments at any expiration of the society, or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of Share -	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years	96.
Total - - -	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.
And for three years - - 6.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of wearing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each share.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principles of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, theliver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic: they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible aperients. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

Pope was but a merchant's son,
And Howard was a grocer;

Mirth and Wit.

"Maria," said a lady to her colored chambermaid, "that is the third silk dress you have worn since you came to me; pray, how many do you own?"

"Only seven, Miss; but I's saving my wages to buy me another."

"Seven? What use are seven silk dresses to you? Why, I don't own so many as that," "Spect not miss," said the smiling darkey; "you dusen't need 'em so much as I does. You see your quality; white folks every body knows is quality; but we better most kind of colored pussons has to dress smart to 'stinguish ourselves from common niggars."

So, critics, who denounce the present extravagant style of dress, be lenient! and when the paraphernalia of hoops and flounces, silks, velvets, and laces is very astounding, think—well, poor things! they must be something to 'stinguish themselves from common folks.

If you wished to be relieved from a rash promise of marriage, breath vows of love continually after eating onions.

When a Baltimore lady is kissed she says she is taking chloroform and remains insensible as long as the operation lasts.

The latest way to pop the question is to ask a fair lady if you can have the pleasure of seeing her to the minister's.

"My dear," said a wife to her husband, "did you ever read of the plague of London?" "No, I don't want to read of it; it is enough to have a plague in my own house.

"Pompy, de corn's up." "De corn up! Why I only planted it yesterday." I know dat, but de hogs got in last night, and guv it a lift you hadn't counted on.—Yah, ya."

What fish may be said to be out of place? —Ans.—A perch in a bird's cage; a sole at the bottom of your foot; a mussell in a lady's neck.

"Now, put that right back where you took it from!" as the girl said when her lover snatched a kiss.

The man who was "moved to tears" complains of the dampness of the premises, and wishes to be moved backed again.

A horse dealer describing a used up horse said he looked "as if he had been editing a daily newspaper"

"What's the best attitude for self defence?" asked a pupil of a well-known pugilist. Keep a civil tongue in your head," was the reply.

"I know by a little what a great deal means," as the grocer said when he saw the tip of a fox's tail sticking out of a hollow tree.

If a pair of stockings are hose, is a single stocking a hoe? If a pair of glasses are spectacles, is one a spectacle? And if so is it not a bad shot for a sight?

"Nobody ever lost anything by love, said a sage looking person. "That's not true," said a lady, who heard the remark, "for I once lost three night's sleep."

What utility is there in killing hogs, if they are cured directly afterwards?

More pleasing than slow drops that sparkle upon the roses, are tears that pity gathers upon the cheek of beauty.

Why is a lover, eloping with his lady-love, like a vessel sailing to a certain port in France? Because he is bound to have her (Havre).

Why is a woman in love like a man of profound knowledge? Because she understands the arts and sigh ences.

Manuring, Rains, Droughts, &c.

It is obvious, from the remarks which we meet with occasionally, both in conversation & in reading, that there is not as yet anything approaching to a general or at least a universal agreement among farmers as to the proper depth for a natural tendency of most manurial matters was to sink into the soil, or even to leach away, and that, therefore, they should be applied at the surface or within a few inches of it. The one party fix their attention upon the risk of loss by evaporation, and the other on the risk of loss of the fertilizing substances, by their soaking away beyond the reach of the roots and spongioles of plants; and by unguiding one or other of these risks, and shutting out of view or under estimating the opposite one, the existing differences of opinion on the subject are the result.

Moderate or judicious men, on either side, will be ready to admit, we presume, that plants will be most benefited by manures which give out their strength in the stratum of the soil containing the largest amount of rootlets and spongioles. As the depth at which the greatest mass of these feeding mouths is to be found differs in different plants, so ought the depth at which the fertilizers of these different plants may be most advantageously deposited. Those fertilizers which depend mainly on water for dissolving them, or preparing them to be taken up by the feeding mouths of the rootlets, should be placed a little above the level where the bulk of the small roots is to be found; and those, again, which depend mainly on heat to evolve their ammonia, or other fertilizing constituents, in a gaseous form, should be placed a little below the level of the mass of roots, so that, in each case, the strength of the several fertilizing substances would have to pass through the stratum in which the largest quantity of feeding mouths is usually located.

The above consideration may do some thing to harmonize the existing differences of opinion and practices upon this subject. There is yet another consideration which it might be well to ponder in connection with these differences. Nature has provided both for the descent and the ascent of all the dissolved portion of whatever fertilizing matter there may be in the soil. When the surface is saturated with moisture, the dissolved food of plants descends, and when the surface is dried by heat, then the liquid which is evaporated by the soil, and by the plants upon it, brings up with it whatever dissolved material matter the rains had carried down. Nature, in this way, has provided for a constant circulation, upwards and downwards, of whatever fertilizing matter may be already at any time dissolved and ready for the use of plants. Hot days and droughts bring it up, rains carry it down, and so the roots catch a share, whether passing upwards or downwards.—Country Gentleman.

REMEDY FOR WORMS ON HOP VINES.—Noticing in the Country Gentleman, of the 13th Aug., an inquiry into the nature of the various worms which infest the vine, and a remedy for their destruction, I give you an experiment which I tried last spring, and thus far has proved quite effectual. My hop-vines are trained, and run upon lattice-work frames from the ground. Last spring before the vines made their appearance, I prepared a whitewash with a small proportion of corrosive sublimate, and gave them a thorough washing with the mixture; having examined the vines constantly, and have not been able thus far to discover a single worm. For the last two or three seasons I have been very much annoyed by them. My vines appear much more thrifty, and more prolific, and there is a decided improvement in their appearance. The remedy is so simple and so easily tried, that it is worthy the attention of a trial. I shall continue it from year to year, as long as I meet with the same results.

CURING HAMS.—Rub salt all over them as soon as cut and laid on a table; the next day brush it off and pack in a cask; put on a pickle made as follows:—1 quart salt to 1 gallon water; to 9 gallons water 4 gallon molasses and 3 ounces saltpetre. Let the hams remain in six or eight weeks, according to size. Smoke to suit, and pack away in salt in a cask, and put in a cool dry place, and they will keep good all summer.

Market gardeners have two methods of trenching their lands; when both soil and subsoil are poor, to a great depth, they turn the surface under, and fetch up a fresh spit from below; but when the subsoil is poor, or strong clay, they fast and trench it, as they term it, throwing the surface spit forward and always keeping it uppermost, digging the subsoil with the fork in the trench, without bringing it to the surface.

CURE FOR POLL EVIL.—Take a 25 lb. white lead keg, cut off one end so as to have the hoops on the other; also have ready what by some is termed a twitch, and a piece of rope tied so as to slip over the horse's nose in such a manner that he shall be unable to put his foot to the ground. Then take two quarters of soft soap, put it into an iron kettle, heat it to the boiling point, and pour it into the aforesaid keg. Now tie three or four thicknesses of stout cotton cloth over the open end, and the twitch on the nose loop over the knee. Let one man hold the horse by the twitch, another turn the keg of soap bottom upwards on the poll, and hold it there from three to four minutes. Three or four applications are sufficient, and your horse will be well.—Rural American.

FIELD MICE.—The most effectual way to prevent depredations by fieldmice, is clean culture. If you leave no grass, weeds, rubbish, heaps of brush or stones around the garden or orchard, the mice will not trouble you. A good old plan, also, is to tread the snow after falling.

PICKLED CABBAGE.—Slice red cabbage very thin; put on it a little coarse salt, and let it rest 24 hours to drain; add sliced onions if you like them. Boil four spoonfuls pepper and four of allspice in a quart of vinegar, and pour it over.

HYDROPHOBIA IN MAN.—"J. B. N." recommends that the bitten party should be immediately re-vaccinat d. [There died, a few years ago, in the county of Essex, a bee-keeper keeper, who cured himself of hydrophobia. The sign of his public house was called "The Mad Dog." He was frequently offered a thousand pounds for the receipt, but he died without leaving the secret behind him.] J. B. N.

FOR BURNS.—Apply cotton wool dipped in oil as soon as possible, and keep it on till the fire is entirely out, which will usually take from two days to a week.

AGRICULTURE IMPROVING CLIMATES.—The London Engineer says: "Drainage and shelter are the principal works which have hitherto been instrumental in improving the climate of this country; and the change which has been effected by them in some districts is such, that vegetation is now further advanced in April than it formerly was on the 1st of May. In other words, the climate throughout the year is not only greatly improved, but vegetation in Spring is from fourteen days to a month earlier, while results in harvest are still more favorable to the husband-man."

REMEDY FOR CHOLIC IN HORSES.—One of our readers says, that a pint of salt dissolved in a pint of hot water, and a quart of vinegar then added, and about half the quantity given, will cure the most inverate case of cholic. Should not the first dose effect a cure, let the remaining half be given, and the cure will be certain. He says he has seen this remedy tried in a number of cases, and always with success.

GREEN'S

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighbouring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

'Tis the Last of My Lovers.

RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED TO A FLIRT.

AIR:—"'Tis the last Rose of Summer."

'Tis the last of my lovers
That is now before me;
He sues for my hand
On his bended knee:
I've rejected all others,
One by one they have gone,
And with this horrid fellow
I am left all alone.

He begs for my trinkets,
My form and my face;
He wants all my dresses,
My heart and my lace:
He sues for my hand,
Which he thinks very fair,
But he looks at some jewels
That now are placed there.

He thinks me very handsome,
[I admire his taste;]
He says with such compliments
His time he wont waste—
Shall I take him?—reflect him?
Oh! what shall I do?
I hate him!—that's certain—
[And an old maid too!]

He is handsome, accomplished,
But foppish and vain,
But then his moustaches—
Why, they'd set me insane—
They're the handsomest, really,
I e'er seen in my life—
I won't be an old maid!
So I must be a wife!

The Thirteenth Chime.

A LEGEND OF OLD LONDON.

'Is my part of the job, Priest, it is a well-laid scheme—I think it many prosper.'

'It must,' answered the priest; 'but the sun hath passed the meridian, it is not time thou wert on thy way homeward?'

'Marry you say true,' exclaimed the other, 'and I will plot my share in the matter as I ride.'

'Do so,' said the priest, 'and farewell.'

In five minutes Capt. Wyckhamme, attended by two yeomen of his troop, was spurring down Ludgate Hill on his way westward—while Father Francis, enveloped in his cowl, paced slowly and thoughtfully back to the cathedral. The people made way for him reverently and bowed low; plus the father had the reputation of being rich in the odour of sanctity, and many counted themselves happy in his 'Benedicite.'

The hours passed away and it became night—a fair, calm, summer's night in which the moon and stars seemed striving to outshine each other. A deep hush was upon London. The last of the crew of 'prentices, who had been whiling away the lengthened twilight by a noisy game of football in Cheapside, had been summoned within doors by his vigilant master, and the streets were left to the occasional home returning revel ler, who either passed along with tipsy gravity, or made the old houses ring with snatches of the drinking songs which still buzzed in his ears. The stately mass of old Paul's rose majestically above all humbler tenements, steeped in a flood of moonshine —its quaint carvings and sculptured pinnacles here standing out clear and palpable in the starry air, and there broken by broad masses of deep black shadow.

It was near the hour of midnight when the light figure of a woman closely muffled in its drapery, glided cautiously and timidly along the quiet pavement, and tripped up the steps towards one of the side entrances of the cathedral. The door of a chapelry, from which admittance might be had into the main portion of the building, was open. As she crossed the threshold the damp chill of the air, so different from the genial atmosphere without, made her pause. It was but for a moment, and then she entered the cathedral. It was an awfully solemn place. No work of man's hands could be more grand; its shadowy vastness seemed not of the earth. The eye could only dimly trace its proportions by the gorgeously colored light admitted by the painted glass, and imagination supplied the rest. Here were the vast clustered pillars, the echoing aisles, the groined and arched magnificence of the roof, and over all a silence like the silence of the dead; the intruder crossed her arms upon her bosom for the place was chill,—and the next moment Mabel Lorne knelt before the shrine of the Virgin. She had hardly passed a minute in devotion when a heavy hand was laid upon her shoulder; with a fluttering heart she started to her feet, and beheld the face of Father Francis dimly seen close to hers.

'Father!' she exclaimed.

'Daughter!' returned the priest, in a voice trembling with passionate eagerness, for he thought he had his victim in his clutch, 'thou must go with me,' at the same instant, before she could make a motion to prevent him, he slipped a kerchief prepared for the purpose over the lower part of her face and she was unable to utter a sound.

'Come, sweet one, come!' said Father Francis, in a low tremulous voice, as he attempted to seize her arm and waist. Surprise and despair, however, gave Mabel strength—making a frantic effort, she freed herself from the rude grasp and fled. Uttering a muttered imprecation, the priest pursued, but his flowing robes hindered his progress. With a reeling bend, and almost insensible of what she did, Mabel flew over the pavement; she tried to make for the door, but her confusion was too great to enable her to discover it, she heard the footsteps of the priest close to her, and fled unwitting whither she went.

'Ha! now I have thee,' panted the monk, as the fugitive appeared driven into a corner of the building, and he made a plunge forward to grasp her. He was disappointed. A low-browed door stood open in the wall leading to a spiral stone staircase, and up it she flew like the wind. As Mabel put her foot upon the first step—a loud clang ran through the cathedral—it was the first chime of twelve struck by the great clock. Up—up—up went pursuer and pursued. Fear gave unnatural swiftness to Mabel, and she rushed upwards—round and round the spiral staircase—as though her feet felt not the stone steps. The priest was close behind—with clenched teeth and glaring eyes; maddened by passion and disappointment, he made desperate efforts to overtake his victim, and sometimes Mabel heard his loud pantings close behind her. Up they went, higher and higher; gyrations of stairs seemed endless, and all the while the clock rang slowly out the iron chimes of midnight.—The place was dark, but there was nothing to impede one's progress; and here and there bars of white moonlight shining through loopholes, checquered the gloom. Up! up! higher and faster—but Mabel felt that her limbs were failing her—she made one more effort—one frantic bound, and lo! she saw above her, in a space on which the moonbeams fell, the complicated works of the great clock. She had no breath to raise an alarm which could be heard by those below. She listened to the rapidly mounting footsteps of the priest, and her heart sank with in her. Just then the great iron hammer which struck the hours, rang the last stroke of twelve upon the bell. A thought darted like lightning through Mabel's brain,—she might make that iron tongue speak for her. Gliding through the machinery, she mounted among its framework, and grasping the hammer with both hands, she strained every nerve and muscle of her body, raised it, and slowly raising the ponderous weight let it fall upon the bell, and lo! with a clang which rung through her very brain—THE THIRTEENTH CHIME fell upon the sleeping city. Breathless was the priest preparing to seize her, when the peal for a moment arrested his hand. He looked up—there stood the gentle creature amid the throbbing mechanism—her white hands convulsively clasping the iron, and her face distorted with fatigue. The moonlight showed him all this and showed him moreover the hammer again moving, and the muscles grew rigid. The danger of his position immediately flashed across him,—he knew that there were many within the chapels and cells attached to the cathedral, sleepless watchers of the hours—and he feared that the unusual number of chimes would attract immediate attention. Muttering a deep curse, he turned, and Mabel heard him hurrying down the staircase. Cautiously she followed, and on reaching the bottom, heard his voice communing with a brother monk.

'I am certain,' said the latter, 'that the clock struck thirteen.'

'So I deemed, brother Peter,' replied the low tones of the monk; 'and I have come forth to enquire how it could be so.'

Cautiously keeping in the shadow, Mabel glided past the speakers; she saw the door opposite her, and flew towards it. As she fled, Father Francis caught a glimpse of her retreating form, and made a wild gesture of rage and disappointment. The next moment Mabel was in the open air, and was soon locked and bolted in her own little room.—Sinking on the floor, she cried bitterly, and then rising she said 'I have no friends here —with the first blush of the morning I will procure a good palfrey, and fare forth to Windsor. Mark must know all.'

A bright breezy morning had succeeded the fair calm night, and the sun was yet low in the horizon, when Mabel Lorne, mounted upon a spirited palfrey, left behind her the western outskirts of London, and pushed merrily on through green fields and hedges in the direction of Windsor. Sorely disquieted as she had been by the events of the past night, the joyous influence of the early morning, the cool breeze, the bright sunshine, the rapid motion through a fair country, and, above all, the thought of meeting her lover, made Mabel's cheeks bloom, and her eyes sparkle. She caressed the glancing neck of the bounding animal which carried her, and the animal answered the touch of its mistress by a short and joyful neigh, and pressed merrily and speedily onward; and away they went amid leafy hedgerows sparkling with dewdrops and fields of rich rustling corn: and by clumps of gnarled old trees, and jangles of sprout ing sedges, and sometimes near a thatched old farm houses; and manorial halls embosomed in ancestral trees; and the peaceful walls of distant monasteries. And the smoke was beginning to rise from men's dwellings, in long spiral columns into the clear morning air; and laboring people were already afield, and now and then the fair traveller caught a glimpse of the broad river, with green trees bending over its waters, and sedges upon its banks, and swans floating upon its bosom. Everything looked calm, and bright, and happy. Mabel's eye wandered over the grand panorama of hill, and dale, and brake, and coppice, stretching out in all their green loveliness before her; and as the massive towers of Windsor Castle rose over the rich expanse, her heart was so full, and yet so light, that she felt as if she could raise her voice and sing as merrily as the birds among the branches.

She would not, however, have so much enjoyed her ride, if she had known who was pressing in hot haste after her. Father Francis, very much discomfitted by the ill success of his attempt, and not being altogether easy about the consequences, had watched the maiden more closely than she was aware of, and on her setting out for Windsor,—he had ascertained her destination through a groom, determined, although he hardly knew for what purpose, to follow the fugitive. Suddenly recollecting, therefore, some ecclesiastical business to be settled with the prior of a monastery near Datchet, the priest provided himself with a pacing mule,—an animal generally used by the churchmen of the period, and the better breeds of which were little inferior in powers of speed and endurance to the horse—and was speedily ambling briskly along the great western road. He saw the fair country around as though he saw it not, and only looked eagerly ahead at every turn of the road, expecting momently to behold the fair fugitive. But he was disappointed:—Mabel's palfrey carried her well, and when she drew rein at one of the postern gates of the Castle, the priest was still a good mile behind.

A yeoman of the guard was standing sentinel at the little nail-studded wicket, leaning upon his partisan, and whistling melodiously, To him she address d herself:

'You have a comrade named Mark Huntley,' she said; 'fair sir I would speak with him.'

The soldier looked at her with some interest, stopped his whistling, and said hastily: 'Are you Mabel Lorne, fair mistress?'

'That is my name,' said Mabel blushingly.

'Then, by St. George, I am to sorry for thee,' returned he of the partisan. 'Mark Huntley was a good fellow and a true—and—'

'Was!' shrieked Mabel—'was! He is not dead?'

'Almost as good,' replied the sentinel; 'his captain has accused him of sleeping on his watch, and that, thou knowest, is death —death without redemption.'

Mabel sank upon the ground. The burly yeoman cursed his own bluntness in blurting out at once the bad news. 'But shall soon have another mate,' he muttered, as he stooped over and endeavored to revive her; 'by my sword shit she is fair enough for the bride of a belted earl, let alone a poor yeoman.'

'Bring me to him—bring me to him for pity's sake,' faltered Mabel.

'Nay, that may hardly be, pretty one,' said the soldier. 'He is under watch and ward; and by St. George, I think it be near the time when he will be brought before the king.'

'Let me at least see him,' exclaimed Mabel; 'perchance soldier, there is some modern who loves thee as I do him, and who will one day plead on her bended knees for one last look at the man for whom her heart is breaking!'

'I will see what can be done,' said the honest yeoman.

He was as good as his word—for summoning some of his comrades, with whom Mark Huntley had been a general favorite, he spoke apart to them; a few minutes Mabel found herself smuggled, in a lofty arched hall, with deep gothic arched windows, and furnished with ponderous oaken settles. Her friends (the yeomen kept her in the midst of their group, enjoining upon her the necessity of preserving a perfect silence. Hardly had she looked around her, and noted a large unoccupied chair covered with crimson cloth, upon the dais at the upper end of the hall; when a priest closely cowled, glided in, and took his station in a corner of the place. She saw not his face, but she felt that the priest was Father Francis. All at once the groups of officers and knights, who was sauntering, gossiping, and laughing through the hall, became silent, and placed themselves around the unoccupied chair—there was a moment's pause, and a portly man with broad, stern face decorated with a peaked beard, walked into the hall. His doublet was richly adorned, and at his belt he carried a short poniard.

This was King Henry VIII.

Throwing himself carelessly into the chair prepared for him, he said in a deep, stern voice: 'Bring forth the prisoner, and let his accuser likewise appear.'

There was a short bustle—a heavy door creaked upon its hinges, and Mabel's heart swelled within her, and her limbs trembled, as she saw Mark Huntley bound, led before the king. But a second look partly reassured her. His cheek was pale, but there was in the firmness of his step, and the proud glance of his eye, the mighty strength of conscious innocence. Opposite to him stood Captain Wyckhamme—his eye bloodshot and his hand trembling; and many who carefully scanned the countenance of the two, turned to each other, and whispered that the accuser looked more guilty than the accused.

'Captain Wyckhamme,' said Henry, 'this man was found asleep upon his post?'

'I deeply grieve to say it, my liege,' answered Captain Wyckhamme, bowing low, 'but such is the fact. On going my rounds last night, shortly after midnight, I surprised him in a most sound sleep, and for this I vouch, so help me God!'

'Prisoner, what sayest thou to the charge?' demanded Henry.

'That it is a foul lie, and that he who makes it known it is a lie!' exclaimed Mark Huntley, with firmness.

'Hoy, varlet!' ejaculated the king; 'wouldst thou put thy word against the oath of a gentleman, and thine officer?'

'Yea,' said the prisoner, 'marry that would I—I say he speaks falsely, and I have proof.'

'Proof!' replied the king; 'God's my life —we will hear proof, but it must be strong to bear down the word of an approved loyal gentleman like Captain Wyckhamme. What is this proof of thine, sirrah?'

'This, so please your majesty,' said Mark Huntley, 'last night I kept the middle watch on the Eastern tower. The air was still and calm, except that now and then a gentle breath came from the direction of London. As I mused I thought I heard a low, faint, very faint, clang as of a bell. I listened, and heard it again and again—the light breeze bore it still fresher upon mine ear—it was the great bell of St. Paul's striking midnight—and as I am a true man, the clock rung thirteen chimes.'

A woman's scream, loud and thrilling rung through the hall, and Mabel bursting from the yeomen by whom she was surrounded sprung forward, and throwing herself at Henry's feet, shrieked rather than spoke.

'It is true—it is true—these hands did it —these hands rung the thirteenth chime. He is innocent—justice, my liege, I demand justice.'

'God's life, sweetheart, this is a strange matter,' replied Henry; 'but rise, thou shalt have justice—thy king promises it.'

'It was a plot—a base plot for his death and my dishonor,' exclaimed Mabel; 'but God hath overthrown it. Look at his accuser, sire—look, he changes color, he trembles—he is the guilty one, not Mark.'

Henry rose and bent his keen eye upon Captain Wyckhamme. 'But how earnest thou to ring this thirteenth chime, woman? be naked.'

'I will tell thee,' said Mabel, eagerly.—'I was lured at midnight into the cathedral; violence was offered to me even at the shrine of the Virgin; I fled into the belfry, and caused the thirteenth chime to sound for the purpose of raising an alarm. I did it to save myself—be it hath saved my lover.'

'Who pursued thee thither?' asked the king.

'A priest,' replied Mabel, 'and he is here.'

Henry looked quickly around; his eye fell upon the sombre figure of the monk, and he exclaimed, 'let the priest stand forward.'

The robed figure advanced, and then remained motionless.

'Throw back thy cowl,' said the king.

The priest moved not, but an officious yeoman twitched it aside, and discovered the features of Father Francis.

'It is he!' exclaimed Mabel.

Henry looked from the churchman to his captain of the guards. The face of the former was of a deadly pallid hue, and his lips convulsively compressed, but he manifested no further emotion. It was different with Wyckhamme.—Physical courage he had plenty of, but of moral bravery he had none. The king looked fixedly at him—his limbs trembled—he caught hold of the oaken table for support, and gasped as if for breath. There was an awful pause.

'Mercy! mercy!' faltered Wyckhamme. 'I will confess.'

'Traitor and coward!' shouted Father Francis, 'we are lost.'

'Seize that priest,' said the king, with a voice like a trumpet.

Father Francis made a quick motion of one of his hands towards his face, and then dashing aside with a convulsive effort, the brawny arms laid upon him, he exclaimed;

'Away! I am beyond your reach.'

His pale lip curled into a smile of triumph —then his face became livid and changed —the change—the eye glazed, foam appeared at the mouth, and the monk, still wearing that grim smile of defiance and contempt, fell heavily forward on the floor.

When they raised Father Francis he was dead. The monk knew the secret of many strong poisons.

Then thy accusation was false,' said the king.

'Pardon, sire, it was; but the priest—the priest set me on—pardon,' faltered the wretched Wyckhamme, who had sunk in a quivering heap upon the ground.

'Take him away,' said Henry,—'to death! Huntly shall assume his rank; and now, he took Mabel's hand and placed it in that of her lover, 'my faithful sentinel, receive thy bride.'

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Blotches, pimples, dry eruptions, and all irritations of the skin, fade and disappear after a few applications of Holloway's Ointment. In these cases brisk friction is indispensable. Many of the ordinary eruptions are caused by suppressed perspiration, and as this penetrating unguent opens the pores and invigorates the absorbents, it dissipates the inflammation by a double process. Ladies whose faces or arms are disfigured by cutaneous diseases, may readily restore the blemish and restore to the skin its natural tint, flexibility, and softness, by the use of this safe but powerfull counterirritant. The Pills never fail in disorders of the stomach.

A COOL QUAKER.—A Quakeress, jealous of her husband, watched his movements, and actually one morning discovered the truant kissing and hugging the servant girl. Broadbrim was not long in discovering the face of his wife, as she peeped through the half-opened door, and rising with all the coolness of a general, thus addressed her: "Betsey, thee had better quit peeping, or else thee will cause a disturbance in the family.'

"What!" exclaimed the accomplished and fashionable Fitzwiggle, to an exquisitely lovely Miss De La Sparrowgrass, "What would you be dearest if I should press the stamp of love upon your scarlet-new lips? "I," responded the fairy-like creature, should be stationary."

The Collins's Line.

The 'Atlantic' did not sail on Saturday in consequence of the discovery of a crack in the 'crostail' to her machinery.

Postmaster Fowler telegraphed to Washington for authority to send the mails by the 'Vanderbilt,' but the Postmaster General declined to interfere, saying that the responsibility of the failure to transmit the mails, must rest upon the Collins line and the Navy Department. The mails were consequently left behind and taken back to the Post Office. In view of the present disturbed condition of commercial affairs the failure of the European mail is a circumstance to be deplored.

The 'Vanderbilt' sailed with nearly 600 passengers.

The N. Y. 'Times' devotes some observations to the present condition of the competitors for the Atlantic passenger and goods trade.

It is very evident that a complete revolution is in progress in our system of Ocean Steam Navigation. The 'Atlantic' was going out with twenty passengers.—Commodore Vanderbilt is rapidly effecting his purpose of breaking down the monopoly which the mail contracts have given the other lines. His first blows are aimed at the Collins line,—as he always sails on the same day with its best steamers. He carries letters, not upon contract, but receiving as compensation the postage paid. He has reduced the price of a passage very largely, and has made the quickest trips ever effected. The result is a very serious curtailment of the patronage of the Collins line; and unless their ships also reduce the price of passage it must inevitably be broken down. The Cunarders from this port do better because they sail on different days, and enjoy better reputation. But the Cunard line from Boston has been compelled to reduce its rates by the competition of the line of screw steamers from Quebec, which is making very rapid passages, and at low prices. The result is that nearly all the Canadian passronage, which used to be a very large item in the business of the Cunard line from Boston, now takes the other route, and the Cunarders have accordingly very wisely reduced their rates from thirty guineas to twenty-one-pounds,—a difference of nearly 50 dollars.

The Results of the Panic

A summary of the failures and suspensions in the United States country, since the 1st of August, makes the whole number 952, of which 448 were in New York, 85 in Pennsylvania, 120 in Massachusetts, 40 in Ohio, 7 in Kentucky, 3 in Indiana, 2 in Washington City, 5 in Minnesota 44 in Illinois, 6 in Maryland, 21 in Iowa, 23 in Michigan, 18 in Missouri, 23in New Jersey, 8 in Rhode Island, 34 in Wisconsin, and 58 in other States. The total liabilities of all these are estimated at $90,000,000.

The extent to which the 'crisis' has affected the movement of produce towards tidewater may be ascertained by comparison:—The quantity of flour, wheat, corn, and barley, left at tide-water, during the third week in October, in the years 1856 and 1857, is as follows:—

	Flour, bbl	Wheat, bu	Corn, bu	Barley bu
'56	48,271	613,601	451,806	153,229
'57	50,713	206,516	217,446	67,199
Inc.	1,977,	Dec406,635	Dec234,360	Dec85,223

The aggregate quantity of the same articles left at tide-water from the commencement of navigation to the 22nd of October, inclusive, during the years 1856 and 1857, is as follows:—

	Flour bbl.	Wheat bu.	Corn bu.	Barley bu.
'56	741,176	7,802,717	8,800,218	1,161,898

Dec.	226,896	4,918,197	3,803,209	392,123

Reducing the wheat to flour, the deficiency is equal to 1,210,535, bris of flour.

The following table shows the quantity of some of the principal articles of produce left at tide water from the commencement of navigation to the 22nd of October, inclusive, during years 1855, 1856 and 1857:—

The falling off in the leading articles of consumption is enormous, when we consider that, in production, 1857 has, undoubtedly, exceeded all former years.

Great Conflagration in Whitby.

LOSS, ABOUT FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS! SUPPOSED INCENDIARISM!!

We have received the following details, from the office of the Ontario Times, of a disastrous fire at Whitby. A fire at any time is a misfortune; but a great fire in these times is really a great calamity, and we sincerely sympathize with the inhabitants of this thriving town in their losses:—Colonist.

Ontario Times Office,
Saturday, Oct. 31

One of the largest fires that has as yet occurred in Whitby broke out this morning, about two o'clock, in rear of the store occupied by Messrs McPherson and Searle.

The principal losers are Messrs. J. S. Donaldson & Co., and W. S. Robinson.

The following will also lose more or less, viz: Messrs. Lowes & Powell, McPherson & Searlo. R. E. Perry, James Hodgson, W. Irons, W. H. Billings, George Yule, the Assignees of R. H. Lawder and of T. Beall, J. Arnall, and H. Adams.

The fire engine did good service; to the judicious use of it may be attributed the saving of Mr. J. H. Perry's block on the east, and Mr. Dryan's Hotel, and the adjoining buildings on the north.

On account of the block in which the fire originated being entirely wooden, it was only by the most active exertions of the Fire Company and citizens that the fire was prevented from extending to the adjoining blocks on the north, east, and west.

The following, so far as we learn, are the details of the losses and insurance:—

The office of the Montreal Telegraph Company is destroyed. Most of the instruments, however, are saved. The books and papers of all the losers were saved with the exception of those of W. H. Billings, Esq:

	Loss.	Insur.
Donaldson & Co.	$12,000	$4,000
McPherson & Searle,	10,000	covered.
James Hodgson, Esq.,	3,000	2,400
W. S. Robinson	2,000	no insurance
R. E. Perry,	1,200	covered
George Yule,	500	no insurance
C. Lynde,	800	not insured
R. H. Lawder,	2,000	fully insured
J. Arnall,	1,200	1,000
W. Irons,	1,000	covered
Lowes & Powell,	insured to full amount

Great Fire in Port Stanley.

About 9 o'clock on Sunday night the propellor Free Trader came into Port Stanley, and about five o'clock on Monday morning she was observed to be on fire. There were no fire engines at the Port, consequently the flames could not be stopped. The propellor was owned by Messrs. Hooker, Pridham & Co., and insured in the British American Company. The schooner Isaac Buchanan was lying alongside of the burning vessel, and before she could be removed was involved in flames. She was owned by Hope; insured for £1,500 in two American Companies.

The large Davison's warehouse and contents destroyed. Insured for £500, Phœnix, England.

William's storehouse and contents. Fully insured in British America Co.

Mr. Batt's premises were destroyed on the opposite side of the street, and Mr. Pegg's the opposite side lane. Insured for £200, loss about £1000. Batt was insured for £400 in the Times and Beacon Company, loss £1000.

Total loss £15,000.

Upon the news reaching St. Thomas, several of the inhabitants turned out with the fire engine, and proceeded by railway to the scene of the conflagration. On arriving there it was seen that the only assistance that could be rendered was in saving the wheat which was burning on the wharf in the ruins of the warehouses. The engine was kept constantly at work until evening, the fire in the wheat was then entirely subdued. Messrs. Routh & Davison behaved in a most gentlemanly manner to those who came to their assistance from St. Thomas. They provided plenty of refreshments for all those engaged in working the engine and showed that they were capable of preparing good deeds. Fortunately two or three large warehouses are left undestroyed, so that shippers have yet plenty of warehouse room for their goods. About 160 yards of the Government Docks were destroyed. The charred remains of the burnt vessels lie in the water and will be an impediment to other ships until they are removed.

The Indictments against Moses R. Cummings and J. T Kerby

The indictment against Mr. Joseph T. Kerby, arising out of the recent robbery of the Bank of Upper Canada, was for receiving certain sums of money which he was aware had been stolen. As will be seen by our assize report, it has been ignored by the Grand Jury.

The following is a copy of the indictment which the Grand Jury have found against Cummings:—"County of York, one of the United Counties of York and Peel, to-wit: The Jurors of our Lady the Queen, upon their oath, present, that Moses R. Cummings, on the eleventh day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, at the City of Toronto, in the said County of York, one of the United Counties of York and Peel, being a clerk, then employed in that capacity for the Bank of Upper Canada, did, then and there, in virtue thereof, receive a certain sum of money, to wit: the amount of fifteen hundred and thirty-nine pounds and fifteen shillings for and on account of the said Bank of Upper Canada, and the said money did feloniously embezzle. And the jurors afore said, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said Moses R. Cummings, on the said eleventh day of March, in the year aforesaid, at the City of Toronto aforesaid, in the County aforesaid, being a clerk, then employed in that capacity by the Bank of Upper Canada, did, then and there, in virtue thereof, receive a certain valuable security, to-wit: for the payment of the sum of fourteen hundred and thirty-nine pounds and fifteen shillings, for and on account of the said Bank of Upper Canada, and the said valuable security feloniously did embezzle."

The case is expected to be tried about Monday or Tuesday next. No day has been absolutely fixed. The witnesses for the prosecution, as appears from the endorsement on the indictment, are Thomas Hodgert, George Charles Reiffelnstein, Jas. Brown, Joseph Curran Morrison and Edward Hilliard-smith. It is understood that Dr. Connor, Q. C., and Mr. Read have been retained for the defence. Whether the arrest of McGaffey under the circumstances detailed in another paragraph will make any difference in the mode of procedure against Cummings, we have not yet learned. It is possible the evidence of McGaffey may change the aspect of the case—whether favourably or otherwise for Cummings remains to be seen.—Colonist.

Society appears to be in a state of disorganization in the city of Baltimore, U. S. The doings of the "Plug Uglies," and other gangs of rowdies, have inspired peaceable citizens with unspeakable terror—so much so that the Governor of the state (Maryland) has placed the city under Martial law, in hopes of restoring order. He has, besides, ordered the enrolment and equipment of a large force to preserve the peace. The Mayor of Baltimore has taken umbrage at this action on the part of the Governor, and a very tart correspondence has passed between them. The Mayor thinks his dignity is damaged, and the Governor retorts with the charge of "false independence." A portion of the citizens sympathise with the Mayor, and several of the military officers resigned their commissions rather than serve against the rowdies. As there is no organized militia in Maryland, except one battalion in Baltimore, the Governor has considered to equip a force sufficient for the occasion.

In 1507 he was consecrated Priest and was also made a professor of philosophy. In this sphere of action, his powerful mind soon showed itself. He threw off the fetters of the scholastic philosophy, so intimately connected with the papal hierarchy, and asserted the right of reason in religion. His profound learning, together with the fame of his eloquence, soon made Luther known and esteemed as a powerful advocate of the New Light that was breaking upon the world. Great therefore was the attention excited by his 95 propositions given to the world in 1517 and intended to put an end to the sale of indulgences by the Dominican Fetzel. In 1520 Luther and his friends were excommunicated, and his writings burnt at Rome, and indignant at this open act of hostility, he burned the bull of Excommunication, and the decretals of the papal canon, of Wittenberg. By this act he dissolved all connections with the Pope and Roman Church. He was hailed in Germany by the Nobles as the Champion of religious liberty.—The rapidity with which the reformation advanced after the confession of Augsburg, rendered the papal bulls, and the Imperial edicts against him quite inefficient, and he continued by moderation and firmness to extend it till his death.

SANDWICH, NOVEMBER 5, 1857.

RESIGNATION OF SIR ALLAN MACNAB.

The retirement of Sir Allan Macnab, from the stage of public life, cannot but be regarded by all conservatives with feelings of regret. As a politician and a true conservative, we will not easily find another, who will fill the position of leader to the party, with more honor to himself and credit to the party with whom he acted, and was the leader; his many acts, while in power show that his conservatism was of the purest kind —as an instance we may name the settlement of the Clergy Reserve question, which brought about through his instrumentality.

In this matter, finding that the people were determined, to have a settlement of this long vexed question, gracefully yielded to the public will, showing a liberality which the strongest advocates of the measure, would hardly give him credit for.

The following we take from the Spectator:—

Sir Allan's zeal and efficiency as a Militia officer during the troubles of 1837-8 are fresh in the memories of all. He did not wait for the insurrection to reach Hamilton, but went with the "Men of Gore" first to Toronto, afterwards to the West, and then to the Frontier during the time he commanded the Militia. His time and means were liberally given in defence of his country; the speedy termination of the troubles in Upper Canada were due to his activity and zeal. His services were duly appreciated, not only in his native country, but by Her Majesty's Government. In addition to the thanks of Her Majesty, of Lord Seaton, the two Parliaments of Canada (he being speaker of the Lower House) and also received the thanks of the Legislature of the Sister Provinces.

Sir Allan MacNab, though always consistent, proved himself to be more liberal than many of his opponents have been inclined to give him credit for. It is known to all our readers how ably he battled for the retention of the Clergy Reserves; yet, finding that the country was averse to the continuance of the Reserves he gracefully yielded to the wishes of the people, and finally effected a settlement of the vexed question, after the bonated champions of its abolition had failed to carry out their oft renewed pledge. He has been in the House of Assembly for nine successive Parliaments, and was never absent from his place for a week except during the last two sessions, when illness confined him to his house. But now, when he finds himself unable to discharge his duties as heretofore, contrary to the generally expressed wishes of his old friends, he has resigned the trust reposed in him by the electors of this city. Having been born and brought up in Canada, and entering public life while it was a very young man, he has been identified with every public improvement for the last forty years. He became Prime Minister in 1854, and during his administration, the Clergy Reserve question was set at rest; the Reciprocity Act was passed; the Seigneurial Tenure difficulties were adjusted; and the Militia Act was, we believe, Sir Allan's last measure, the admirable results of which are now generally admitted. Sir Allan was knighted in 1838, and was created a Baronet on his retirement from the office of Premier in 1856. Had he exerted himself as zealously for his own interest as he has for those of the public, there is no doubt that Sir Allan would have been one of the wealthiest men in the Province. As we have already said, he carries with him into his retirement the hearty good will and esteem of his many friends; and while they cannot but regret to lose him as their representative in Parliament, they feel that he has taken the only course which a sense of duty to his constituents as well as to himself, seemed to point out. Their only consolation is in the hope of finding a competent successor to Sir Allan, to fill the void his retirement has caused.

TO THE FREE AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF HAMILTON.

GENTLEMEN—I deeply regret that the state of my health is such, that I am unable longer to discharge my duty in Parliament with justice to you and satisfaction to myself. I, therefore feel, that the time has arrived for me to relinquish a position that it has been the pride of my life to enjoy. I would have taken this step at the close of the last Session, had I not believed there would have been a general election, and I was unwilling to give you the trouble and annoyance of a second contest; however, from the best information I can obtain, I am inclined to the belief that there will not be a dissolution of Parliament. I have, therefore, transmitted my resignation to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, that you may have ample time to select a member in my place.

Most sincerely do I thank you, gentlemen, for the kind and cordial support you have accorded me during nine successive Parliaments, in which I have had the honor of representing either the county or city.

The best portion of my life has been spent among you, and I can truly say, with truth, that during this long period my best energies have been devoted to the interest of my constituents, and the honor of my country.

One word more before we part, and that is—if, in times of trial and great excitement, I have erred, I trust you will kindly ascribe it to an error of the head, and not the heart.

Believe me,
Gentlemen,
I shall ever remain,
Your greatly obliged
And very faithful friend,
ALLAN NAPIER MACNAB.

DUNDURN, Oct. 24, 1857.

We have often read of diabolical attempts having been made upon the lives of persons in other parts of the country, through the means of poison, and have often wondered how any same man, having his reason and his faculties about him, could entertain so hellish a design upon his fellow beings.—But little did we suppose that there existed in our own peaceful community, such fiends in the shape of men, who are no doubt at this moment infesting this neighborhood with their brutish presence. Yet such is the case; and by the greatest chance was one of our most respectable farmers and his whole family saved from becoming victims to their hellish designs.

Mr. James Mahoney, living in the Township of Sandwich, and possessing a large and well improved farm, in the neighborhood of what is known as the Negro Institute, discovered, on the 17th of October last, that a number of his cattle had been poisoned, from the effects of which four have since died. Upon examining the pasture in which the cattle had been grazing, a quantity of poisoned salt was found.—This no doubt had been laid there by them, and was the cause of their being poisoned. It was afterwards discovered that a quantity of Arsenic had been thrown into Mr. Mahoney's well, where he and his family are in the habit of getting water from. The circumstance of his cattle having been poisoned, made him cautious; and through that means, he found a small quantity that had been dropped on the side of the well, when no doubt the fiend was in the act of throwing it in. This fortunately was discovered before any number of the family had used the poisoned water. Not content with trying to poison them, they must needs try and burn them out; for, during the night of the eighteenth, a stilled cough was heard in the neighborhood of the house, and upon Mr. Mahoney running out, he heard footsteps going from him, but was unable to detect the parties. He afterwards discovered a bundle of shavings under one corner of the building, and matches which, but for his timely interference, would without doubt have been used in attempting to burn down the premises.

Mr. Mahoney has been obliged to leave his splendid farm and comfortable home; for he considered it dangerous to expose the lives of his family there any longer.

The guilty parties are not known; though Mr. Mahoney has strong reasons for suspecting a man whom he believes to be the person, and as he has taken means for endeavoring to bring it home to him, we will refrain at present from publishing his name, as the ends of justice might thereby be defeated.

We certainly hope that the neighbors will, without further delay, raise by subscription—say $200—to offer as a reward for the conviction of so black a scoundrel as must be the one who could be guilty of the above. The whole community should take the matter up, and strive to rid the country of such characters.

THE MILITARY RESERVE IN AMHERSTBURG AGAIN.

It will be remembered that a short time since an article appeared in the Maple Leaf, in relation to Major Donaldson's conduct in connection with the Military Reserve at Fort Malden. We will repeat a few of the facts connected with the case, in order that the matter may be more easily understood.—

During the month of August, (if we mistake not,) a Cricket Club was formed in Amherstburg; and as the custom was in former years, the Cricketers went out upon their old ground, the military reserve, for practice. This, the Major positively forbid, as he intended to plant murphies thereon, and as cricketers and murphies could not very well vegetate together, he thought it advisable to get rid of the former, and hold fast to the latter; and as he was Commander of Fort Malden, he thought he had a perfect right to do so. With this bright idea of the Major's, certain of the aforesaid cricketers, and the citizens of Amherstburg generally, did not altogether agree, and we, in our humble opinion, think them perfectly right in not approving of the Major's arbitrary and interested motives in the premises.—Thereupon the Municipal Council of Amherstburg, believing that the citizens have the perfect right to use the common and that the Major had no right to fence it in; determined on having the matter tried by a court of law; the townspeople having had the benefit thereof from time immemorial. Therefore on Tuesday last the Council of Path-Master in right good earnest, and could no doubt have driven him from the ground, without his having fulfilled the orders of the Council, but for the timely arrival of the Townspeople who saw their path master assaulted. When they arrived at the ground a regular fight took place, when clubs, stones, &c, flew, fast and thick as hail stones; we regret to learn that three or four persons were severely hurt, although none seriously. The Pensioners were eventually driven from the ground, and every panel of fence inclosing the reserve was prostrated level with the ground by the enraged townspeople.

A great deal might be said in relation to this matter, as to the culpabil ty of the parties who originated and took part in an affair that has terminated so seriously and which might have resulted in the most unfortunate consequences. There could be no doubt however that if Major Donaldson had not made himself so officious in wrongfully refusing the townspeople the use of the reserve there would have nothing happened, and, this riot would have been avoided.

SAD ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn of an accident that happened near Maidstone Cross, and which resulted in the death of Mr. Daniel Brown. It appears that while he was ditching, the limb of a dead tree fell upon and so severely injured him, that he must have died immediately, as he was found by his wife dead, although she had seen him only fifteen or twenty minutes previously alive and at work.

Dr. Casgrain, Coroner, held an inquest, and a verdict was rendered in accordance with the above facts.

DIED—Very suddenly, of apoplexy, at Sandwich, early yesterday morning, Mrs. Reeves, aged 46 years. An inquest was held by Dr. Casgrain, Coroner, when a verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts of the case.

☞ The County Council met on Tuesday last, for the purpose of receiving the returns from the Municipalities, upon the £30,000 By-Law. The Majority of them having voted against it, there was of course no action taken thereon. A report of the proceedings will be given in full next week.

The Woodstock Times says:—"We learn with much pleasure, that there is every certainty of the Brantford and Goderich Railway being completed to the latter place by the 1st January next. By this means on the opening of navigation a large business may be expected on that line of Railway.

☞ The prospectus of the Freemason's Magazine, to be published at Merrickville, C. W., has been received. This journal is to be devoted wholly to the advancement of the cause of Freemasonry in Canada, and will advocate an union of the different Grand Lodges, now working separately in the Province; and as it says, "Considering that where the identification of interest is so palpable, all dissonance of sentiment should be ignored, and the truly Masonic virtue of Unity characterize the proceedings of the whole.

With these views, and a strong determination to carry them out, we have no doubt, but that, a great deal may be accomplished in the way of an amalgamation.

The price is only two dollars a year, and as a list has been furnished us, we will be happy to receive subscribers.

The two California gentlemen reported to have brought papers, by the Star of the West, to identify McHenry are impostors.—their names do not appear on the books of that steam vessel for that trip. This confirms our opinion.—Woodstock Sentinel.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN AMHERSTBURG.

The Redoubt (or rather Chevaux de Frise) of the Malden Fort, completely prostrated!

CATTLE FOR MILITARY PURPOSES, SCATTERED

GALLANT BEHAVIOR OF THE BESIEGERS!!

Incomparable conduct of the Troops—headed by their well-known leader, the Commandant!

AMHERSTBURG, Nov. 3, 1857.

That beautiful piece of ground, lying adjacent to the old Malden Fort, having been a bone of contention to the rebellious inhabitants of the city of the Southern Rail Road and Her Majesty's troops stationed there—

The City Fathers, at the desire of the Electors, proceeded on Monday evening to cancel measures for storming the same. On Tuesday morning, a promiscuous group, of some four or five hundred, composed of English, Irish, Scotch, French, and Darkies, dashed to the attack, led by their distinguished Reeve—determination visible in their countenances. On arriving at the ground, the work of destruction was instantly commenced. They met a gallant resistance from the Major, and the troops under his command, who was visibly seen urging on his men, determined on having his cloth respected; his sword jingling from side to side, was flying from place to place, and in fact few bones of the enemy were smashing to and fro. Their wives seeing them hard pressed, came to their assistance, and did their work bravely. A number of the besiegers were soon made to kiss their mother earth, by the heel-tap so adroitly used by the soldiers' wives, and parted great havock among them; but a reinforcement of the citizens arriving, they succeeded in their dashing exploit; the troops retiring in a soldier-like manner.

The casualties were small, considering the number of men engaged and the fierceness of the battle.

THOMAS SALMONI was twice knocked down; a Frenchman had his head opened, and a few others had wounds of minor importance.

The Reeve has gained great popularity by his conduct throughout. The plan of attack and consummation are all attributed to his mighty genius, and has raised him to a high and enviable position among his constituents.

The Major telegraphed to Head Quarters for orders, and transmitted an account of the action to the War Department. It is expected he will be rewarded with the Crimean medal, and some of his brave fellows promoted.

TUESDAY EVENING.

The excitement still continues. Your correspondent found Salmoni's bar room crowded with a number of the dispatched, breathing vengeance, and anxiously waiting for their Reeve to return from Sandwich, where he is attending to his Council duties.

Yours truly,
KNOCKHIMSTIFF.

CAUTION TO LADIES.—A lady residing in the village of Stamford, Conn., was very severely burned on Friday evening last in the following manner: She had been applying to her hair a mixture of castor oil and alcohol, and approaching too near a lighted lamp, her head became enveloped in a blaze, and the flame was not extinguished until the lady was so severely burned that she is now considered to be in a critical position.

The travel on the Great Western Railway for the week ending October 22nd last year realized a sum of $71,403, while for the corresponding week of the present year the returns were but $47,723, a difference of nearly $24,000.

The British Government has offered a reward of £200 for the substantial information respecting the Waterloo Bridge murder; also, £100 will be paid for information respecting the person who placed the carpet bag on the bridge and a free pardon is offered to accomplices not principals.

NEW YORK MONEY MARKET.—The market continues without improvement. There is a want of confidence, a confidence, but great symptoms of exhaustion. The liquidation of accounts is going steadily on, but there is more definite postponement than liquidation, and consequently few renewals of credits. This continued contraction of the banks—even though they show such large balances of specie—is fatal means—is the festering sore. The increase in deposits shows that there is more money than is used, owing to an excess of fear. Distrust still rules the community, and money is thus prevented from running freely into the various channels of circulation. The money thus withheld from circulation is useless to the community. The various attempts at remedy have been found almost futile. The country banks are almost afraid of their own currency, lest the city banks should suddenly resume specie payments, and send in the country currency for redemption. This mutual distrust prevails to an extent that retards the return of a healthy condition of things. The banks contracted last week $1,100,000, although their deposits ran up over $5,000,000, and their specie over $2,500,000. This condition of things can not last. What was the use of the banks enlarging their capital this year as so many did, but to employ it? The bank exchanges show a further diminution for the week of $3,250,000. The custom duties are very trifling. The Sub Treasury disbursements continue greater than its receipts.

THE U. S. RAILWAYS.—The N. Y. Herald states that several of the largest railroad companies are rapidly approaching the end of their tether. Some of them have been forced into an assignment, others are under protest, struggling to keep their heads a little longer above water, and the rest are yet comparatively comfortable. The Germans are likely to get possession of the Erie road, and the English are in fact the owners of most of the Western roads. The sooner they put their own managers into the possession and control of their own property the better for the roads, the owners, the people and the country.

Seventeen persons are now confined for debt it the jail of London, C. W.

Volunteers for India

The Adjutant-General of Militia has received the following communication relative to the offer made by some of the Militia Companies to go to India.

GOVERNOR SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
Toronto, 21st October, 1857

SIR,—I am directed by His Excellency, the Administrator of the Government, to inform you that he has received a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies acknowledging the letters in which you forwarded offers from Lieut Colonel Jackson, Major J. Bailey Turner, Major Gamache, Major Stoughton Dennis, Major Smyth, Capt. Ibbitson, and the men under their command of the Volunteer Force, to proceed to India or for active duty in Canada.

The several offers have been laid before Her Majesty, who has been pleased to express the high gratification which it has afforded her to receive these additional proofs of the loyal and patriotic feelings which animate the inhabitants of Canada.

Reasons may exist which at present would make Her Majesty's Government hesitate before entertaining proposals which would involve the withdrawal of any portion of the Militia of the Province, but whatever decision may be ultimately arrived at as to the expediency of accepting the services thus freely and voluntarily proffered for foreign service, I am charged to request that you will carry to these gentlemen the strongest assurance of Her Majesty's appreciation of their zeal and loyalty, and sympathy with the other portions of her empire.

I have the honor, &c.,
R. T. PENNEFATHER,
Governor's Secretary
The Adjutant-General of Militia.

Arrival of the Mails in England—Confirmation of the good news—the Rebel Cass declining.

The Indian mails reached London on the 15th of October.

The details of the news add no new facts of importance to those previously telegraphed.

Accounts all concur, on the whole, in pronouncing the prospects of the Europeans more cheering than for some time past.

The London Globe does not believe that any misunderstanding existed between Sir Colin Campbell and the members of the Council in India

It is stated that General Havelock will not be deprived of the duty of relieving Lucknow, even when he is joined by General Outram and his forces. General Outram having determined to accompany the expedition in his political capacity only.

Letters from India confidently predict that the next mail will bring news of the capture of Delhi.

The mutineers of that place are represented as nearly worn out, and cartsful of people were being sent away from the city.

The Cawnpore Massacre

Of the appalling massacre at Cawnpore we have received further and fuller accounts in the statements of Lieutenant Delafosse of the 53rd, one of the two officers who escaped by swimming out of the boat that was brought on shore and captured after the others had been sunk; of an ayah in the employ of a Mrs. Greenway, one of the sufferers; and of Myoor Tewaree, a faithful sepoy of the 1st Native Infantry, who suffered for his fidelity by imprisonment. According to the account given by the latter General Wheeler was not dead when the party surrendered to Nena Sahib, but was alive, though wounded, and was in the boat which was captured. The party thus taken consisted, he says, of 50 sahibs, 25 mem sahibs, and four children. The sahibs were all shot by order of the Nena. The poor women threw their arms around their husbands and begged to be allowed to die with them, but the sepoys, by the Nena's command, dragged them away. The chaplain asked for time to read a prayer aloud, and the request was granted. Then the word was given, and the two companies of sepoys, drawn up for the purpose, fired. Only sahib rolled one way and one another, but they were not dead, only wounded; so they went on and finished them with swords The women and children, together with a number more, who had either been taken out of this party or other boats, or who had never been permitted to embark with the men, were then to the number in all of 122, imprisoned in what had been the civil hospital, when the deponent himself, then in custody, by order of the Nena, as (what he really was) a spy and friend of the English, had the opportunity of seeing and speaking to them. Of the fate that befel them we have the miserable account given by himself before. and to abandon Cawnpore to his victorious enemy, Havelock, he merely tells us what we knew before—that all were ruthlessly slaughtered. But in answer to the question "Were the women dishonored?" he replies in the negative, with the exception of one young lady whom he distinctly specifies, and of whom both he and the ayah assert that previous to her death she revenged herself by destroying the ruffian who had outraged her, or who perhaps had only destined her for outrage.

THIS SOCIETY has been organized upon principles different from, and superior to most societies of a kindred nature.

The Law regulating the disposal of funds are as follows, viz.

Real Estate situate within the County of Essex will be required for security on monies advanced.

The Society shall close at the expiration of eight years, when the accumulated funds will be proportionately divided among members, which division it is estimated will amount to $200 per share.

Sums of $200 each will be disposed of monthly, by competition to members only, at an upset price of 6 per cent. with the privilege of repaying by monthly instalments till the expiration of the society or within a lesser period if desired.

FOR EXAMPLE:

A sum of $200, is loaned for eight years at 6 per cent per annum.

Amount of share	$200.
Six per cent interest for 8 years	96.
Total	$296

Which sum divided into 96 equal instalments makes the monthly payment $3.08.

For seven years at the same rate 3.38.

And for three years 5.55.

Members purchasing sums, still retain right of sharing in the profits at the cessation of the society, alike with other members by paying $1.00 per month extra, as instalment on each share.

The mode of disposition and repayment of the funds as above shown, secures the final closing and settlement of the society in a period of eight years.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates to the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. ASHY ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world, proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, It is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Song for Thinkers.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

Take the spade of Perseverance,
Dig the field of Progress wide;
Every rotten root of faction
Hurry out and cast aside;
Every subborn weed of error;
Seek the father to its self-exertion;
Tares whose very growth is terror,
Dig them out whate'er the toil.

Give the stream of Education
Broader channel, bolder force;
Hurl the stones of Persecution
Out where'er they block its course;
Seek the father to its self-exertion;
Work and still have faith to wait;
Close the crooked gate to fortune;
Make the road to honor straight!

Men are agents for the future;
As they work, so ages win
Either harvest or advancement,
Or the prefectes of their sin;
Follow out true cultivation;
Widen Education's plan;
From the Majesty of Nature
Teach the Majesty to man!

Take the spade of Perseverance,
Dig the field of Progress wide;
Every bar to true instruction
Carry out and cast aside;
Feed the plant whose fruit is wisdom,
Cleanse from Crime the common soil
So that from the Throne of Heaven
It may bear the glance at God.

Mirth and Wit.

A lucky chap at Washington, who has the prescription says: "A woman is the best maneuver after all. Take three pounds of petticoats four smiles, two tear drops with gumnion at discretion; stir briskly, and apply while warm to the blind side of a secretary and you have a never failing prescription for getting office.

An Irishman attending a Quaker meeting, heard a young friend make the following anouncement:—

"Brethren and sisters, I am going to marry a daughter of the Lord."

"The divil's sorra," said Pat. "Faith and be jabers, it'll be a long time before ye'll see yer farther-in law."

The lady who could read the following, and not pity the sorrow of a poor young man, deserves to live and die an old girl:

"I wish I was a turkey dove,
A-setting on your knee,
I'd kiss your smilin' lips, love,
To all e-ter-ni-tee."

Some nine years ago, a letter was received in New Orleans" addressed to the biggest fool in New Orleans." The postmaster was absent, and on his return, one of the young clerks informed him of the receipt of the letter. And what became of it?" inquired the postmaster. "Why," replied the clerk, he did not know who was the biggest fool in New Orleans, so I opened the letter myself." And what did find in it?" inquired the postmaster. "Why," replied the clerk, "nothing but the words, "thou art the man."

A young urchin hearing that his brother was very sick, asked his father the following question:—

"I say, dad, if Pete dies mayn't I have his boots?"

There is a young lady up town who says that if a cart-wheel has nine fellows, it is a pity that a woman can't have one. Sensible girl that—so we think.

"Have you Blasted Hopes?" asked a lady of a green librarian, whose face was much swollen by the toothache. "No ma'am; but I have a blasted toothache."

"Harry, did you ask Hicks for that money?"

"Yes."

"What did he say?"

"Nothing; he just kicked me into the road; that's all he said"

The keeper of a menagerie was lately seen beating one of the elephants with a large club. A bystander asked him the cause. "Why," said the keeper he's been flinging dust all about the tent, and he's big enough to know better."

"You say Mr. Jay, that you saw the plaintiff leave the house. Was it in haste?" "I'm not quite certain; but I think it was the boot of Mr. Sachs, the gentleman he boards with." "That will do, Mr Jay. Clerk call the next witness."

STRANGER TO A LITTLE BOY.—"Well, my little son, ain't you lost?"

The little boy stepping back and eyeing the stranger, said,—

"Look here, mister, don't be so familiar, if you please, I am not unprotected," laying his hand on a revolver; you must remember I am a gentleman."

"Say, Pomp, you nigger where you get dat new hat?"

"Why at de shop, ob course."

"What is the price of such an article as dat?"

"I don't know, nigger—I don't know, de shop keeper wasn't dar."

It appears that in New Zealand, when the marriage perem ny takes place, it is a very old custom to knock the bride and bridegroom together previous to their union:

In Christian lands, it isn't so, the bridegroom and the bride,
To loggerheads they seldom go until the knot is tied.

"Rem," said his mother to a roguish boy of four, actively engaged in buttering the cat's nose with the best of Goshen, "Rem will you stop that, or not?" "Or not," was the coolly echoed reply of Master Mischief, as he cocked his eye at the impending slipper, and took another dab on his inch and a half forefinger.

A bevy of little children were telling their father what they got at school. The eldest reading, spelling and definitions. "And what do you get my little one?" said the father to a rosy cheeked little fellow, who was at that time silly driving a tenpenny nail into the door panel. "Me?—oh! I gets readin, spelling and spankin's."

A little girl on hearing her mother say that she intended to go to a ball and have her dress trimmed with bugles, im ocently inquired if the bugles would blow when she danced. "Oh, no," said the mother; your father will do that when he discovers I have bought them."

Germination and saving of Seed Corn.

The cold and wet last spring has been such a time as always gives the vitality of the seed a severe trial. Although the past autumn was favorable for the thorough manuring of the seed, yet from carelessness in curing and keeping the seed, the vitality of much of it was injured and some of it did not germinate that might have done so under favorable circumstances. I am aware that this will be considered by many a theoritical assertion, but I believe it a true one. It is rare of corn rotting in the ground when the spring is warm and not too wet, and uncommon to hear of the cause full practical farmer's seed, that he has given his personal attention to, rotting in the ground although the season be unfavourable.

The writer for twenty-five years has seen but one instance, and that a small piece of ground that did not come up well, and this was replanted from seed saved from the same field, and at nearly the same time, that did come well. It was a favourable spring for corn, and the vitality of the seed was evidently destroyed by being frozen before thoroughly cured, being hung in an open outhouse. Freezing, sweating, and want of ventilation are the causes that injure, weaken, and partially or wholly destroy the germination of the seed. If the seed is injured, a close inspection of the chit by the experienced will detect the injury before planting. Should the injury be partial, a sample of the seed when shelled and evenly mixed, should be sprouted, which will determine whether the seed is worth planting or not.

Corn for seed should be saved early in the season. Select ears of medium size, plump and well filled—leave enough husks to the cob to braid a string that will make a peck of shelled corn. Let it be hung in an airy place until thoroughly cured. Should indications of an early freeze threaten to cover the seed longer for the time being, and then hang up again until cured. When cured, keep in an airy room until wanted to plant. Never save corn for seed that has been in a pile, in barn or field even twelve hours—it may have sweat. It is wisdom to have a few year's surplus stock of seed on hand, and when we have a sound crop, for even this year's crop may not ripen, and old seed is as good as new. I have sown for green fodder this year, seed of ten years old and upwards, and it looks well.—You have my experience; hear to and heed it, and I trust your corn will not fail to come for years.

Wolf Teeth in Horses.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman, says, in reference to wolf teeth in horses:

Why such teeth affect the eyes I know not; neither did I see any one who pretended to give any reason, though I have asked the most experienced and skilful dental surgeons. But that two small, sharp teeth, called in common parlance wolf teeth, frequently grow one each side of the upper jaw of the horse, just in front of the molars, is a fact known to all conversant with young horses; and that such teeth do injure the eyes I have no question. My father raised some blood horses, and I remember when quite a boy, seeing them knocking out these teeth from the colts. Although the eyes recovered soon after the teeth were out, I could see no reason for it and thought it an absurd custom. When old enough to take a more practical interest, I thought it must be the bleeding occasioned by extracting the teeth that was beneficial; but I soon found by practical experience, that bleeding would not cure the eyes while these teeth remained in. I have known, I should think, as many as thirty cases. I never knew them come in colts younger than two or more than six years old. Horses more frequently, though mares sometimes have them. I have noticed one eye of my young horses becoming sore, and found quite a large tooth on that side of the mouth, while the tooth on the other side would be but just making his appearance, and the eye on that side quite clear. I have known some cases where but one tooth ever came, but in some instances where one appears, the other will come shortly. I have had three cases among my own horses last spring, all of which recovered soon after the teeth were extracted. And I do not now recollect an instance where the teeth were extracted soon after the eyes became sore, that they did not recover. They are best extracted with forceps.

A Cure for Hydrophobia.

We have received from a gentleman at Berlin, the following important statement of the mode of cure practised in the Ukraine for the bite of a mad dog. It is translated from the Berlin State Gazette (No. 20) of the 14th Feb., 1822, and does certainly seem entitled to the fullest consideration of all medical men. That the knowledge of this remedy may be extensively known, and further put to the test by experience, we hope it will be copied into every journal throughout the country.

"When Mr. Marochetti, an operator in the hospital at Moscow, was in the Ukraine, in 1813, in one day fifteen persons applied to him for cure, having been bitten by a mad dog. While he was preparing the remedies, a deputation of seven old men made its appearance, to request him to allow a peasant to treat them—a man who for some years enjoyed a great reputation for his cures of hydrophobia, and of whose success Mr. Marochetti had already heard so much. He consented to their request, under these conditions: 1. That he, Mr. Mar. chetti, should be present at everything done by the peasant. 2. In order that he might be fully convinced that the dog was really mad, he, Mr. M., should select one of the patients, by whom should only be treated according to the medical course usually held in estimation. A girl of six years old was chosen for this purpose. The peasant gave to his fourteen patients a strong decoction of the "Samii" and Fl. Genista Lutea tincture (about a pound and a half daily), and examined twice a day under the tongue, where, as he stated, small knots, containing the poison of the madness must form themselves. As soon as these small knots actually appeared, and in which Mr. Marochetti himself saw, they were opened and cauterised with a red hot needle; after which the patient gargled with the decoction of the Genista. The result of this treatment was, that all the fourteen (of whom only two, the last bitten, did not show these knots) were dismissed perfectly cured at the end of six weeks, during which time they drank this decoction. But the little girl, who had been treated according to the usual methods, was seized with hydrophobic symptoms on the seventh day, and was dead in eight hours after they first took place. The persons dismissed as cured were seen three years afterwards by Mr. Marochetti, and they were all sound and well. Five years after this circumstance (in 1818), Mr. Marochetti had a new opportunity in Podolia, of confirming this important discovery. The treatment of twenty-six persons who had been bitten by a mad dog, was confided to him—nine were men, eleven women, and six children. He gave them at once a decoction of the Genista; and a diligent examination of their tongues gave the following result: Five men, all the women and three children had the small knots already mentioned—those bitten most on the third day; others on the fifth, seventh, and ninth; and one woman, who had been bitten only very superficially, on the twenty-first day. The other seven, who showed no small knots, drank the decoction Genista six weeks, and all the patients were cured.

"In consequence of these observations, Mr Marochetti believes that the hydrophobic poison, after remaining a short time in the wound, fixed itself for a certain time under the tongue, at the opening of the ducts of the submaxillary glands, which are at each side of the tongue string, and there forms the small knots, in which one may feel with a probe a fluctuating fluid, which is the hydrophobic poison. The usual time of their appearance seems to be between the third and ninth day after the bite; and if they are not opened after the first twenty-four hours after the formation, the poison is re-absorbed by the body, or into the blood, and the patient is not beyond the power of cure. For this reason, Mr. Marochetti recommends that such patients should be immediately examined under the tongue, which should be continued for six weeks, during which time they should take daily 1½ lbs. of the decoct. specified, for four times (the powder one drachm pro. dost.) If the knots do not appear in this time no madness is to be apprehended; but, as soon as they show themselves, they should be opened with a lancet, and then cauterised, and the patient should gargle assiduously with the above mentioned decoction."

We hastened to communicate to our readers this important discovery (which we borrow from the "Petersburg Miscellaneous Treatises in the Relms of Medical Science for 1821"), which certainly deserves the full attention of all medical practitioners, and which, if confirmed by experience, may have the most beneficial results.
